Senate Votes 12½ Billions For 33,000 Army Planes

Record Bill Goes To White House; Also Provides Guns, Bombs and Armor

By Robert DeVore
Post Staff Writer

The Senate late yesterday passed and sent to the White House a 12½-billion-dollar appropriation to give the Army a mighty armada of 33,000 airplanes.

In less than 30 minutes the chamber approved unanimously a measure that makes available to the War Department a total of $12,525,872,474 not only for purchase of airplanes but for bombs, aircraft armor and aerial guns.

The bill was the largest single Army appropriation in history, and contrasted with the speed in which the Senate completed legislative action on it were the hours the chamber devoted earlier in the day to consideration of the problem of free postage for soldiers.

But before dispatching the bill with record-smashing speed, the Senate heard Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, warn that by piling up a tremendous backlog of war appropriations that cannot be spent for many months, Congress is in danger of losing its greatest power—control over the Nation's purse string.

30 Million for Dam

The over-all total of the bill is $12,555,872,474, of which all but 30 million dollars for Douglas Dam and $800,000 for the State Department, was allotted for Army aviation. Funds for fighting were divided as follows:

For facilities for production of aircraft, bombs and guns—$33 million dollars.

For expansion of the Army Air Force to 23,000 combat and 10,000 training planes—$9,041,373,000.

For aerial ordnance—$1,547,-948,529.

Warns of Accounting Day

Observing that the Senate had little opportunity to study the bill with published House hearings running to only 63 pages and no printed Senate hearings available, LaFollette declared:

"The only power which Congress does not have to surrender is its control over the purse string. But that control will become an empty phrase if we build up a backlog of appropriations which can't be spent for many years."

Congress, he warned, may find itself in a position where it will be unable to account for "astronomical" war appropriations, he stated, and added:

"Congress cannot divest itself from an inevitable accounting which the people will demand at the end of this year."

Hurley Nominated As U. S. Minister To New Zealand

The nomination of Patrick J. Hurley, Secretary of War in the Hoover Administration, to be Minister to New Zealand, was submitted to the Senate yesterday by President Roosevelt.

It was assumed that Hurley already had reached his post, since the White House had announced that the nomination was being withheld until he was safe in New Zealand.

Hurley entered law prictice in Washington after leaving the Cabinet in 1933. He served in the World War in France and had been a reserve colonel. A few days ago, however, the President sent to the Senate for confirmation his promotion to be an active brigadier general in the Army.

About 1000 Americans In Hongkong Safe

All American nationals caught in Hongkong when that city was taken by the Japanese were reported by the State Department yesterday to be safe and well.

State Department officials said the information was received through British authorities at Lisbon.

At last count there were approximately 1000 American nationals in Hongkong, of which 400 were Occidentals.

IN WHICH THE COLONEL STARS—Movie Stars Edward Arnold (right) and Michele Morgan meet Col. W. W. Gordon, commander of Fort Myer, at the President's Birthday Horse Show

By Elizabeth Hennev
Post Staff Writer

Two thousand horse-lovers jammed the great riding hall of Fort Myer to the very rafters last night and more than got their money's worth in fine mounts, neat riding and heart-galloping spills.

And when they left the tanbark-floored stadium, the throng of socialites and diplomats, Congressmen and sportsmen and a ride-a-week saddle fans had the added satisfaction of knowing they had chipped in nicely to boost the funds needed for the Nation's fight against paralysis.

Nor was this all. A lot of the folks got a chance to get a fairly close-up look at their favorite screen stars, vanguard of the Hollywood contingent who will highlight the birthday balls tomorrow night.

There was Dorothy Lamour, sarongless, and Gene Autry, horseless, who had been at the horse show two years ago. Another familiar face was that of Edward Arnold, and most of the spectators got their first peek at Michele Morgan, former Paris actress now working in Hollywood.

It was not hard to recognize one other well-known film face there. Robert Montgomery, now a Navy lieutenant, participated in the proceedings merely as spectators, seated with friends in the box-seats, in the box-seats.

There was another "star" there last night, recognized only by the horse and hunt set, a rawboned slender 19-year-old youth, whose performance last night was unsensationally precise. He was John Ryan Devereux 3d, nephew of Maj. James P. S. Devereux, the hero of Wake Island.

Young Devereux's many friends knew that he had already enlisted in the Marines, to follow the steps of his uncle, perhaps avenge him. He has been riding a mount since the age of ten, and last night's was his last show for a long stretch. He will be inducted as a leatherneck February 9.

Midway through the long but sparkling program, the lights were

The Senate yesterday approved criminal penalty "teeth" for the priorities law and strengthened Government powers to take over property and requisition machinery for war use.

Without a record vote, the Senate sent to the House the "second war powers bill," embracing in one omnibus measure everything from free postage for soldiers to sweeping new authority to speed war production.

Just before final passage, the Senate voted to retain Hatch "clean politics" restrictions against members of State, national or local political committees serving the Government without compensation or at nominal pay as dollar-a-year men

Dies Sees West Coast Tragedy Worse Than Pearl Harbor

As early as last September the House Committee on Un-American Activities possessed and made available to the Administration "all the information" on the Japanese fifth column that laid the groundwork for the assault on Pearl Harbor, Chairman Dies (Democrat, of Texas, told the House yesterday.

"I now make this prediction, and do so deliberately," the legislator added, "that unless this Government adopts an alert attitude toward the whole question (of subversive groups and espionage) there will occur on the West Coast a tragedy which will make Pearl Harbor sink in significance compared with it."

Dies' statements were made to the House in opposition to the conference report on legislation tightening existing law requiring registration of foreign agents. Before the end of the day, both the Senate and House accepted the conference version of the bill and sent it to the White House.

When the House first approved the bill, it accepted amendments, proposed by Dies which would have specifically required registration by the Communist Party, the German-

By the United Press

Singapore, Jan. 28.—Japanese troops have pushed down the west coast of Malaya to a point less than 40 miles from Singapore, imperial headquarters announced tonight after civilians had been ordered evacuated from the north shore of the island in preparation for a siege.

Heavy fighting in the Rengit area south of Senggarang, 43 miles northwest of Singapore, was reported in a communique issued several hours later than usual.

Imperial troops battling the invaders on the central and eastern fronts appeared to be holding their own, since the communique said there had been no change in the Kluang Ayer Hitam and Jema Luang sectors.

Fighter planes went into action over Singapore tonight when Japanese raiders took advantage of the moonlight to make three thrusts at the island. Few casualties were reported.

The short raid was confined to the outskirts of the island. Furious aptiaircraft fire was heard, along with some bombing.

British bombers battering at Japanese strongholds and concentrations behind the battle lines attacked the airdrome at Kuantan on the east coast during the day. Considerable more of the British and Indian troops cut off in the Batu Pahat area on the west coast broke through the Japanese lines and rejoined the

Reds Warn Japs Of Hitler's Fate If They Attack

Moscow, Jan. 28 (INS).—Russia's first authoritative warning to Japan to refrain from opening a new front against the Soviet Union's far eastern territories was sounded tonight by the Communist newspaper Pravda.

Answering recent unfriendly rumblings in the Japanese press regarding Russia's adherence to the United Nations' pact, Pravda reminded the Nipponese that the advances of Hitler's armies into the western areas of the U. S. S. R. have been sharply reversed.

Hinting that a similar boomerang would result from any invasion of Siberia or any other Soviet far eastern territories, Pravda's editorial asserted:

"Let the Japanese newspapers learn from the experience of others. Let them not think that a successful beginning necessarily means a good ending."

Townsend, 'Missing Witness' in Probe, 5 Others Indicted

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Ralph Townsend, Scribner's Commenator writer and "missing witness" of the Axis propaganda investigation, was arrested in Lake Geneva, Wis., late yesterday, after he and five others were indicted here on charges of conspiring to conceal that they were Japanese agents.

"America Has No Enemies in Asia," was the title of one pamphlet Townsend was charged with writing for the Japanese.

The Japanese government paid more than $175,000, the grand jurors charged, for propaganda work by Townsend, two other Americans and three Japanese. Also named conspirators but not indicted were two former consuls general of Japan in San Francisco.

While the indictment was being presented to Justice T. Alan Goldsborough in the District Court, in another courtroom Justice F. Dickinson Letts was refusing a new trial to Representative Hamilton Fish's secretary, George Hill. Convicted January 15 of perjury before the special grand jury on Axis agents, Hill will be sentenced February 6. He faces 2 to 20 years in prison.

Those indicted yesterday were:

U. S. Fortresses Sink Transport, Blast Cruiser; Quiet at Bataan

Japanese losses in the great naval battle of Macassar Strait continued to mount yesterday with the disclosure that American Army bombers had sunk another large transport and scored a direct hit on a cruiser.

This raised the toll taken by United Nations planes and warships in the running battle between Borneo and Celebes in the Dutch East Indies to at least 36 ships. Of these at least 12 are considered definitely sunk and the remainder crippled.

(The British radio, heard in New York by C. B. S., said that as a result of the five-day attack on Japanese ships in Macassar Straits, 25,000 to 35,000 Japanese were believed to have drowned.)

News of the latest successes of the Army's potent four-engined bombers was announced by the War Department here in a communique which reported another day of relative inactivity in the fighting on Bataan Peninsula in the Philippines.

The attack on the Jap transport and cruiser was made by eight heavy bombers at Balikpapan, oil port in East Borneo. The transport was sunk in the river there, while the cruiser was hit outside the harbor.

One of the American bombers was lost in the attack.

In Batavia, the United Nations command announced that American Flying Fortresses sank another big transport, left a second in flames, and planted several sticks of explosives around a Jap cruiser. Whether it was referring to the same action as reported in the Washington communique was not clear.

New Attack Expected

The Batavia announcement said these powerful four-motored bombers also "roughly handled" Japanese terrier planes nipping at their fins, shooting down two of them, and damaging a third, the communique said.

"All our aircraft returned safely," it added.

Since Gen. Douglas MacArthur's little army counter-attacked last weekend and disorganized the entire Japanese left flank, ground fighting on Bataan has been confined to skirmishes. A renewal of the enemy assault on MacArthur's hard-pressed troops, however, is expected.

Japan has two alternatives in Luzon, as military men here see it. The Mikado's forces can use their overwhelming superiority in an effort to crush MacArthur as fast as possible, or they can leave a holding force to prevent him going on the offensive and take out a number of divisions for reinforcements in Malaya and the Dutch East Indies.

As long as MacArthur holds in Bataan and on Corregidor, however, Japan cannot use Manila Bay as a base. That the Tokyo high command has decided on the former course and another all-out offensive

Woman Says Prayers as Persons Die

By Gordon Goodnow
International News Service Staff Writer

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Jan. 28.—Reciting a horror-laden story of the worst sea tragedy in Western Hemisphere waters since the war began, 71 haggard survivors of the Canadian steamer Lady Hawkins told today how their ship was sunk in the Atlantic without warning on Sunday night, January 17, by a large submarine, presumably German, that sent two torpedoes crashing into the crowded vessel.

Two hundred persons, reportedly including some women and children, were swept overboard, most of them meeting immediate death in the chilly Atlantic waters, by explosion of the first torpedo that blew out the liner's No. 2 portside hatch, some of the survivors related.

[The survivors, huddled in the rain-swept boat, watched five of their companions die from exposure and exhaustion. Each time one of the victims died, the Associated Press reported, Mrs. Marian Parkinson, a missionary, whose husband apparently went down with the ship, led the funeral services. Each day she directed the singing of hymns in an effort to keep hope alive.—Editor's Note.]

65 Jap Ships Still Afloat At Macassar

Bear 150,000 Men; Battle Continuing, British Source Says

By the United Press

London (Thursday), Jan. 29.—A Japanese armada, bent on a full scale invasion of Java, has been battling its way south through the Macassar Strait for six days and although it has lost 28 ships, there are at least 65 still afloat with 150,000 troops aboard, the Daily Mail reported today in a Batavia dispatch.

Gen. Wavel, supreme allied commander in the Far East, whose headquarters are on Java, has ordered the invading fleet forced back at all costs, according to Cedric Salter, Daily Mail correspondent.

Batavia and Washington dispatches have reported for several days a mounting toll of Japanese ships sunk or damaged by Dutch and American naval and air forces in Macassr Strait, but Salter said that the full scope of the battle was only now apparent, and that it was the greatest sea action since Jutland, the decisive naval engagement of the World War.

"It is still raging today (Wednesday—the sixth day)—and no matter how many ships the Japanese have lost it will not be won until the entire enemy invasion armada is wiped out—or the survivors are forced to turn back," Salter wrote.

"The threat to Java, though reduced, is still very real," the dispatch said. "The armada now is split into three groups, and it is a major problem for the Allies to keep each accurately placed so the at-

15 Amercians Among 71 Saved; Submarine Seen Off Texas Coast

By the Associated Press

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Jan. 28.—Two hundred and fifty persons, including Americans, were reported dead or missing tonight after their ship—(identified officially in Montreal as the 7988-ton Lady Hawkins)—was sunk 10 days ago in the Atlantic by an Axis submarine attacking without warning.

Seventy-one survivors, 17 of them Americans, who had prayed and sung hymns in their tossing lifeboat, were brought to this American outpost today by Capt. Helgesen aboard the New York-Puerto Rico steamer Coamo.

He found them last Friday night, five days after the sinking of the vessel, smashed by two torpedoes.

Sub Off Texas Coast

[Corpus Christi, Tex., was partially blacked out last night, following a report a submarine, "undoubtedly German," had been sighted about 15 miles from Aransas Pass, about 25 miles east of Corpus Christi. Street lights, electric signs and lights of the larger buildings in Corpus Christi and the surrounding area were ordered darkened.

[Capt. Alva Bernhard, commander of the Naval air station, confirmed the report of the sighting of the undersea craft by an unarmed Naval plane on patrol duty, and identified it as "undoubtedly" a Nazi U-boat. He said there probably was another one nearby.—Editor's note.]

What few details were available tonight indicated that loss of the Lady Hawkins brought by far the heaviest loss of life yet in the Axis submarine offensive off the United States coasts.

Fifteen of the rescued Americans were Missourians, 12 of them from St. Joseph.

Five Die in Lifeboat

Another resident of St. Joseph, David Schoonover, was one of five persons who died from exposure in the lifeboat before the Coamo picked up survivors.

Survivors said the first torpedo smashed into No. 2 hold on the port side forward of the bridge. The second wrecked the engine room and doused all lights.

The ship went down so quickly there was no chance of sending an S O S, they said. About 321 persons were aboard at the time, a crew of 109 and some 212 passengers.

Chief Officer Percy A. Kelly commanded the lifeboat which the Coamo found. It was built to accommodate 63 persons, but 76 entered it.

A 2-year-old child was among the survivors, Janet Johnson, daughter

Sea Explosions Place Honolulu On Alert Status

By the United Press

Honolulu, T. H., Jan. 28.—Depth charges were heard exploding offshore today, and although Navy officers refused to say whether enemy submarines had been detected they admitted that there had been an alert signal summoning all personnel on shore leave to their stations.

Residents reported having heard the depth charges at 1 a. m. The alert was issued several hours earlier.

Meanwhile, as the Territory tightened its defenses, Army authorities went directly to the housewives to check a current soaring spiral of food prices and simultaneously warned unscrupulous retail distributors that the military's obligations to the consuming public would result in drastic action to curtail profiteering if it continued.

Saga of Men Against the Sea

Ship Torpedoed, U. S. Sailors Battle Seas In Open Boat for Month in 2500 Mile Trip

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

From the South Pacific yesterday came fragmentary reports of a modern saga of men-against-the-sea, rivaling that of Capt. Bligh and the men of H. M. S. Bounty.

A small boat in which 13 men of the American steamer Prusa, torpedoed December 19, 100 miles south of Honolulu, sought safety landed on one of the Gilbert Islands, northeast of Australia, the Navy learned, after a 2500-mile journey.

The condition of the men or how many survived was not reported.

The survivors of the Prusa, according to the Navy's report from Wellington, New Zealand, battled the sea for an entire month, finally reaching tiny Nukunau Island January 19.

One of the first victims of Jap subs of the war, the Prusa was torpedoed at 5:30 on the morning of December 19. Eight men were killed in the attack and the radio operator was lost overboard.

Two lifeboats were hurriedly launched, with the captain and 12 men in one, and the chief mate and 12 others in the second. The Prusa, owned by the Lykes Steamship Co., of Houston, Tex., went down within nine minutes after the torpedo struck.

After a consultation of the survivors, it was decided to set their course for the Marshall Islands.

Two hours after the sinking, the men in the tiny boats sighted an airplane overhead. But it was flying high, and did not see the little specks on the sea.

During the six days that followed the two boats became separated. Then that commanded by the chief mate was sighted by Navy scouting planes. The latter dropped food

Brazil Severs Trade and Diplomatic Relations With Axis

Consultative Conference Closes at Rio

By Turner Catledge

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 28.—The third consultative conference of the foreign ministers of the American republics came to a dramatic close tonight with a proclamation by the Brazilian government severing diplomatic and commercial relations with Germany, Japan and Italy.

Brazil's action was announced by her foreign minister, Oswaldo Aranha, at the closing plenary session of the conference. Above the thunderous applause which greeted his solemn words, Aranha said that he had sent notes to the Brazilian Ambassadors of Berlin and Tokyo and to the charge d'affaires of Rome, instructing them to inform their governments of a complete break in diplomatic and commercial intercourse.

"The results of this conference are the most historical phenomena of the times," Aranha declared. "It is proof of the structure of Pan-Americanism.

An hour earlier, according to an announcement by Aranha, the representatives of Peru and Ecuador agreed on final details of a plan for settling century-old boundary dispute between the two countries, thus ending the last clash over borders in Latin America and removing all obstacles to the joining by Ecuador of the anti-Axis front.

Thus the word "success" was emblazoned across this record conference which finished its second full week today.

Diplomatic Victory

Every vestige of armed aggression by the Axis has been stopped in the Western Hemisphere and besides Ecuador, all but two American nations—Argentina and Chile—have broken relations with the Axis. The ministers of these two nations already are on record as recommending similar action by their countries.

Moreover, all the countries, including the temporary holdouts, have set a pattern for the control of the new forces set in action by the war and for mutual action to supply each other with the sinews of defense and to adjust their economics to the demands of war.

A diplomatic victory for the United States and the Allies cannot be questioned or overemphasized. Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles of the United States and his delegation were compelled to perform unbelievable feats of diplomatic acrobatics in dealing with oversensitive Argentina and uncertain Chile. Failure semed inevitable several times but patience triumphed in the end.

The results speak for themselves. When Welles and his delegation arrived two weeks ago Monday, ten American countries had declared war on the Axis. These were the United States, Cuba, Haiti, the Dominican Republic, Costa Rica, Honduras, Nicaragua, Guatemala, El Salvador, Panama. Three others—Mexico, Colombia and Venezuela—had broken relations with the Axis. The remaining eight were standing back, awaiting assurances from the United States of protection in case of trouble.

Early Action by Chile Seen

After more than a week of conferring and quibbling over the wordage, the assembled ministers emerged with a resolution recommending a break in diplomatic relations by all the American nations with the Axis, following this with a similar recommendation for severing commercial relations.

In the first few days after the resolutions were adopted, Peru, Uruguay, Paraguay and Bolivia cut loose, followed today by Brazil, and in effect, by Ecuador, for action against the Axis by Ecuador is inherent in settlement of their boundary dispute.

Many conference observers predicted tonight that Chile would break with the Axis after her elections next Sunday, particularly if the liberal candidates wins the presidency. Argentina, however, may not come along for months.

Axis agents and their friends were reported to be converging on Buenos Aires, the last haven remaining to them in the Western Hemisphere.

Besides setting off political action culminating in the rupture of relations with the Axis, the conference sought to construct the framework for the continuance and strengthening of the all-American front through mutual assistance in policing the Western Hemisphere and in economic affairs.

One main decision along this line was the creation of an inter-American military defense board in Washington to coordinate information on the defense efforts of all the nations.

Presdient Praises Work of Conference

President Roosevelt last night heartily praised the accomplishments of the American nations at the Rio Janeiro conference which recommended severance of relations with the Axis powers in a message to President Getulio Vargas of Brazil.

Mr. Roosevelt told President Vargas that "continental solidarity, as defined by you in your address of greeting to the foreign ministers, has been greatly strengthened."

"The American republics have won a magnificent triumph," he said, "over those who endeavored to sew disunity among them and to prevent them from taking action essential for the preservation of their liberties.

"That triumph has been sealed by the prompt and forthright decision of your government and of the other American governments which have reached similar decisions."

Mr. Roosevelt added that the announcement that Brazil had severed relations with Germany, Japan and Italy "assures me once more of the support of your great country at a time of bitter struggle against forces whose actions and policies have been unanimously condemned by the 21 American republics."

tacks can be maintained."

Japanese attacks on Allied air fields in southeast Borneo and northwest Celebes, from which reconnaissance planes must operate, was said to have hampered the operations against the armada.

"The slowness with which details of the action is being released by Wavell is an encouraging sign," Salter reported. "It means that all claims are being checked conscientiously before announcement.

"If the armada is destroyed or forced to turn back, at least a month will be gained toward that vital three months which it is estimated are necessary for the concentration of adequate allied forces in the southwest Pacific."

and directed a Coast Guard cutter to their assistance. They were picked up December 27 and taken to Honolulu.

No trace, however, was found of the second boat, and for a month there was no hint of the fate of the captain and the 12 other men aboard.

Then came word from New Zealand that the little boat had landed in the Gilbert Islands, 2700 miles north of Aukland. The fourth officer of the Prusa made his way from Nukunau to another island of the Gilbert group—Beruin—and contacted British authorities in Wellington. They sent the dispatch on to Washington.

The brief dispatch did not reveal whether the fourth officer went to Beruin Island alone or with other members of the crew. Nor did it tell whether all of the men were still alive, their condition or other details of the voyage. That's all that is known here now of the extraordinary story.

Schooner Attacked Twice by Jap Subs

Seattle, Jan. 28 (U.P.)—The three-masted auxiliary schooner Black Douglas, formerly of Savannah, Ga., was attacked twice by Japanese submarines off the Pacific Coast while en route to Seattle from Savannah last month, the Thirteenth Naval District headquarters disclosed today.

One submarine fired at the vessel at night. The crew reported seeing a flash of gunfire and a shell hit the water close to the ship.

The Black Douglas immediately blacked out and changed its course, the naval spokesman said.

British Survivors Reach Canada

An Eastern Canadian Port, Jan. 28 (Canadian Press)—Thirty-three survivors of a British tanker torpedoed off England have arrived here on a British freighter and reported four fellow crewmen were dead and 13 others were missing.

The group raised to 66 the number of rescued seamen brought here from the sinking of three ships. Previously, 21 survivors of the torpedoing of a Norwegian tanker and 12 survivors of the sinking of a Greek freighter had arrived.

Berlin (from German Broadcasts), Jan. 28 (AP).—Adolf Hitler conferred the Reich's highest decoration for valor in action today upon Col. Adolf Galland, recently appointed inspector of pursuit planes of the German air force, who is credited with shooting down 94 planes.

The decoration, the Knights Cross of the Iron Cross with oak leaves, swords and diamonds, previously had been conferred only upon Col. Werner Moeldeys, who died in the crash of his plane.

of Albert Johnson, a British foreign service officer, and Mrs. Johnson. These people had lost all their possessions in the sinking. Before that they had abandoned other belongings in the flight from Rumania before the German occupation armies.

Chief Officer Kelly rigged up a sail on the lifeboat and directed the careful rationing of what food there was aboard. Each person was fed daily a biscuit, a tablespoon of canned milk and two ounces of water.

The survivors, who praised Kelly for his seamanship and courage during the five-day vigil of hope, said they soon lost sight of other lifeboats lowered from their sinking ship.

The Lady Hawkins, launched at Birkenhead, England, in 1928, was a 14-knot ship, 438 feet long, with accommodations for 235 passengers.

With other ships of the Canadaian National Steamship Co.'s white fleet of five "Lady" boats, she plied the Atlantic before the war between Canadian and West Indies ports, touching at Boston and New York.

Survivors' Boat Nearly Collides With U-Boat

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 28 (AP).—Survivors of the torpedoed tanker Francis E. Powell who were brought here today said their lifeboat nearly collided with the attacking submarine after their ship was destroyed and that both the lifeboat and a Coast Guard rescue vessel were trailed by the enemy craft.

Adding another victim to a steadily mounting list of torpedoing off the Atlantic coast, the skulking submarine attacked the American tanker off the Delaware coast early Tuesday, leaving one of her crew dead, three unaccounted for and sending two boat loads of survivors rowing desperately to safety.

Eleven crewmen were rescued by a Coast Guard vessel after 16 hours in a lifeboat with little clothing and nothing but sea biscuits to eat. Seventeen others were taken ashore at Lewes, Del.

Skipper Crushed

Unaccounted for were Capt. T. J. Harrington, of Baltimore, who was crushed between the tanker's side and a lifeboat; Third Mate James Canavan, of Philadelphia, and Quartermaster Joseph Tiriola, of Greenwich, Conn.

The body of Antonio Siago, steward, was brought to Norfolk. Identity of a second body reported picked up by a fishing trawler remained unknown. The trawler was reported also to have picked up an unidentified survivor.

Guy Devono, of Clarksburg, W. Va., 22-year-old radio operator, said he and several other crewmen lowered a lifeboat after the torpedoing, but that a wave washed the boat back or deck—with all the men in it. They tried again and got away in the darkness only to see the submarine on the surface some 50 feet dead ahead.

"We turned around sharply and headed shoreward, but the sub kept on our trail," he said. "I wouldn't be surprised if she were waiting for a rescue boat to pick us up."

Radio Set Went Dead

Devons was in his bunk when the missle struck. Knocked out of bed, he hurried to the radio shack to rig up his set, but it was dead.

Devono said they rowed off in the lifeboat in a westerly direction for four hours and rested 12 before being picked up. The submarine, he said, continued on the trail about 15 minutes after the rescue.

Others among the seamen placed ashore at Chincoteague, Va., and later brought here, said that from their lifeboat they saw the submarine last night and believed it was a rescue vessel.

Dark Shape Seen on Surface

"We sent up a red flare when we saw a dark shape on the water," said Quartermaster Carl Amundsen. "A few moments later we saw a lighter craft which we knew was the Coast Guard and when we got on her the watch officer told us that the other boat was a submarine. We got the hell away from there."

Their desperate effort to get away from the huge oil slick surrounding the tanker brought the near collision with the submarine.

"We rowed to save our lives," asserted John Axalson, able seaman, "and did not look where we were going at first. We almost hit the submarine. She didn't bother us but we were afraid at first that she might see us."

Old Seafarer

'Dad' Envies Torpedoed D. C. Youth

Eighteen-year-old Piercy G. Lawson, jr., who went to sea four months ago almost on the very day he reached the age of eligibility, has already logged up an experience which his father, who works in Washington, never knew in some 30 years of seafarin'.

The young seaman, whose friends call him "P. G.," was landed early yesterday at Chincoteague Island along with other survivors from the torpedoed tanker Francis E. Powell, which went down somewhere off the Atlantic Coast.

His first action on landing was to call his dad, who has been an assistant engineer at the Portner Apartment House, Fifteenth and U Streets Northwest, for the past five years.

"Hello daddy," he shouted into the telephone at 2:30 a. m. Wednesday mornnig, "I suppose you knew our ship had been torpedoed."

His father not only had heard of the torpedoing, but for some five hours previous had been burning up the telephone wires to Lewes, Del., where other survivors from the stricken tanker were landed earlier. He had been busy, also, in pasing along such news as he was able to obtain to Foxwell, located in Lancaster County, on Virginia's northern neck, where the boy's mother and an older sister reside.

"Of course, I immediately called my wife and let her know the good news after the boy called me," the elder Lawson said last night.

The Washington man, who sailed in the coastwise trade from the time he was 16 until five years ago, and whose father and grandfather before him were sailors, added that 'P. G." was in good spirits and told him he expected to be in Washington some time today. His father said the boy had been taken along with the other survivors to Norfolk and that he "expected" he would arrive here on the Norfolk steamer this morning.

"P. G." finished high school at Whitestone, Va., a short distance from his home at Foxwell, last June and came to Washington, where he resided with his father and worked as a messenger boy for Julius Garfinckel & Co. until about the first of October, when he shipped aboard the Atlantic Refining Co.'s tanker Powell at Elizabeth, N. J.

It was in fulfilment of a lifelong ambition, his father said last night, that "P. G." went to sea.

"Ever since he was big enough to know what boats were, he has wanted to be a sailor. He's already beat me, because never in my long career did I experience anything like he's gone through," the father said.

The elder Lawson told a curious reporter that the name "Piercy" had been bestowed on him by his maternal grandfather, and that he in turn had passed it along to his only son. Where the name came from, he doesn't know.

lives largely to the sunken ship's carpenter, William Burton, of Hamilton, Ontario, who became a hero when he fashioned a sail and rigged it up to navigate the lifeboat through cold rain squalls and rough seas.

Mother Saves Baby

Mrs. Albert Johnson, mother of a brave 2-year-old girl, Janet, related:

"The ship's lights went out when the second torpedo struck and we listed to port.

"I saw two lifeboats smashed by the concussion, but another was floating far off.

"We (she and her husband) took the baby, slid over the side and swam to the boat."

"The weather was bad—chilly and rainy most of the time.

"Most of us got on well, however, with only one small biscuit, a quarter cup of water and two teaspoons of condensed milk each a day."

Searchlights Played on Ship

"We saw the sub clearly," Burton said. "It was a big one and came up about 100 yards from us.

"Two big searchlights were played on us. We stared and watched.

"Then, suddenly, two torpedoes struck. The first one hit hold No. 2 and the ship listed to port. A minute later a second torpedo struck the forward part of No. 3 hold and reached the engine room bulkhead.

"I think everyone on the 2 to 4 watch was drowned instantly.

"I lay in the lifeboat until daylight the next day, then got things organized. I put a sail on her and headed west toward the coastline until the Coamo picked us up."

Charles Clifford, of St. Joseph, Mo., another survivor, said that "things were calm after the first torpedo struck," adding:

"Everyone obeyed orders very quickly and closely."

Edmund Reilly, of Montreal, a crew member, pointed out that the moonlight made the "conditions perfect for the dastardly deed."

Besides Mrs. Johnson, one other woman was picked up from the lifeboat. She was Mrs. Marion Parkerson, of the Toronto Missionary Pentecostal Assemblies in Canada. She sobbed as she told how her husband was instantly killed before her eyes when a piece of falling debris struck his head.

Master Among Missing

The ship's master, Capt. H. O. Giffen, was among the missing and apparently went down with his vessel. He was last seen on the bridge.

That others have been rescued was indicated by the ship's chief officer, Percy A. Kelly, of Halifax, Nova Scotia, who said he thought "two other lifeboats, besides ours, got away safely" and their occupants may have been picked up.

"Our ship sank 25 minutes after being hit the first time," Chief Officer Kelly related. "She finally heeled over and went down.

"I am afraid that 200 were swept to death when the first torpedo hit."

Texas Airman Accounts for 2 Of Foe's Craft

By Daniel DeLuce
Associated Press Staff Writer

Rangoon, Jan. 28.—American volunteer fliers, outnumbered by at least three to one, put to rout a force of 37 enemy planes today, shooting down at least seven of them in a new encounter 4 miles above the Burma jungle east of Rangoon.

The Americans lost only one craft themselves, and the pilot of that one landed safely. One of the Americans, "Sandy" from San Antonio, Tex., shot down two planes himself and may have downed a third.

Five more of the enemy probably were destroyed by the A. V. G. (American Volunteer Group) and nine others were known to have been damaged as they streaked for home, their fragile Japanese army "97" planes completely beaten by the faster and heavier Tomahawks, whose cockpits are sheathed with armor plate.

These Americans, guarding Burma and the Chinese supply route running through it, have yet to oe beaten by the Japanese, although they have never yet fought on terms of numerical equality.

An R. A. F. communique announced the airdrome north of Rangoon was attacked by eight enemy bombers last night, but no damage was done. One of the R. A. F. fighters destroyed an enemy bomber.

British bombers attacked the dock area of the Bangkok, capital of Thailand, last night. "The raid was successful and all our aircraft returned safely," the R. A. F. said.

On the ground, British and Burmese troops engaged the advanced forces of the Japanese and Thai invaders on an extended front northeast of Moulmein.

In today's midday battle east of Rangoon the American Tomahawks tore into the Japanese 97's with speed and fury, and the latter soon were speeding toward their bases across the Gulf of Martaban in full retreat. The casualties dropped one by one from the skies.

"Sandy," the Texan, peppered two little enemy fighters and waited to see them dive in flames into the sea. He reported getting another burst of gunfire into a third Jap plane, but was uncertain of the result.

He had barely landed at the airdrome near Rangoon when one of the strangest incidents of the Japanese campaign occurred. With motor sputtering and propeller turning weakly, a Japanese fighter came in a long dive directly at the runway where "Sandy's" plane stood.

The Japanese pilot, it was discovered afterward, had bullet wounds in the chest, stomach and head. He was dying in the air, but his fingers still pressed his machine-gun firing mechanism.

Preceded by a stream of his own bullets, his ship crashed on the runway and rolled across a ditch where "Sandy" had taken cover. The broken body of the Japanese pilot was flung like a rag doll from the wreckage.

Within a week the Yank fliers have shot down at least 40 planes with only two casualties.

In one running fight one of them named Hastey, from northern Georgia, was forced to bail out of his ship 40 miles east of here. A comrade named "Gil," who once flew from the United States aircraft carrier Ranger in a scouting squadron, circled Hastey's parachute until the latter landed so that the enemy couldn't shoot him as happened to another volunteer last week.

"We've got better planes, armor protected, and the good training that Uncle Sam gave us," one airman said. "And we're not falling for any Japanese tactics.

"Those Jap 97s can turn on a dime, and in a big scramble they could cut inside of us and get on our tails. But they're slow, probably 220 miles an hour top speed.

"We come in fast and hit 'em, then use our speed to get a good position for another sweep into their formation.

Oldest General Follows New War

Brookline, Mass., Jan. 28 (AP).—The Army officially shared today in the 102d birthday observance of its oldest retired officer, Brig. Gen. William Henry Bisbee, veteran of four wars, who received his customary congratulatory message from President Roosevelt.

Although his reading has been reduced considerably in the past year, Gen. Bisbee, veteran of the Civil, Indian, Spanish and Philippine Wars still is able to keep in close touch with the present campaign by having leading articles read to him.

British Soldiers Wounded in Battle of Malaya

on Bataan was indicated yesterday. More enemy reinforcements were landed on Subic Bay.

The additional troops landed were in relatively small numbers, the War Department declared, but the enemy force in Luzon now totals above 200,000 men.

Cessation of the heavy Jap bombing attacks on Corregidor and other forts of Manila Bay, which came daily up to two weeks ago, however, indicates that Japan may be running short of air power. MacArthur's antiaircraft gunners and fighter planes have shot down at least 124 enemy craft in Luzon and apparently other squadrons have been withdrawn.

The text of War Department Communique No. 80 follows:

"1. Philippine theater:

"There was practically no ground activity on the Batan Peninsula yesterday. The enemy landed relatively small numbers in the Subic Bay area. Enemy air activity was limited to reconnaissance flights.

"2. Netherlands Indies:

"Further reports of the action in Macassar Straits disclose that eight heavy American Army bombers sank a large Japanese transport in the river at Balikpapan and scored a direct hit on a cruiser outside of the harbor. During this attack, one of our bombers was lost.

"In a previous attack by our planes in this action, one enemy transport was sunk and another set afire, as reported on January 26."

Japanese Planes Raid Dutch Bases

General Headquarters, United Nations Southwest Pacific Command, Java, Jan. 28 (U.P.).—Japanese planes heavily raided important Dutch bases and ports today, setting afire two merchant ships and damaging a third in the harbor of Emma Haven, on the west coast of Sumatra, and killing several persons in an attack on the Dutch naval base on Amboina Island. Areas in Southwest Borneo also were attacked.

The heaviest Japanese bombardment today was against Emma Haven, where a formation of seven bombers swooped over the harbor nine times to score their hits on the merchant ships. There were no casualties aboard the ships or ashore.

In the attack on Amboina Island, the vicinity of Ambon was raided and "some persons were killed and some were wounded," the communique said.

"Little material damage" was caused in the raids on Southeast Borneo, the communique said. Location of these raids was not given.

Dutch planes made another raid on the Kuching, capital of Japanese-held Sarawak, and bombed the airdrome and storage yards, the communique said.

It revealed that the first Japanese landing on the southeast coast of Celebes was made Sunday at Sempara, a point on the tip of the southeast arm of the island near Kendari. Reports from Kendari, the communique said, indicated that the defenders still were putting up "strong resistance."

Churchill Critics in Commons Have Field Day in War Debate

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Jan. 28.—While Prime Minister Churchill's friends and foes lashed at each other verbally in the second day of the Commons' full-dress war debate today, the lobby of the House was full of rumors that Churchill might call for a general election to show by referendum the British public is satisfied with his leadership.

No confirmation was possible, but political writers saw in it a clever threat to prove to the prime minister's critics that they are not echoing public opinion.

On the whole, the debate went badly for the administration today—mostly due to a considered speech by Sir John Wardlaw-Milne, chairman of the Select Committee of National Expenditure and a respected critic of the government. Observers believe the increasing weight of the attack against Churchill, although it would result paradoxically in a favorable margin on the vote of confidence, would certainly force Churchill to make some changes in his government.

Wardlaw-Milne charged Britain had been "misled for months" about the Far Eastern position nad quoted from a letter sent by an army officer, lately in Malaya, which said:

"It can be no great secret that the defenses of Singapore consisted entirely of preparations against attack by sea. Northwest from the open roadstead, there were no defenses, no troops, scarcely police even, and a long coastline unprotected and unpatrolled, except by occasional aircraft."

Sir John said:

"I say that any criticism of any member of the government becomes of necessity criticism of the Prime Minister himself. If you live under a dictatorship that must happen."

The "hear, hear" cheer rolled through the chamber.

Sir John said that while it is essential that the British people are of one mind and are behind this or any other government which will fight the war to a finish," "it is unfortunate that the procedure of this House may result in giving the impression that we are thoroughly satisfied with the present government and every member of it."

Emanuel Shinwell, another oft-quoted critic, blamed British failures "to lack of coordinated policy of our policy of production," and said Churchill's defense that Britain was compelled to deprive the Far East of supplies because of Britain's Russian commitments was "fantastic." He said not more than 1000 tanks and 1000 planes had gone to Russia, "which is about a couple of week's production, if the government's declarations about our rapidly increasing production are accurate."

Maj. Randolph Churchill gave and took a great deal of abuse in defending his father's position.

Speaking in the presence of his father, his mother and his wife, the younger Churchill reminded the critics of the prime minister that "this is the Parliament of Munich . . . It is the Parliament that failed to rearm the country in time."

Lord Privy Seal Clement R. Attlee was certainly the best of the Prime Minister's defenders. He told the House 'reinforcements were sent to the Far East at the earliest possible moment, drawn from places and from troops most readily available, and other troops and reinforcements are being sent but you must remember there are long distances to be covered."

The Prime Minister will hear more of his critics tomorrow and then will offer a rebuttal—for which observers say he has saved his choicest phrases—and then demand a vote of confidence and the war debate will end.

R. A. F. Bombs French Ports

London, Jan. 28 (INS).—Taking advantage of bright moonlight to spot their targets, R. A. F. bombers pounded German-occupied ports on the French side of the English Channel for several hours tonight, while Nazi big guns lobbed shells into southeast England's Dover area.

The main force of the R. A. F. attack was concentrated on the Boulogne area.

British Evacuate North Singapore

main imperial forces.

The evacuation decree specified that all persons and livestock must be cleared from a mile-wide strip of the north coast by Friday noon, presumably to make way for military operations. The mile-wide Strait of Johore separates the north end of the island from the Malaya mainland, down which the Japanese invaders are pressing.

The seriousness of Singapore's position became more apparent by the hour, although there was virtually no official news from the fighting fronts.

The Japanese were said to be throwing every bit of their strength massed in Malaya into an attempt to administer a quick knockout to this gun-studded fortress, midway point and once the proud guardian of the trade route between China and India. The Humid, 14 by 27 mile island has few natural defenses, its highest point being the 500-foot Bukit Timah, and it must rely on its troops, guns and airplanes. The big guns were designed to cover the seaways, not to ward off a land attack, but there was no shadow of a doubt that the assault would be contested fiercely.

The Japanese were converging toward Singapore along four separate roads—from Senggarang on the west coast, Ayer Hitam, some miles inland; Kluang, on the Central Malaya Railroad, and Mersing, on the east coast.

At the same time, the main imperial forces were being concentrated at the lower apex of the triangle forming the southernmost part of the mainland, where the battle for Singapore, obviously will be fought.

Navy Fighting All Over Globe, Knox Declares

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 28.—Navy Secretary Knox asserted today that the Navy was carrying out an unprecedented task on a global scale with a grim determination to "fight and win this war on all oceans and upon all fronts."

Knox told members of the Chicago Association of Commerce that the Navy's assignment was immense, but that it "is doing the job" and reported that the sea lanes to Britain were open while "material and men are moving to the hard-pressed fronts in the South Pacific."

In citing the need for certain secrecy, he related a study of Axis radio broadcasts "indicate: that the Japanese are jittery because they can't determine just where the American fleet is and what its objectives may be."

"I have been criticized recently for suggesting that Hitler is our great enemy," the Secretary said. ". . . but some people evidently misunderstood me and I want to be emphatically clear . . .

"The war in the Pacific, the war in the Atlantic, the war in China, in Malaya, in Russia, in Libya—they are all one war . . . Hitler wants us to throw all our growing strength into the Pacific, to stop supplying the British and Russians . . . but this is what we propose not to do. We will not fall into Hitler's trap.

"Attacked in the Pacific and the Atlantic, we have to fight and win in the Pacific and the Atlantic. We dare not turn our backs to either front. These criminals are too good with daggers. We must not confuse history with strategy. The main enemy historically may not be the first enemy strategically. We cannot concentrate on defeating him alone. We cannot take them on one at a time when they're coming two at a time."

Knox said that if some people thought he favored "forgetting" the Pacific, the Navy did not. Since he made the reference to Hitler on January 12, he added, the Navy had accounted for 18 Japanese ships and probably three others, "and has done a number of other things discretion forbids me to report."

The Secretary reported the Navy was growing rapidly and predicted United States Marines and sailors would be back in the Philippines and Wake Island but in speaking of supplies going to the United Nations, he said "it may be months and months before the weight of material and men begin to tip the scales our way."

"The circle is tightening around Singapore and the Dutch East," Knox said. "We are, so to speak, administering a military deficit in that area, a deficit which may not be arrested until our united strength is largely increased. But it will be increased with the help of our Navy and the sinister Jap will find his progress slower and even more costly as he gets closed to the prize he covets. The thief of the Pacific will find some mighty battles between him and the wealth of the Indies."

The Secretary reported the Navy's task was "unprecedented in magnitude." He said it must fight "everywhere the battle is joined," guard our coasts, the Panama Canal and our far-flung bases, and protect supplies going to the British Empire, the Dutch, the Russians and the Chinese as well as other ships moving in "endless lines" to and from our shores.

Move for New Pearl Harbor Probe Draws Connally's Fire

Voicing opposition to a Congressional investigation of the December 7 attack on Pearl Harbor, Chairman Connally of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, yesterday said "All that remains is for the Army and Navy to go ahead with a court-martial."

Connally said the report of the President's special investigating commission, finding Admiral Husband E. Kimmel and Lieut. Gen. Walter C. Short failed to make adequate joint preparations, was "based on the facts" and it was useless for Congress to duplicate.

The Texan said his personal opinion was that Admiral Kimmel and Lieut. Gen. Short should be brought to court-martial.

"If they are guilty, they ought to be punished," he said. "If not, they ought to have an opportunity to vindicate themselves."

Connally told reporters at a press conference he felt sure that the Navy was taking all necessary steps against submarines off the Atlantic Coast, and "I have no doubt they have sunk or destroyed a number of submarines."

Connally said it was to be expected that the Germans would attempt "a dramatic performance" in an effort to generate fear and shake public morale but "there is no great cause for alarm from this source."

Earle Expected In U. S. Shortly

Haverford, Pa., Jan. 28 (AP).—Mrs. George H. Earle said today she had been informed by the State Department that her husband, who was United States Minister to Bulgaria, will arrive in the United States "within the next day or two."

Earle and his staff left Sofia last December. They arrived in Istanbul December 27 and Earle headed home by way of Cairo.

Red Army Kept at Full Strength Around Vladivostok, Writer Says

Crack Forces Stayed Even When Moscow Was in Peril, He Says

Quentin Reynolds, Collier's husky war correspondent, said here last night that Russia has never weakened her crack Red Star Army around Vladivostok—not even when the Germans were hammering at the outskirts of Moscow.

This was Reynolds' answer to a question as to whether Russia was in a position to make war on Japan.

Reynolds, who covered the Battle of Britain and then flew to Moscow with Lord Beaverbrook and Averell Harriman, spoke at a stag party in the Willard Hotel at which Thomas H. Beck, president of the Crowell-Collier Publishing Co., was host to 700 statesmen, diplomats, British officials, Army and Navy officers and newspapermen.

Men In Desert Like U. S. Planes

He described himself as a reporter and not an expert. Nevertheless, he said, he was surprised to come back and hear criticism of American planes and tanks. In the Libyan Desert, he said, he heard nothing but praise for these weapons. He told how R. A. F. men went into rhapsodies about the P-40 fighter plane (Tomahawk to the British), saying that it took off like a "scalded cat," handled like a "Shetland pony," and was more than a match for the Germans' vaunted Messerschmitt 109's.

Reynolds, who talks as well as he writes, said only a few men in England like Churchill and Eden know the answer to the riddle of Rudolf Hess. He said he met Mrs. Churchill, wife of the Prime Minister, at luncheon in London and she asked him:

"Please tell me the truth about the Hess case."

Reynolds said that when he told her the prime minister ought to know, she said, "Oh, he never tells me anything."

Goebbels Overrated

The war correspondent said Goebbels had been much overrated as a propagandist, but he conceded that Lord Haw Haw and some others had succeeded in one respect. This, he said, was in planting the idea that Anzacs and Canadians were doing most of Britain's fighting. Actually, he said, Britain had suffered six times as many casualties as her dominions.

Reynolds said that "Remember Pearl Harbor" was the most horrible defeatist slogan he had ever heard. After Dunkirk, he said, the British shook their fists and looked ahead. They looked ahead, he said, to the day when there wouldn't be any more mistakes.

"If I could urge anything at all," Reynolds said, "I would say our slogan ought to be, 'Forget Pearl Harbor.'"

Labor Board Settles N. J. Labor Dispute

The War Labor Board announced last night an agreement for settlement of the dispute between the Mack Manufacturing Co., New Brunswick, N. J., and the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers, with employes receiving a general wage boost of 12 cents an hour.

The agreement, still subject to ratification by the union, provides for the resumption of collective bargaining on January 31 in New Brunswick in an effort to conclude a written agreement. However, it specifies minimum wage and bonus rates, and provides that if the direct negotiation fails the dispute shall be submitted for arbitration. The dispute involves 2400 employes.

Roosevelt Calls British, U. S. War Chiefs to Parley

President Roosevelt yesterday called to the White House British and American chiefs of staff to perfect jointly the United Nations' war strategy.

Representing America's fighting forces were Secretary of War Stimson, Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff; Lieut. Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Corps; Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of Naval Operations, and Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the United States Fleet.

Gen. Sir John Dill, Gen. Colville Wemyss, Air Marshal Harris and Admiral Sir Charles Little were there for Britain.

This same group of ranking American and British officers participated in the historic conferences between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill and have been working since in concert to put into operation afield the decision of war strategy reached by the two leaders.

Reds Using Sleds Threaten Nazis in Smolensk and Vyazma

By the United Press

Moscow, Jan. 28.—Speedy Russian shock forces carrying guns on sleighs were reported driving straight south tonight from the Valdai salient northwest of Moscow and directly threatening the German positions at Smolensk and Vyazma.

A Soviet broadcast said the Red army had driven the Germans out of 79 localities on the central front in the last two days, killing 2980 enemy troops and capturing 40.

"Heavy fighting still is expected, but the Fascists are being pushed relentlessly westward," the radio said.

Battles Are Fierce

Violent battles between the Germans and the Russians went on all day Wednesday, the Soviet high command reported, with the enemy suffering "very heavy losses" and the Red army continuing its advance.

Twelve German planes were destroyed in combat and 17 on the ground Tuesday, as against seven Russian losses, the night communique said.

The left flank of the Valdai wedge driven more than 65 miles into the German line lay 100 miles north of Smolensk along the Rzhev-Velikie Luki Railroad. Front reports said the Russians had reached Velikie Luki, 270 miles northwest of Moscow and 80 miles east of the old Latvian frontier.

On the central front, hard-pressed Germans were said to be increasing their resistance, making numerous counterattacks supported by artillery and mine throwers. The Soviet army organ, Red Star, said the Germans were making a determined effort to halt the Russian advance from prepared points to which they had withdrawn.

Without exception the counterattacks were crushed, Red Star said, and the enemy was being harried so closely that quantities of artillery were being abandoned in the retreat.

Military dispatches said that on the Southern Front, where an offensive appeared to be gathering weight, the Red Army reached the vicinity of a key strategic center designated "B" after severe fighting. The Russians occupied a long stretch of railroad leading to "B," forcing the enemy to withdraw so precipitately that large amounts of equipment were abandoned.

A communique said that in one sector of the Southern Front a Soviet unit in one day of fighting took 40 populated places and captured two radio stations and other booty.

French Food Riots Flare Anew

By the Associated Press

Vichy, Jan. 28.—New demonstrations by housewives over the difficulties in food distribution in unoccupied France were reported tonight after the ministry of interior had rushed hundreds of tons of food to the great southern wine departments of Herault and Gard following upon hunger disorders which lasted for days.

Police countermeasures have been taken and there have been house-to-house searches and arrests, it was stated. Raymond Grimal, an official of the ministry, said that the demonstrations in some cases had taken on "a political aspect" and that the demonstrators tried to "overwhelm the services of public order."

The demonstrators began in mid-January and spread to half a dozen cities and towns, including Montpellier, Nimes, Sete and Arles.

In Sete, the dock workers struck during the demonstrations. Some of those arrested there were released on the same day and the manifestations continued.

Grimal attributed the shortages to the fact that the departments are in a one-crop section, producing mostly wine, and are dependent on imports which have been interrupted by the sinking of French ships coming from North Africa and by a cold wave which interfered with land transport.

Nazis Buil dDefenses Clean to Berlin, Reds Say

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Jan. 28.—Russian troops were reported pushing with such strength toward the west today that the Germans were beginning the construction of defense lines which reach all the way back to Berlin.

Prof. Mihail Gavrilov, a Communist Party spokesman, said at Kuibyshev that the Germans were fortifying the old 1939 Russian-Polish frontier, still some hundreds of miles behind the battle front, and were preparing defense lines along the Bug River, which separated Germany and Russia in 1940 and along the Oder, the natural frontier between Germany and Poland in 1939.

Sidelights on the War

I. R. A. Aid to Nazis Is Charged

By the Associated Press

Dublin, Jan. 28.—The charge that Nazi leaders, dropped by parachute on Eire and later arrested, were "in active collaboration with the Irish Republican army" was made in the Dail tonight by Opposition Leader John Dillon.

Dillon made the charge after Justice Minister George Boland had declared that the banned I. R. A. was attempting "to bring outsiders into this country."

He referred to the arrest of one parachutist, Hermann Goertz, some months after he landed in June of 1940, and said it was "common knowledge that this man was in close contact with the I. R. A. for nine months before he was laid by the heels. I. R. A. members have availed themselves of the support of a foreign regime whose agents are making use of them for the purpose of conquest," Dillon said.

Candy Casualty

Chicago, Jan. 28 (AP).—Chocolate bon bons and other candies are the latest victims of the war.

Production of candies next month will be about 20 per cent lower than last February as a result of sugar rationing, Philip Gott, president of the National Confectioners Association, said today.

Gott said manufacturers were restricted in their sugar purchases in February to 80 per cent of last February's totals. Unless manufacturers change their formulas, he added, this should cut candy output about one-fifth.

Candy makers already are experiencing difficulty with their nut confections, Gott stated, as many nuts used in these products are imported. Chocolate, imported mainly from South America and Africa, is still plentiful, he added.

Valletta, Malta, Jan. 28 (AP).—This Mediterranean island's air-raid alerts passed the 1400 mark today when three were sounded. Some bombs were dropped by a large number of enemy aircraft and a communique said some civilian damage was caused. One Axis plane was believed shot down.

Bill Proposes 48-Hour Week

Legislation to step up the work-week to 48 hours for the duration, with overtime paid only for work in excess of that, yesterday was introduced in the Senate by Senator Reed (Republican), of Kansas.

Offered as a wartime revision of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, Reed said the "spread-work" objective of the original law was reversed by the war shortage of workers and "small employers are greatly handicapped with overtime payments after 40 hours."

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, later commented that regardless of overtime arrangements, the Nation should go on a 48-hour week, "with three work shifts, and work on Sundays," to speed war production.

In the House meanwhile, Representative Fulmer (Democrat), of South Carolina, said he was drawing legislation to have applicants for WPA work assigned to farmers who make application for farm labor . . . The Government would pay the difference between the wages paid on the farm and the wages paid WPA workers.

British Quench Nazi Flare-up in Libya

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Jan. 28.—The German counteroffensive in the desert has spent itself in the face of a coordinated British air and ground defense after lashing back nearly 150 miles in a swift, seven-day battle, the British said tonight.

Today Gen. Erwin Rommel's columns held a 50-mile line on the western side of the Cirenaican hump extending from a point just northeast of Msus, which the Germans have occupied, westward to Soluch. All along the line the British mobile columns were engaging the enemy, and British patrols had penetrated it well to the south.

Soluch is about 30 miles below the British held port of Bengasi. But, today's British communique said, Rommel has been held in practically the same area for two days.

Pressing an assault which the British command described frankly as magnificent in its coordination with the British mechanized columns, R. A. F. fighters destroyed many forward German motorized units on the caravan trails from Msus to Antelat and Sheleidima and fired or damaged others.

Observers reported "great havoc" among the enemy's mechanized transport between Antelat and Msus.

Clusters of enemy tents were ripped apart and other fighters machine-gunned Rommel's road convoys west of Sirte. Bombers poured explosives into enemy transport in the Agedabia and El Agheila areas and struck at a wireless station, lorries and gasoline trucks in Tripolitania, near Homs.

NERVOUS INDIGESTION

When you're under a nervous strain, it can affect you in many ways. Among other things, excitement can cause a mighty uncomfortable feeling in the region of your stomach. It can give you a case of heartburn, "nervous indigestion" or sour stomach. It can make you feel downright miserable!

Nobody knows exactly what causes these discomforts. But many people have discovered that, when their stomachs are upset by nervous strain, they can get prompt and effective relief by chewing a JEST or two. JESTS not only make you feel better fast, but the soothing comforting relief they bring actually lasts longer!

There is no bicarbonate of soda in JESTS. They are not a laxative. Not constipating. JESTS taste like pleasant mints. 10c for a handy roll—3 rolls for 25c. Guaranteed by the makers of Ex-Lax.

Marine Rides Ripped Plane To 'Safety'

The story of an American Marine Corps observer riding a battered British bomber to safety inside the British front in Libya early this month after the ship had been blasted by anti-aircraft fire was reported by Marine Corps headquarters yesterday.

MERRITT

Lieut. Col. Lewie G. Merritt, 44, of Ridge Spring, S. C., was in a plane piloted by an English squadron leader, en route from El Adam in Libya, to Cairo, Egypt, January 7.

The plane crashed inside English lines but only a short distance from the battery which brought it down. None of the crew was killed and all were rescued by British armored cars which picked up the men despite a heavy barrage of enemy artillery fire.

Describing the crash, Co. Merritt said that "the first indication that we were being effectively fired upon came when the plane received a burst of machine-gun fire just abaft the pilot."

"Then came a burst of considerable length and extended from abaft the bomb bay to the vicinity of the rear gunner," Merritt continued. "This did not affect control, however, and the plane continued on its course.

"Shortly thereafter a direct hit was made by gunfire on the port side of the fuselage. The shell exploded as it entered and ripped a large hole in the side. At the same time the elevator controls were carried away.

"The plane started downward, gathering speed as it continued, until it crashed near the Axis lines. All personnel aboard rode the craft to the ground. The plane was badly battered . . . the co-pilot suffered a broken leg and another member of the crew fractured some ribs.

"The aircraft crashed within our own lines and an ambulance arrived at once. Before the injured could be evacuated, however, the enemy began an artillery barrage of some intensity and of uncomfortable accuracy. Seeing our plight, two friendly armored cars steamed in and stood by until the barrage lifted and we were able to reach a point of comparative safety."

Merritt had commanded Marine Aircraft Group No. 1 until last fall. A part of that group participated in the battle of Wake Island in the opening days of the war.

A Charming Parisienne Pays Capital First Visit

Michele Morgan a Hit on and Off Screen; Avant Couriers Herald National's Plays; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

WITH ALL RESPECT to the artistic skill of the "still" cameramen on the RKO-Radio lot, their photographic studies of Michele Morgan—one of them should not be hard to find on this page—fail lamentably to do her justice. Since we have seen "Joan of Paris," her first American-made picture and one that seems to insure the permanency of her Hollywood stardom, the same might be said of the cameras that shoot her for the animated gelatins. She possesses qualities of charm the lenses somehow fail to capture with complete fidelity.

Miss Morgan is quite a remarkable young woman. Buoyantly youthful, slender, highly intelligent and witty, she gives an immediate impression of character, poise and graciousness—even when less than an hour off the train, as she was yesterday at luncheon in the Carlton, directly the gentlemen (sic) of the drama desks had previewed her film.

Arriving in this country less than a year and a half ago from her native France, with only the sketchiest knowledge of the English language, she now speaks our tongue with utmost fluency, a complete command of our idiom and virtually no trace of accent. One of her major enthusiasms is that her first citizenship papers were taken out some five or six months ago. One of her chief anxieties is an inexplicable desire to gain a pound or two of weight—which one who knows nothing about such things would say, offhand, is a mere exercise of feminine caprice.

Never having attended one before, Miss Morgan's most eager interest yesterday was in the President's birthday celebrations, in which she will be a full participant. A little bewildered by the dizzy whirl of the merry-go-round on which she will be riding these next two days, she was practically ecstatic at the prospect of meeting the President. Would that really be possible? She could hardly believe it! The round of personal appearances all of the visiting stars will make seemed a trifle complex and incomprehensible, but something to be anticipated with a continuous and rising thrill.

Michele Morgan already is immensely attracted to the Capital. The Capital will be immensely attracted to Miss Morgan—both on the screen and off.

As for "Joan of Paris," American audiences will like that, too. Not alone because Michele Morgan is its star—they are already acquainted with her ability as revealed in French films that preceded her to these shores—or on account of the cleverness with which the English and the Free French outwit the Nazis in Paris as it unfolds, but also because it is a well-made picture, strong in the element of suspense and exceedingly well played by an able cast led by Paul Henried—remembered on the stage in "Flight to the West" and on the screen in "Night Train"—May Robson and many others. There will be times in the picture when Miss Morgan will bring Katharine Hepburn to mind and others in which the quality of her voice will vaguely suggest Luise Rainer, without the accent. Both considerations may be adding to the long list of assets that "Joan of Paris" will disclose when it comes along—date unknown—to the screen at RKO-Keith's.

That Old Bogey Law Again

The detonating Dick Maney, on behalf of Producer Herman Shumlin—and presumably Lillian Hellman, author— writes fearfully that since the "command performance" of "Watch on the Rhine," at the National last Sunday night, the impression may get abroad that the play "is capriciously avoiding Washington in its forthcoming tour, which gets under way in Philadelphia on February 23." Of course, it isn't that at all. Despite the recent revision of the District child labor law, it still is not sufficiently flexible to permit the appearance on a local stage of a juvenile actor as young as the 11-year-old Eric Roberts, who plays the vital role of Bodo in the play. If any one can suggest how "Watch on the Rhine" can play the National Capital under the law, Mr. Shumlin and all concerned will be more than grateful. Mr. Maney is not the first to tell me that. Miss Hellman said the same thing last spring when she so wanted to premiere her prize-award drama here, instead of in Baltimore. So that's the way it is. The law is better, but still not good enough.

So along comes the autographed baton and one of his latest recordings from Sammy Kaye, so that we can do a little private practicing against leading his band when it opens at the Earle tomorrow. And we still are not inspired to cause Toscanini, Stokowski, Dr. Kindler and the rest of the boys all that concern! After all, what did they ever do to us?

That astute stentor of the theater, Arthur Levy, drops by to trumpet the coming of Sylvia Sidney, Victor Jory and Ernest Cossart in "Angel Street" to the National for the week of February 16. He practically brushed elbows out in the hall with Samuel J. Friedman, performing a similar errand for "Plan M" sandwiched in between the San Carlo Opera Co. and "Angel Street" on the same stage. If the plays are as amiable as their representatives, there is nothing to worry about.

Personal aside to Cousin Mary Mason and Freddie Boyle, the ethereals of the ether: Thanks a couple of million. That's what I always say about you, too.

Postscript-to-the-Weatherman Note

A genuflection to you, too. Boy, that's what I call service!

A 'Modern Joan of Arc' Here for the Celebrations

MICHELLE MORGAN,
one of the Hollywood guest stars in Washington for the President's Diamond Jubilee Birthday celebrations, who soon will be seen at RKO-Keith's Theater in "Joan of Paris," her first American-made film. In this subject, she portrays the role of a heroine who sacrifices her life so that the friends of Free France may fight on. The title of the picture seems to have been well chosen

HEDDA HOPPER

Metro, for Once, Falls From Grace

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 28.—Seems to me Metro slipped up when they didn't sign Ray MacDonald's sister, Grace. Ray's unquestionably going to be a big star for them. So is Grace. She's a darling, and what a clever little dancer. But she's doing "What's Cookin', Cookie?" with the Andrew Sisters. And what a talented bunch of youngsters in that picture!—The McNab Sisters, from Omaha; Roland Dupree, from Boston, and that grand Leo Carrillo (who's offered his Santa Monica Ranch for Red Cross emergency) is there for laughs.

FRANCHOT TONE

Franchot Tone's stand-in, "Alabam," takes a keen interest in Franchot's shopping because he falls heir to his boss' clothes. When Franchot was looking at a brown coat the other day, Alabam said, "The grey one's better." "Why?" asked Franchot. "Well, grey photographs better. Then, too, it'll match the tweed pants you just gave me."

Jane Withers is keeping a "Date Diary," so be careful what you say, kid, or you'll go on record.

Did you know that for laughs Columbia runs that film of Marlene Dietrich breaking her leg, with all ensuing comment, exclamation, etc? Wouldn't you love to hear it?

If George Murphy isn't careful, he's going to get more publicity on his writing than acting. He's just sold another story, "Chicago Method," to Liberty. Congrats, George! That Oregon air has certainly done things for you.

Director E. H. Griffith, supposedly in Las Vegas, has turned up in New York and is trying to persuade Fanny Hurst to write him a comedy. Incidentally, Fanny's latest book, "Lonely Parade," certainly doesn't mince matters. She carefully disguises the identity of one of her ladies, but everyone knows who she is.

Cecil De Mille says making pictures is like having a baby. (Why, Cecil, how could you know!) "The pain," says the maestro, "is excruciating. The anticipation terrific!" Why, Cecil!

Seems that since Donald Crisp gave that magnificent performance in "How Green Was My Valley," Warners, where he's under contract, has no fittin' part to put him in. And they're going right on paying his salary until they find one.

Trem Carr, of Monogram, had a cable January 8 from Clyde Elliott, telling of the safe arrival of the "Catch 'Em Alive" company at Bela, Brazil. Yesterday, a letter arrived, heavily censored, with news that less than five minutes after the last of their film negatives, cameras, supplies, etc., had been unloaded from the hold, their ship mysteriously caught fire and burned to the waterline. Elliott was not permitted to cable news of the near disaster.

Rotund Alfred Hitchcock's 12-year-old daughter opens on Broadway in "Solitaire" with a part almost as long as Hamlet, and she's never had any previous experience.

Actors will never have to give a benefit for Charlie Ruggles. Remember the money he made from his monkey, Schliemiel, renting him out to the movies? Now he's bought two magnificent horses, which are being trained for movieland.

Startling Tricks Used for Realism

Actors never know from one moment to the next what Director Richard Wallace will do for realism in his pictures.

To get Edmond O'Brien and Ruth Warrick to react realistically to the sound of a slamming door in "Obliging Young Lady," he unexpectedly discharged a pistol to startle them.

For the same picture little Joan Carroll had to kick the shin of George Lloyd, character actor. Lloyd's shins were carefully padded for rehearsals and long shots. For the close-up, however, Wallace wanted Lloyd's honest reactions to the kick so he secretly told Joan to stomp on the actor's foot.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Miss Loy Joins the 'Sob Sisters'

Hollywood, Jan. 28 (INS).—We who belong to the newspaper fraternity know sob sisters went out with the bustle and the old-fashioned tandem for two. The newspaper woman today stands shoulder to shoulder with the men and takes the same tough assignments. But in the days when Diamond Jim Brady wore his "jools" and Lillian Russell charmed the tired businessmen, sob sisters were the thing. They covered murder assignments and wrote stories from the sentimental angle. Well, now Myrna Loy is going to play just such a character.

MYRNA LOY

The title of Myrna's picture, appropriately enough, is "The Sob Sister," by Jack Pollexfen. Sam Marx is set to produce it for M-G-M and the locale is New York with all the characters who made up the town in those days. I understand Myrna's sob sister will be a little on the order of Nellie Bly, the gal who went around the world in 90 days.

Great idea a Sol Siegel's is "revive" Rudolph Valentino, Pola Negri, Bebe Daniels, Gloria Swanson, Wallace Reid, Ernest Torrence, Lois Wilson and Agnes Ayres, all top stars of that day for "Merton of the Movies." He will incorporate in the picture actual scenes from "The Sheik," "The Covered Wagon" and "The Affairs of Anatole"—terrific money-makers during the golden era, for who denies that was the golden era of our picture business? Eddie Albert and Susanna Foster are the stars of the new Merton movie and they'll work with actors who closely resemble the old-time favorites.

The line forms to the right for magazine cover gals and glamorous models who have knocked at the Hollywood door and found it open. One glorious example is Elyse Knox, blue-eyed, beautiful blonde, who has been on many and many a magazine cover and modeled for many and many an artist. Well, come tomorrow morning, Elyse walks in at Universal with a contract in her hand, joining Kay Aldridge and Jinx Falkenburg.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: It's no secret that as soon as Alfred Vanderbilt is legally free he will wed K. T. Stevens, the beautiful actress-daughter of the Sam Wood; Bob Stack is seeing that Diana Barrymore doesn't get lonesome; Tom Brown, who has been trying to get into the Army—and so far hasn't been successful—has kissed and made up with his former sweetheart, Dorothy O'Kelly.

Richard Greene, who left to join the British Army, still gets 1000 fan letters a month at Twentieth Century-Fox Studios; "Big Boy" Williams is sick with a strep throat; Janet Gaynor has been working with Adrian, helping him "mind the shop." Abbot and Costello say, "Buy defense bonds. Keep the bond sales humming for the Yanks are coming!"

Tot Was Literal In Obeying Order

Director Jo Graham seems to have solved one of his profession's most difficult problems, which is how to keep inexperienced youngsters from dropping the pace in a scene.

Graham, who is guiding Warner Bros.' "Always In My Heart," has 15-year-old Gloria Warren and Patty Hale, 6 years old, in the cast.

Before he calls, "Action," he gets the children in the proper mood for a scene by saying, "Sparkle Gloria. Bubble Patty."

He hasn't ever repeated the variation he tried one day on Patty. That day, he said, "On your toes."

Patty tried to obey her director's command literally when he nodded to her to run into the scene and take her place beside Gloria. Patty stumbled and almost fell, then turned and said, "I'm sorry, Mr. Graham. I can't stand on my toes without my dancing slippers."

George Tobias has never been kissed on stage or screen despite his more than 200 roles.

Burst Pipe Floods Grayson Home

Kathryn Grayson was a little worried about California's "unusual weather" when she returned home from a day's shooting on the Metro-Goldwyn's "Rio Rita" to find her apartment flooded.

It was a burst pipe, and caused considerable damage to her furniture.

LEONARD LYONS

New York, Jan. 28.

W. AVERELL HARRIMAN: William Batt, jr., who went to Europe with you and recently returned from England, is enlisting in the Army . . . Explorers Club: Admiral Richard E. Byrd will report for active duty with the Navy within the next two weeks . . . MRS. CORNELIUS VANDERBILT: Your relative-by-marriage—Lenore Lemmon, wife of Jackie Webb—is becoming a night club entertainer. She and Henny Youngman will head the new Beachcomber show on February 5.

LARRY ADLER

METROPOLITAN OPERA COMPANY: Larry Adler will make his operatic debut this week—when he'll play his harmonica in the Philadelphia Opera Company's presentation of "Die Fledermaus." This will be the first time opera recognises the harmonica . . . ED FLYNN: Johnny Johnstone, who was in charge of radio for the Democratic National Committee, will become director of news and special events for the Blue Network on February 1.

POSTMASTER GENERAL FRANK WALKER: Mme. Litvinoff received a large package, with a message pasted on the outside, reading: "Notice—What you hear rattling is mothballs." She opened it carefully and discovered the mothballs—together with a hand-woven blanket, sent anonymously . . . VAN HEFLIN: The Theater Guild, for whom you last worked in "The Philadelphia Story," is anxious to lure you back from Hollywood. You'll get the offer this week . . . COL. WILLIAM J. DONOVAN: Denis McEvoy, the newspaper columnist and linguist, is one of the few Americans who speak Japanese. He's writing a book for McGraw, Hill. Its title will be "Japanese Primer."

BERNARR MacFADDEN: William S. Knudsen presided at one of the last meetings of OPM before that office was disbanded. He called upon William Batt, sr., to make a report. Batt, a chieftain of the War Production Board, walked to the front of the room, stood beside the platform on which Knudsen was sitting, and began to speak . . . While he spoke Knudsen stepped to his side, and with little effort picked up the husky Batt and placed him on the platform.

GOV. LEHMAN: Friends of the "mad dog" slayers, the Esposito brothers, insist that they're destined for Dannemora, although the Court of Appeals confirmed their conviction for first degree murder . . . BROADWAY ASSOCIATION: Joe E. Lewis now answers the Copacabana phone this way: "No, there's no cover charge here. There's a $2.50 minimum—but you also get two lumps of sugar" . . . BEN MARDEN: Patrons crossing the George Washington Bridge to get to and from your Riveria will be able to do so only by car. The Port Authority has closed the pedestrian walks of that bridge during the sunset-to-sunrise period.

CAFE SOCIETY REGISTER: One of the points of contention in the divorce between Bonnie Edwards and Tommy Manville concerned her right to use her marriage names. The settlement agreed upon gave her the right to bill herself as Mrs. Bonnie Manville—but not as Mrs. Tommy Manville . . . MRS. HARRY PAYNE WHITNEY: Your new nephew-in-law, Pat DiCicco, will be drafted into the Army shortly—unless he's commissioned in the Navy . . . NOEL COWARD: Clifton Webb, now starring in your "Blithe Spirit," needed a blood transfusion. He insisted upon first seeing and approving of his blood donor, to make sure that he wasn't German.

Little's 'The King' Is Final Example of Biting Gallic Wit

By Richard L. Coe.

As if to remind us there once was a wise and worldly wit called Gallic, the Little is presenting "The King," the last of such civilized satires to reach our shores before the Nazi darkness descended on France. It is a delectable, wickedly knowing film and, among others, stars Raimu, who was so unforgettable in "The Baker's Wife."

Sharply observant, "The King" pricks those pompous "balloons of democracy" who launch themselves as friends of "the peepul," yet jabber and fawn at the slightest opportunity for self-aggrandizement. Briefly, it is the story of an ambitious politician who advances to cabinet rank solely because both his mistress and his wife submit, and neither of them reluctantly, to the amorous advances of a visiting monarch. Twice cuckold, this fatuous fellow smiles smugly to himself at the way a self-made man can rise.

True, such bitter perception of homo sapiens is not too easy to take in this day; the shrewd obbligatos the French of pre-Vichy days toss in above this main theme are many and discerning. Take the reception given visiting royalty and the manners of greeting great and near-great as ordered by our ambitious hero, numbered one through 20. A lowly minion might get greeting number zero (a frigid stare) while a lofty official may call for an all-out number 20 (three paces forward and an effusive show of teeth). It is a feature of "The King" that will be outstanding to anyone who has watched certain segments of official Washington aclimbing.

Pre-war France means, so far as "The King" is concerned, going all the way back to 1908. That is when Mm. de Flers, de Caillavet and Arene first produced their play in Paris. Curiously, the play reached America first during another war period, 1917, with Leo Ditrichstein as the star under the banner of George M. Cohan and Sam H. Harris. Chief reason that it took until 1939 to reach the screen is that while the French did not fear its moral point of view, it did fear its political implications—that a Left Wing Deputy could become a Cabinet minister simply as the result of his mistress and his wife making a cuckold of him. It does seem strange that no sooner had experienced Louis Verneuil adapted it for the screen than a war began which was to topple the house at whose foundations hypocrisy had so long been gnawing.

The cast for such impolite shenanigans is flawless. Raimu completely contrasts his humble baker of his previous hit to become the essence of self-satisfaction.

Victor Francen, seen lately in Hollywood's "Hold Back the Dawn," plays the title role, looking and talking for all the world like Sir Thomas Beecham and saying "A-Ha" in French that's comprehensible to any ear. Gaby Morlay is delightful as the wife of the politician who rose from throwing an apple pie in the king's face to a far more intimate position. Elvire Popesco is superbly amusing as the femme du monde who engineers satisfaction for all concerned in the fable.

Verneuil's screenplay is Gallic facility plus, there are thoroughly adequate English subtitles by Milton Doushkess and a frequently satirical score by Billy Colson.

Police Puzzle Over 'Burning' Of Ice Worker

Investigators last night completed a probe of the near-fatal burning of J. Gordon Osler, 40, ice maker at Riverside Stadium, who was found bound hand and foot with his clothes aflame at the ice rink early yesterday.

Two homicide squad detectives were assigned to the case after Osler reported he was set upon "by three or four" men in his second-floor quarters shortly before 5 a. m. He was bound hand and foot with clothesline rope and his bed set afire, he declared.

He was rescued by James L. Fowler, of 107 Thirteenth Street Northwest, night watchman, when the latter broke through a trap door after hearing Osler's screams.

Fowler said Osler met him at the doorway to his room, his night clothes flaming. Both the man's hands and feet were tied together, the watchman asserted.

The flames were doused by Fowler with a bucket of water and Osler was taken to Emergency Hospital. Physicians said he suffered severe burns of the hands, arms and body. He is expected to recover.

Detective Sergts. W. D. Perry and E. E. Scott said they learned that Osler was tied with clothesline that had slip knots at each end. His bed had been saturated with a paint thinner.

Though Osler said "three or four" men attacked him and escaped through a window, Fowler reported no one entered the stadium while he was on duty. Two Army sentries patrolling across the street also reported they saw no one enter or leave.

The window, said to have been used as an exit, is 14 feet above the ground. No ladder or prints of shoes or ladder marks were found under the window. A table containing toilet articles was in front of the window, the investigators said, and several glasses on the window sill. None of the articles had been disturbed, they pointed out.

Health Security Group Reelects Dr. Eldridge

The Health Security Administration yesterday announced the re-election of Dr. Henry C. Macatee as president; Dr. Watson W. Eldridge, first vice president, and Frank Birgfeld, treasurer. William J. Flather, jr., was elected second vice president.

The election was held Tuesday night at the first meeting of the new board of trustees, which is composed of the above officers and the following: Dr. William DeKleine, Donald Roberts, Randolph G. Bishop, William R. Castle, Mrs. Edna Treasure, Dr. Margaret Nicholson, Dr. Woodson T. Birthright, Mrs. Frank Allen West, Clyde D. Garrett, Mrs. Morris Cafritz and John Pratt.

Serving on the 1942 executive committee will be Dr. DeKleine, Mrs. Treasure, Castle, the officers ex-officio and Willard C. Smith, administrator and secretary. Castle, Pratt and Flather were appointed on a special committee on relations with the Washington Community Chest.

Methodists Lead Drive in India Against Illiteracy

Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 28 (AP).—The Methodist Church is leading in one of India's great modern movements, that to remove illiteracy among its teeming millions, the Southeastern jurisdiction missionary council heard tonight.

In a report prepared for delivery to a general session of the council, Mrs. Otis Moore, of New York, foreign missions secretary of the Methodist churchwomen's division, described one of the church's boarding schools where Indian youths are taught crafts as well as reading and writing. She added that through health education, the church was doing its share toward ridding India "of the heavy burden of preventable disease."

Bishop W. W. Peele, of Richmond, Va., member of the Methodist National Committee on Overseas Relief, explained the program was designed for relief of personal suffering and needs rather than the restoration of damaged churches, hospitals or schools in war-torn areas.

America Plans 7-Million Army, Winant Reveals

London, Jan. 28 (AP). — United States Ambassador John G. Winant told a national defense luncheon today that the United States plans to recruit an army of 7 million men.

"If it is necessary for the women of America to scrub, drive or transport or man antiaircraft batteries or pilot planes or whatever else, they will do it gladly," he said.

He said "we know the story of the Battle of the Atlantic and if it is necessary that our Navy take time to reestablish its supremacy in the Pacific with whatever auxiliary airforce that is required, it will be done and its complete supremacy reestablished."

Pity The Consumer

Hopes for a price law that would protect the consumer against an excessive rise in food costs have been disappointed. The compromise measure passed after months of delay permits, indeed encourages, exploitation of the public for the benefit of farmers. There is no point any longer in stressing that point, for the inadequacies of the measure in respect to farm products have been repeatedly called to public attention. But it is less generally understood that the high ceiling prices established for farm products will necessitate comparably high ceiling prices for innumerable foods, fats, cotton and woolen goods, etc., processed or manufactured in whole or "in substantial part" from agricultural commodities. We may be sure that the pronounced advances in food costs that have already occurred as well as the future increases that the administrator will be powerless to prevent will add to the pressure for wage increases.

Within the limits of his authority, to be sure, the price administrator has been given far-reaching enforcement powers. The chief trouble is that his field of action is circumscribed. Hope had been entertained that under the power given him to buy and sell commodities the administrator might be able to prevent price increases, and thus circumvent the prohibitions in regard to agricultural ceiling prices. But Congress has specifically limited his power to marketing operations designed to encourage production when supplies are inadequate. Moreover, there is some doubt whether the bill, as passed, permits Government agencies to sell surplus commodities such as corn, wheat and cotton at prices below ceiling levels. The House conferees assert that the act forbids such sales. Senator Brown, however, assured his Senatorial colleagues to the contrary. If the House version of the measure should be accepted, the Commodity Credit Corporation is certainly in for a lot of trouble.

Fortunately, the price administrator has another string to his bow. Under the power to ration goods sold at retail (just conferred upon him by order of the WPB) Mr. Henderson will be able to exert very effective indirect pressure upon the prices of commodities in general use. For rationing prevents a competitive scramble for limited supplies, with need rather than willingness to pay excessive prices determining the distribution of goods. Indirectly, therefore, some protection is afforded the consumer against mounting living costs, assuming that the Government adopts a firm policy in regard to wages. If wages are not kept under control, of course, prices of finished goods will go higher and higher, farm parity prices will automatically rise, and the whole price control program will become mere legislative junk.

De Valera's Protest

It is difficult to gauge from Premier Eamon de Valera's protest against the arrival of United States troops in Northern Ireland whether the protest is sincere or pro forma. The Premier feels that the event will emphasize the split between Eire and Northern Ireland. But surely this is the least significant of its consequences. The agitation to add Northern Ireland to Eire is a secondary issue compared with the problem of retaining Eire. In this respect the American arrival should be regarded, as the President implied, as a contribution to Eire's defense. If Irish opinion were consulted, that most likely would be the prevailing reaction. More and more of the Irish people must be seeing the conflict with Japo-Hitlerism in the cosmic terms which it has assumed since the American entry. They must be seeing the conflict as one upon the outcome of which depends the independence and freedom of Eire as of all other free countries. As for the problem of Northern Ireland, the American arrival is an earnest that one of these days the United States may play the part of mediator in a dispute that will never be settled by Britain and Eire alone.

Perhaps Eamon de Valera is nettled by the lack of consultation with Dublin, of which he charges London and Washington. No doubt the British would say that what happens in Northern Ireland is no business of de Valera's. Such a stiff-necked attitude might not be shared in the United States. However, this country would share with the British the feeling that troop movements must be kept secret. The sinkings in the Atlantic are on the increase, and no American would agree that American lives should be endangered just to cater to the Irish Premier's susceptibilities. It is time that Dublin began to be more realistic. Its future, no less than ours, is at stake in this gigantic conflict, and the United States cannot allow any niceties of etiquette to stand in the way of the prosecution of the war. Eire's neutrality is a distinct handicap to the United Nations and a distinct aid to Hitler in the Battle of the Atlantic. Sooner or later such neutrality will be recognized as such in the United Nations war policy. When that time comes, we fancy the Irish people will be relieved that we have cut the Gordian knot for them.

Getting The News

When Mr. Byron Price, director of the Office of Censorship, issued a code of wartime practices for the press, he said he expected the story of our national successes and shortcomings to be told accurately and in much detail. Nearly eight weeks have passed since we entered the war. Accordingly, for our own good, we should consider the record. Since December 7 millions of words about the American military and naval effort have been printed. From official sources there have been terse communiques about Army and Navy operations and stirring accounts of personal heroism. Working with such material to the best of its ability, supplemented by private information, the press has tried to live up to Mr. Price's expectation without violating the spirit or the express provisions of the censorship code. There is no blinking the fact, however, that the sum total of this effort has been unsatisfactory.

Too much official attention has been devoted to interesting but irrelevant details of personal exploits which are almost uniformly encouraging. And not enough attention has been given to the overall significance of military and naval developments which are the reverse. That has been due to the fact that the Army and Navy departments have proceeded on the traditional theory that the less said about the overall picture the better. The public, in consequence, has received through the press an impression of war progress which, to say the least, is unjustifiably optimistic. The newspapers can hardly be blamed. For, as a result of official news policy, they have been reduced to minimum coverage of really important war developments and therefore placed in the position of featuring minor events which are little more than an official sop to the public demand for war news.

In wartime there are naturally limits to what may be publicly revealed. But when things are going badly for our forces, we should be told so straight from the shoulder in terms of overall strategy. In other words, we need less diversion, in the form of stimulating personal details, from the bad news and more concentration on what the bad news really means. Without such concentration, which involves a broader, better-balanced information policy on the part of the War and Navy Departments, the press is seriously handicapped in its efforts to tell the public about the war. And the public is left with a fund of stimulating stories and a vague impression that there is a lot going on behind the scenes which it ought to know about. This, we submit, is a prime example of how not to handle public opinion in a war that calls, among other things, for absolute unity and moral strength on the home front.

Vote Of Confidence

In his speech in the House of Commons on Tuesday, Winston Churchill took the bull by the horns. Britain's reverses in Malaya, the mounting danger to Singapore and the setback which the British forces have recently received in Libya have resulted in a rising tide of criticism of the government's war effort. A clamorous demand has arisen for a thoroughgoing house cleaning in the Cabinet. From this criticism, however, the Prime Minister himself has been singularly immune. Critics and supporters of the government alike share with the British people a tremendous admiration for the eloquent and stout-hearted leader whom destiny thrust to the fore in Britain's darkest hour. His prestige has remained such that, regardless of growling and grumbling, he is still in a position to write his own ticket.

Hence it can be regarded as a foregone conclusion that Mr. Churchill will get the vote of confidence for which he asks. No doubt the vote will be overwhelming, for the Prime Minister has put himself between the critics and those Cabinet members who have been the principal objects of criticism. Thus he has personally taken the responsibility for the major decisions that have been made and the consequences that have followed from them. "If we have handled our resources wrongly," he says, "no one is so much to blame as I. If we have not got large forces in Burma and elsewhere in the Far East, it is I who am responsible." He virtually commands a vote of confidence by adding, "It is because things have gone badly and worse is to come that I demand a vote of confidence."

This bold riposte appears to have thrown the government's critics into confusion. Even the bitterest among them have announced that they will support Mr. Churchill's motion and vote confidence in the government. Some of them, to be sure, will do so with mental reservations. Their clamor for a shakeup in the Cabinet will certainly not be stilled as long as reports continue to tell of further reverses. But having no desire to overthrow the premier or even to give aid and comfort to the enemy by a move which the enemy would interpret as meaning the existence of a deep fissure in British ranks, they will do as Mr. Churchill demands. His position now, as at all times since he assumed the premiership and offered his people nothing but "blood, tears, toil and sweat," remains unassailable.

Hawaii's Japanese

The Roberts report has made clear the consequences of our supine catering to the feelings of the Japanese community in Hawaii. Because the commanding general of the Hawaiian Department was afraid of creating "unnecessary bad feeling" among resident Japanese aliens and American citizens of Japanese descent, no action was taken against several hundred Japanese consular agents whose subversive activities were pretty well established. To be sure, Navy Intelligence suggested that they might possibly be arrested for failing to register as agents of a foreign principal. But the Army vetoed the idea because this country was technically at peace with Japan. The same squeamishness inhibited the FBI, and no effort was made even to tap communications between Japanese agents and Japan. Those messages were "transmitted by telephone or radio telegraph over the commercial lines operating between Oahu and Japan." Yet nothing was done to learn their contents, though, as the Roberts report says, such messages would have furnished valuable information.

The reasoning behind the Army's stand was indefensible. When we were still technically at peace with Germany and Italy, the FBI here on the mainland of the United States was diligently hunting down Nazi and Fascist "cells." Japan was linked to those cells through the Axis pact. And there was no doubt then in anybody's mind that Japan was not only a potential but also a likely enemy. Consequently, the FBI in Hawaii should have acted, regardless of how the local Japanese felt. There was even less warrant for the forbearance toward the Japanese agents' messages. On October 9, two months before the attack on Pearl Harbor, Attorney General Biddle, in his first press conference as Attorney General, specifically approved of wire-tapping as a weapon against spying. "I think that if you don't tap wires your espionage work goes out of the window," he said. Little did Mr. Biddle think that within two months his observation would be so disastrously illustrated!

Here was a blunder worse than a crime. The Army, evidently, took its cue from the attitude toward the Japanese which has been traditionally assumed by Hawaii's civilian leaders. That attitude, it appears, may be summed up thus: to question openly the loyalty of local residents of Japanese blood will drive them headlong into the welcoming arms of a dynamic fatherland. Some persons in the islands doubtless fostered a spirit of forbearance as essential to the democratic process. Others, perhaps with an eye on the powerful Japanese vote in Hawaii, were probably less idealistic. In any case it was felt that the casting of aspersions wholesale on the Japanese community would wrong the loyal majority.

A remarkable illustration of Hawaii's attitude of mind may be cited from Hawaii's Delegate, Samuel Wilder King. Mr. King went on the air shortly after his return from a personal investigation of the damage at Hawaii. And he said, "Despite statements to the contrary, I am assured by those charged with responsibility for policing the civilian population that no Fifth Column activities have taken place except in the form of espionage." A curious statement in the light of the Roberts report! By their actions since December 7, it is true, most of Hawaii's Japanese have proved themselves to be unquestionably loyal and stable, requiring no such defense as is implied in the Delegate's anomalous remark. But the fact remains that intelligence officers now have to distinguish between the loyal and the suspect—a tragically difficult job. The pity, moreover, is that it would be a far less difficult job had the Army in Hawaii been a little more realistic and less susceptible to easygoing civilian representations about the island Japanese.

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents letters should be held to 300 words. Letters are subject to condensation.

Our Vulnerability

Whatsoever a nation soweth that shall it also reap.

Of course the United States is God's country, or at least so we have been informed many times by boy orators in the United States Senate and House of Representatives; but we have not always especially deserved Divine favor. We have too often been morally and politically delinquent as a self-ruling people.

We sat blindly by when Japan invaded China and set up a puppet state in 1931, although the able gentleman who is now our Secretary of War warned us of our pusillanimous folly in permitting Japan to begin the gigantic movement of aggression which now threatens to engulf humanity. In 1939 we allowed Republican Spain to be destroyed by a group of military terrorists. For over 17 years we have insulted, derided and underrated the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics of Russia, falsely accusing the Russian people of being atheists, whereas in fact there are no more deeply religious humans on earth. For the past five years, for dollar profit, we have been selling gasoline, steel and scrap iron to Japan, thus furnishing the Japanese forces with the material to kill American soldiers, sailors and civilians, at Pearl Harbor on December 7 last, and in the Philippines and elsewhere since. Many American citizens, irritated by the open sale of war material to Japan, wrote to members of the United States Senate giving the names and addresses of American firms supplying Japan with the material means to kill our soldiery. A letter I sent to Senator Gillette of Iowa on this subject was incorporated into the Congressional Record, and there forgotten.

A recalcitrant multitude of defeatists, isolationists and England-haters filled halls and radio forums lulling millions of our citizens into a false security by declaring that no foreign nation could, or would if it could, attack America. The devoted humanitarian and statesman, who is now our President, was assailed as a would-be dictator and alarmist. In strict justice these reckless defeatists and isolationists should be tried by the side of any military delinquents accused of official neglect at Pearl Harbor last month.

Nevertheless most Americans are taking it for granted that in a brief period we shall win the war against three nations which for years have plotted our downfall. Even with all our past neglect and complacency we shall probably win; but millions of us are not deserving of the victory. And moreover our defeat is not impossible. We shall only win if and when we realize how great is the undertaking. At the present moment we are shielded from an early defeat by the marvelous fighting qualities and spirit of the Russian people. It is dreadful to speculate upon what might be the situation today if Hitler, instead of turning on Russia last June, had massed all his forces against Britain.

All of which means that unless every one of us realizes the dangers of the situation, dangers pointed out to us again and again by Mr. Roosevelt, we may be defeated, and this glorious republic of ours will be one with Nineveh and Tyre.

Sugar

Haiti was the "sugar bowl of Louis XIV," why should she not be the same for the U. S. A.?

There are thousands of peasant farmers in Haiti who never get a chance to sell. There are many planters who plowed under sugar on account of the tariff. With a little encouragement and understanding for our sister republic, we will find that from many small stalks a boatload comes, and no cup of coffee need go unsweetened.

Share Your Taxi

Another "newcomer" would like to make a suggestion for the partial solution of the traffic problem.

In the morning, taxi after taxi rolls by with one or two passengers. Most of these passengers are bound for the same general destination as those people waiting on street corners for empty taxis or for overcrowded buses.

If taxis with single passengers could display a sign indicating their destination, such as "Treasury," "Library of Congress," Munitions Building," others bound for that general vicinity could share the transportation and the expense. The signs could be on the roller principle, like the signs on street cars.

On one or two occasions the courtesy of sharing a taxi has been offered to me. Once another woman and I hailed the same cab. The battle for priority was settled by a single question: "Where are you going?" We were bound for two buildings directly opposite each other, one taxi served us both and saved rubber! A. P.

For Unity

The right of Washington to challenge Hitlerism is being tested today as never before. One fourth of Washington is colored. Many of the 65 sectors are organized without regard to race. Bombs know no color. Lives may be saved by first aid from the nearest qualified persons. Sabotage can be prevented and enemies thwarted by citizens of any creed or race. This is no time for consideration of previous class or condition of life. To defeat the crafty enemy we must effect unity. The Japs, and Hitler's propaganda merchants, are quick to point out to the Siamese, Filipinos and others our practices of Ghettoism, segregation and racial hatreds.

Our schools, our churches and our civilian defenders can, at least for the time being, forget our prejudices and work unitedly in every area for the good of all. Too much cannot be said to effect unified control and efficient alertness. Remember Pearl Harbor.

E. B. HENDERSON.
Washington, Jan. 27.

De Valera's Protest

The protest of Premier de Valera, of Eire, at the landing of United States troops in Northern Ireland was to be expected. It will be recalled that in 1916, when Britain was fighting with her back to the wall, a rebellion was staged in Ireland with De Valera leading. That gentleman is no more friendly to the Allied cause now, than he was then.

I believe, though, that a majority of the Irish people realize that Ireland's fate is linked with that of England in the present conflict and would help if given the chance.

Air Raid Shelters

While all these billions of dollars are flying all over the world, why don't they take a few thousand and build us some air raid shelters? At least for a dozen blocks in the vicinity of the White House, which will very probably be bombed for spite and to break the morale of the people? Be in time—"Remember Pearl Harbor."

FLORENCE S. AUGUSTE

Federal Union

The excellent results of the recent conference of 26 nations held in Washington are very encouraging. Representatives from 26 nations met to reason together on the all important subjects of war-time collaboration and postwar reconstruction.

The scriptural admonition to "Come now, and let us reason together," is today certainly being fulfilled.

Much credit is due to the international organization of Federal Union for replacing the idea of "nationalism" with the much improved idea of "internationalism." When Clarence K. Streit's book, "Union Now," was published, Lord Lothian strongly advocated the acceptance of plans and proposals suggested in this book. Repeatedly Lord Lothian spoke and wrote of "The United States of the World." How truly prophetic of the relationship today between the democratic nations of the world. Also how true is the statement expressed by Lord Lothian that peace and friendliness among nations "will only be established when enough citizens of national states, while retaining their full autonomy in national affairs, are willing to form themselves in a world nation for common purposes, to enter into that organic and indissoluble bond which is the foundation not of a league, but of a commonwealth of nations. When there are enough "elect" men and women of this kind in this world, there will arise that city, foreshadowed in Revelation in which there is no more war, because "the glory of the Lord is the light thereof, and the former things have passed away."

C. F. J.

Not Ready

Shortly after the attack by the Japs, the Government officials said that rationing would not be necessary for some time. Secretary Knox said shortly before that the Navy was ready to fight and go anywhere, ready for action.

War has been declared just seven weeks and we find new cars rationed, tires rationed, and a $5 tax on our cars. We were led to believe we were ready for war. The attack on Pearl Harbor shows we were not. Remember, we thought we were ready, but we were not. Were we being mislead by our Government as was France.

Why wasn't our Government better prepared after having received appropriations to make preparations? When Col. Lindbergh said our planes were very obsolete, he was criticized. When Hoover said the lend-lease bill was going to extremes, he was criticized. Do those who criticized still think these men were all wet?

Our Government has continued for the past year on "make believe" and deceit. Why blame the incident of Pearl Harbor all on Kimmel and Short. They could not fight a well-equipped Army with bamboo clubs.

N. G. PHILLIPS.
Washington, Jan. 25.

Conservation

The War Production Board ruled not to give priorities for construction of air raid shelters by OCD, the reason being that steel is necessary in construction of equipment to carry the war to the enemy.

For the same reason it is hereby suggested that OCD's national headquarters immediately set up a conservation division to work in cooperation with WPB in its conservation campaigns and OPA's consumer division activities in tire rationing and industrial conservation.

The OCD organization would be the ideal one to get cooperation of the general public in conserving and salvaging critical materials for our war production effort.

A Good Time For Nuttsy

All this happened away back before Christmas, but I couldn't discuss it before because it would have spoiled the grown-ups' fun. They deserve to be coddled a little in holiday seasons.

I went around to help Joe get in the mood, but I could see right off he was not in a convivial frame of mind. Something great was stirring in him.

'What's the new novel?" I asked.

"No," he replied. "Waiting for the little woman. Hey, got your shoes on yet, Pudding?"

"Doing the best I can," she shouted from the other room. "Will you get Nuttsy's sweater?"

'You can come along," he said to me.

"I wish you'd give this up," Pudding quavered. "Do we have to go through with it every year?"

"What's the matter; don't you want the kid to have a good time? Besides——"

"Yes, I know you always went when you were a little boy. Or should I use the present tense?"

"Now, Pudding. Just because your family didn't believe in fun——"

"All right; that's the clinching argument." The other half of the Joliffes appeared, hat over one eye, pulling her stockings up.

"Well," I ventured, "I gotta——"

"Nothing," said Joe. "You think we won't want you with us at a time like this, but you're mistaken. There's nothing finer than to share the Christmas spirit with an old friend."

"Oh, in that case," I began, putting down my hat.

"You misunderstood me, Bertie," Joe said. "This is a fairly solemn occasion. We are going out to show Nuttsy a rip-roaring time. Where is Nuttsy?"

"He's in the other room, darling. And I have a feeling if you want him you'd better explain to him yourself."

Joe was nothing if not direct. "Nuttsy!" he bawled.

There was a crash in the other room, followed by a wail.

"Now you've made him feel guilty again," Pudding accused. "And I think he dropped my lamp and broke it, too."

'Never mind," said Joe "Come on in here, Nuttsy. We can wait all day."

"Build house," Nuttsy called plaintively.

Pudding sighed. "Come on, honey. No time to play now. Daddy says you've got to go have a good time."

At the expense of a few cracked shins we all got into the car. The drive downtown was uneventful, with the exception of a nicked fender, for which Joe forgave the irate taxi driver. Then, of course, there was nowhere to park. Ordinarily Joe would have given up in disgust, but that was Christmas, you remember. He argued with three other customers about a space only one of them was vacating. After that we extricated Nuttsy from the revolving door and dragged Pudding past the glove counter. There was a battle about the escalator.

"It only goes two floors," said Joe. "And besides, remember what happened the last time he was on it."

Anyway, the first thing Joe spied in the toy department naturally was the electric demonstration train. Unfortunately Nuttsy at the same time had discovered the giant revolving candy cane that was part of the decorations.

"Come over here, Nuttsy," Joe called.

"Barby pole, Daddy," said Nuttsy.

"Nuttsy! I told you to come here!"

Nuttsy wailed. The customers laughed. Pudding tried to look small.

Joe snatched Nuttsy from his contemplations. "Look at the nice choo-choo! Wouldn't you like for Santa to bring you a choo-choo?"

"Barby pole," said Nuttsy.

"Get up there," gritted Joe. "You're going to have a good time if it kills you." Nuttsy squirmed and kicked a light bulb off the counter. Joe ignored the accident. He was working up a fury of interest in the train. "Look at 'er go!" he shouted. "Choo, choo, choo!" He reached over and threw a switch. The engine uncoupled its coaches, raced to a corner, leaped the track and crashed into a stanchion. I tried to seem like a guy who just happened to be looking, but Pudding was faithful. She plucked at Joe's sleeve.

"We better get away from here," she whispered. "I think the floor manager is looking this way."

Going down the aisle, Nuttsy stuck out his hand and cleaned off a counter of acrobatic dolls. Feeling ashamed of my former disloyalty, I joined in the scramble to pick them up, but not before a fat woman had stepped on a Donald Duck. We put that under some others. By this time Nuttsy was sucking on a red boat.

"Don't you know how to act in a store?" Joe demanded. The boat was restored, but now Nuttsy was wailing again. He snatched up a box of jack straws.

'You don't want that," said Joe. Now what would you do with jack straws? Come on, let's go see Santa Claus."

Seeing Santa Claus involved standing in line. Nuttsy only succeeded in dumping two ash trays during the wait. He submitted to a hug from Old Nick, who buzzed in a resentful ear and gave him a picture book.

"Have you been a good boy?" asked Santa.

"Barby pole," said Nuttsy.

"That's fine," said Santa. "Come back and see me." He turned to the next in line. Unaccountably, Nuttsy now wanted very much to see Santa and had to be dragged away, screaming.

When we got to the automobile Joe sank back into his seat with a contented smile. Then he discovered that Nuttsy was clutching two halves of a candy cane, a miniature of the one on display.

"Barby pole," said Nuttsy.

"When did he swipe that?" Joe demanded.

"I paid for it," said Pudding.

"Gee!" sighed Joe. "It's great to be a kid at Christmas time."

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The President And The People

MR. CHURCHILL seems to be the only statesman in the world who really believes that the people can and should be enabled to understand the war. Certainly he is the only one who goes to them whenever events have taken a new turn and tells them even in broad outline what has happened and why it has happened. Surely, the willingness to explain what he has been doing is, even more than his great gifts of speech, the secret of his leadership. Mr. Churchill does not deal with his people on the assumption that

LIPPMANN

"Someone had blundered:
Theirs not to make reply,
Theirs not to reason why
Theirs but to do and die."

For while he accepts full responsibility for the great decisions, he also holds himself fully accountable for them. Having explained the reasons which led him to make the decisions, he not only allows his people and their representatives to pass upon them. He insists that they must pass upon the decisions and take their share of the responsibility. This is how the democratic method can, when it is really used, strengthen and unify a nation. Mr. Churchill says little about democracy in the abstract. Yet he does more about it in practice than any other living man. He knows that a leader remains close with the people when he acts on the belief that they can be trusted. He has proved in this war that the people respond by feeling that they can trust a man who trusts them.

OUR PRESIDENTIAL system of Government does not lend itself as readily as the parliamentary system to this reciprocity between the leader and the people. The President, unlike the prime minister, is irremovable; Congress, unlike the House of Commons, is not responsible for the executive, and cannot be compelled, on pain of dissolution and an appeal to the people, to accept the responsibility of supporting the Administration or of changing the Administration.

Thus the habit of intimacy and frankness between executive and Congress is not promoted here, and there has rarely been an American President who was on terms of trust and friendship with Congress. American Presidents, be they Roosevelt or Wilson, Hoover or Coolidge, are not in the habit of explaining themselves as Churchill explains himself. They announce, they proclaim, they declaim, they exhort, they appeal and they argue. But they do not unbend and tell the story, and say why they did what they did, and what they think about it, and how they feel about it. Thus the general effect is secretive and stand-offish, which certainly does not warm the heart in a time of trouble.

YET ADMITTING all the difficulties of our political system, above all the appalling irresponsibility in speech and action which is so often displayed on the floors of Congress and in the committees, it is certainly disconcerting that the first account of the meaning of what happened at Pearl Harbor, and that the first explanation of the strategic position in the Pacific, should have come from the prime minister of Great Britain. That will not do. Mr. Roosevelt has a long, hard, bitter war to conduct, and he cannot conduct it successfully without explaining it continually to the people.

Programs, pronouncements, and publicity releases are no substitute for the story and the explanation from the lips of the man who is finally responsible. All the "morale-builders"—a horrid word which is enough to destroy any one's morale—from O. C. D. to O. F. F. will be of no avail unless and until Mr. Roosevelt forms the habit of confiding in the American people as Mr. Churchill confides in the British people. The American people are not children, and they will have to be treated as adults if they are to face the grim future as men and women.

* * * *

THE STORY which Mr. Churchill told is that he had to make a hard choice. Should he make his main stand in the Middle East on the great front which runs from Russia through Western Asia to Africa? Or should he make it in the Far East? The British Empire was not strong enough to be equally strong in both places at once, and priority had to be given to the one or the other.

There were several reasons why he chose the Middle East rather than the Far East. It was the place to block Hitler's drive not only to the oil wells but into the Indian Ocean and through the back door to Russia, to India, and to a meeting with Japan in the Far East. Perilous as is the position of Australia and the Netherlands Indies today, it would be ten times worse if the Middle Eastern front had collapsed, and Hitler were able to cooperate with the Japanese. Difficult as is the war with Japan, the prospect would be infinitely poorer if Churchill had abandoned the Middle East and had let Hitler strike at Russia from the rear. For it must never be forgotten that Russia, though not at war with Japan, is one of the very great powers in the Far East.

He made his choice also because there was an American battle fleet, capable of menacing Japan in the Pacific. He could not know that Japan would be able to strike a crippling blow at that fleet, and that the effects of that blow would mean that the whole strategy of the Pacific war would have to be suddenly and drastically revised and improvised.

YET THAT is the fact of the matter, and there would be less confusion of mind here and in Australia and in China and in the Indies if, now that the earlier and proper reasons for military secrecy are no longer valid, the President would tell the story and explain it.

He can give no aid and comfort to our enemies which they have not already gotten by the facts themselves and by their propagandistic exaggerations of the facts. And he can give much aid and comfort to the people and to our Allies. For courage is contagious, and courage in telling the truth is the best of all ways to give men the courage to deal with reality.

HE CAN, thereby, dispel the poisonous impression that he and his advisers mean to wage a soft war in the Pacific. And he can, if only he will say out loud what is unmistakably in his mind and his spirit, make it plain to all his subordinate commanders that the war in the Pacific is not to be conducted in the spirit of the huddle in Pearl Harbor but in the spirit of MacArthur, and of the pilots and submarine crews in the Strait of Macassar; and that it will be fought remorselessly and relentlessly—not a year hence, not when every bureaucrat's dream of perfection has been realized,—that it will be fought now using all the forces available and accepting the risks with at least as much daring and cunning as the enemy has displayed.

Cox Alleges 'Gestapo' in FCC

By the Associated Press

Accusing Chairman James Lawrence Fly, of the Federal Communications Commission, of maintaining "an active and ambitious Gestapo," Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, proposed on the House floor yesterday that Congress investigate the FCC.

Cox said he would offer legislation for the inquiry as soon as possible.

"Mr. Fly . . . is using a good law to a bad end," the Georgian declared. "He is guilty of a monstrous abuse of power and is rapidly becoming the most dangerous man in the Government. He maintains an active and ambitious Gestapo and is putting shackles on the freedom of thought, press and speech, without restraint."

Cox asserted that "in the pretended regulation of the broadcasters, which need regulating," Fly was "breaking down those freedoms which guard all others" and "is taking advantage of the stress of the moment to Federalize all means of communications."

Meanwhile, Dr. Frederick S. Siebert, director of the University of Illinois school of journalism, told the commission yesterday that newspapers "should have the same privileges as other citizens" in the ownership of radio stations.

Testifying in the commission's investigation of newspaper-radio relationship, Dr. Siebert said newspapers "deserved to be considered" because of their long training in the coverage of news and opinion.

"My impression is that the monopoly that might be created is not as dangerous as the entering wedge of discriminations against newspapers as newspapers," he said.

30,000 Cannon a Year

London, Jan. 28.—Supply Minister Lord Beaverbrook revealed tonight that Britain is turning out cannon at the rate of 30,000 a year—four times as fast as during the World War—and that Anglo-American cooperation is so close that it took President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill only an hour to agree on sending American troops to North Ireland.

Reporting on the recent Roosevelt-Churchill conferences at Washington, and on supply problems in general, he said Britain was aiming at a production goal of 45,000 guns of 2-pounder and larger types by the end of 1942.

He said that one hour after Churchill stepped from a plane at Washington he was with the President, and that less than an hour later Mr. Roosevelt said, "We will send the troops."

"I do not hesitate to make the exact results of production public, because Britain will be heartened and the enemy will not be comforted," Beaverbrook said.

"We are turning out guns, 2-pounders and over, at a rate of 30,000 a year. It is great gun production. By the end of the year 1942 it is estimated by the director general of weapons that the output will reach the rate of 40,000 a year. I predict a rate of 45,000."

"I now declare that the output of filled shells and armor-piercing shot has kept step with the production of guns."

He said the United States and Britain had pooled all their raw materials under one control, "and Britain takes a very large dowry to the marriage, for we had more raw materials in the last quarter of 1941 than ever before since the war began.

"But don't let this assurance give you any confidence for the future, for we shall need increased quantities of the principal raw materials as production in Britain goes up.

"This increase in production seems to be the subject for doubt and anxiety in some quarters. I do not share the pessimistic viewpoint. I know better things can be done, and certainly we will try very hard to provide more munitions."

But Beaverbrook warned that production is not big enough. Although Britain would be well caught up with its own needs if it had no other nations to supply, materials must be sent to Russia, China, New Zealand, Canada, the United States, the Middle East, the Near East and the Far East, he said.

"There is no end to what we must send other countries. The only target for production is the limit of production—the greatest possible output."

Churchill took the leadership in building relations with the United States, "but never did he build so boldly as at Washington," Beaverbrook said.

"Of all the services he has rendered, this in my judgment stands the highest. The partnership for munitions and raw materials is the gift of all gifts he has bestowed upon us.

"He has guided our American policy since early 1940 with never a mistake, with not one miscalculation, not one failure to understand the people he represents or the people he dealt with. In relations with Americans he has taken the right decision every time. He never failed."

The first Roosevelt-Churchill meeting at which Roosevelt consented to send troops was "worthwhile," but there was "much to follow," Beaverbrook said in describing the series of conferences at the White House.

After days in which experiences of the British in obtaining and manufacturing military supplies were discussed by both British and Americans, a final conference was held at the White House attended by the President, the Prime Minister, William S. Knudsen, then head of the OPM, and Harry Hopkins, first director of lend-lease aid.

"The program had been hammered out over many days," Beaverbrook said in describing the scene. "The President said, 'Bill, do you give me the high sign?' Bill did so, and the program for 1942 was settled.

"One o'clock was a good time to put a paper before them, for they lunched each day together in the President's office. Lunch was served at the President's desk and our Prime Minister did not even have a place to put his legs.

"When night came they were still at it, holding meetings, seeing chiefs of staff, listening to discussions, reading reports, hearing arguments. Then they had dinner, together in the President's library from trays brought up through a long corridor by attendants.

"After dinner they would sit on a leather sofa, one at either end. Churchill would talk of his plans for the campaign, his hopes and fears for the future. He would explain India and enlarge on the west and north Atlantic and discuss Australia and the Far East.

"Occasionally we would go there and bring the talk back to production. Airplanes, tanks, antiaircraft guns, antitank guns—these were the subjects we talked about. Ships to carry the goods, ships for soldiers, ships for the Navy and always raw materials, an anxious subject."

Ferry Line Halt Stayed by O'Conor

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 28 (AP).—Gov. O'Conor granted a reprieve today to the Romancoke-Claiborne ferry service, which tentatively had been scheduled to be abandoned Sunday.

O'Conor said a Talbot County delegation had protested Tuesday against the proposed discontinuance of the ferry. Civic and citizen groups have pledged themselves to seek more business for the ferry.

During the next few months, State roads commission officials will check the ferry's receipts to ascertain whether more persons make use of it than heretofore, O'Conor said.

Mobilize For Peace

By Alfred Friendly

Idea Of Post-War Slump Is Scouted

THE PRODUCTIVE power of the Nation mobilized for war, can be mobilized for peace with equal efficiency, to give the Nation the highest standard of living it has ever known, with full employment under private business.

This is the optimistic conclusion of a special report issued yesterday by the National Resources Planning Board, which holds that the wartime income level now projected can be maintained after the conflict, with production directed in useful, rather than in lethal, channels.

The study, prepared by Dr. Alvin H. Hansen, noted Harvard economics professor and special adviser to the Federal Reserve Board, rejects the thesis that a post-war depression is inevitable. The view is not supported by past experience, Dr. Hansen concludes.

POINTING to the expansion of productive resources being brought about by the war effort, and to the vast growth of skilled labor accomplished by the present training program, the economist declares that with a "positive governmental program" of full employment, new enterprises will grow up and old enterprises will expand "to produce a substantially higher real income for civilian needs than any ever achieved before in our history."

Although extensive Government planning, is required, and probably Government spending, to guarantee a "sustained demand," the job of production can be done by private business, the report asserts.

A considerable section of the report is devoted to the thesis that continued Government spending after the war will probably be necessary. Private business, Hansen declares, has been able to sustain demands for only limited periods, with the result that "private industry and Government together must act to maintain and increase output and income to provide substantially full employment."

Denying the argument that there is not sufficient civilian demand to keep America at its peak productive rate, Hansen lists a varied field of endeavor to which American resources must be devoted after the war.

He writes:

"There is plenty of work to do. We need improved manufacturing equipment to produce more and better goods at lower prices. We need to carry on extensive research in the laboratories of our great private corporations, in our universities, and in Government bureaus to create new products and develop new processes. We need to rehabilitate and modernize our transportation system—by land, water, and air.

"We need continued advance in the techniques of production, distribution, and transportation; in short in all those elements that enter into a higher standard of living. We need to rebuild America—urban redevelopment projects, rural rehabilitation, low-cost housing, express highways, terminal facilities, electrification, flood control, reforestation.

"Many public developmental projects open fresh outlets for private investment. We need a public health program, including expansion of hospital facilities. We need a nutrition program. We need more adequate provision for old age. We need higher educational standards in large sections of our country. We need a program to improve and extend our cultural and recreational facilities. We need an enrichment of the material and spiritual resources of our American way of life.

"We have seen how it is possible to mobilize the productive capacities of the country for war. We can also mobilize them for peace."

IN FACT, Hansen points out, the demands which will not be able to be filled during the war may build up such an appetite that there may well be "a strong post-war boom," which will constitute the "gravest danger," in that it may "lull us to sleep" and end up in a depression.

The study, entitled "Post-War Planning," proposes a six-point program to be followed for the war's duration:

1. High corporate income and excess profits taxes;
2. Sharply progressive estate taxes;
3. Broadening the base of individual income taxes, together with steeply graduated surtax rates;
4. Sharp increase in excise taxes on those commodities that compete, for materials or facilities, with the war program requirements;
5. Part payment of wages and salaries in defense bonds; and
6. Qualitative shifts in the components of consumption.

AFTER the war, however, the report urges that the broadened tax base and graduated tax structure be retained, but that defense consumption taxes be sharply reduced. In addition, it calls for "adequate plans" by both the Government and private enterprise for expansion of productive activity in manufacturing, railroads, public utilities and housing (to be done by private investment) and public works of all sorts (to be done by Government financing).

Poles, Czechs Plans Post-War Federation, Customs-Unions

The plan of the Polish and Czecho-Slovak governments in exile for a confederation of states in their area of Europe after Hitler's defeat was described here yesterday.

In a joint press conference, Jan Ciechanowski, Ambassador to Poland, and Col. Vladimir Hurba, Minister of Czecho-Slovakia, made public the terms of the plan, which is in striking contrast to Hitler's "new order" and probably forecasts the real "wave of the future" in parts of Europe now in the Nazi grip.

The Polish-Czecho-Slovak plan of confederation follows the conclusion of a Greek-Yugoslav agreement along similar lines. Together these pacts are regarded as the kernels of Balkan and central European federations that will stretch from the Baltic to the Agean.

The Polish-Czechoslovak declaration, made public here yesterday, says that the purpose of the confederation is to assure a common policy with regard to foreign affairs, defense, economic and financial matters, social questions, transport, posts and telegraph.

Common General Staff

"The confederation will have a common general staff," the declaration says, "whose task it will be to prepare the means of defense, while in the event of war a unified supreme command will be appointed."

It also calls for a customs union, an agreed monetary policy, a common plan for railway, road, water and air transport, cooperation in educational and cultural matters, and travel between the federated countries without passports or visas.

The constitutions of the states in the federation, the declaration says, will guarantee freedom of conscience, freedom of speech and equality of all citizens before the law.

Ambassador Giochanowski and Minister Hurban told the part now being played by Polish and Czecho-Slovak troops to smash Hitler. The Polish envoy mentioned the Polish National Air Force, now fighting with the R. A. F. This has been described by professional airmen as the "hottest" outfit of fliers in Europe. The Czecho-Slovak fliers in England also have been highly praised.

Poles During Fliers

Ambassador Giochanowski said that a fighting force of 100,000 Poles is now being formed in Russia. It is made up, he said, of Poles who were military prisoners in Russia and also of volunteers among the million and a half Poles who were deported to Russia. In addition, he said, 25,000 Polish soldiers will leave Russia to reinforce Polish outfits in Libya and in the British Isles.

Minister Hurban said that citizens in his homeland had been discouraged from shooting German officers. They were encouraged instead, he said, to go in for sabotage through slow-down and other methods.

Hurban told of the exploit of a munitions worker named Vacek in German-occupied Pilsen, and of what he did to reduce the size of the German general staff. Fourteen German officers visited the Pilsen munitions factory on an inspection tour. They happened to get under a cauldron of molten metal. Vacek, who was operating the cauldron from a crane, dumped the metal on them, killing all. Then Vacek dived from the crane and committed suicide.

WPB Restricts Metals for Lights On Yule Trees

Santa Claus will suffer a semi-blackout, the War Production Board ruled yesterday, in an order which will cut down the number of lamps on the Christmas tree.

The ruling, designed to save 221,000 pounds of nickel, 2,874,000 pounds of brass and 295,000 pounds of copper this year, cuts the use of these vital war metals by 50 per cent in the manufacture of lamps used mainly on Christmas trees, or for advertising, decorative or display purposes.

Consolingly, the WPB declared that through elimination of non-essential lamps, substitution of other materials and more economical use of the critical metals, the industry undoubtedly can meet all essential civilian and industrial needs.

Eicher to Mount Bench Feb. 16

Edward C. Eicher, recently confirmed by the Senate as the new chief justice of the District Court here, is expected to don his judicial robes of office on February 16.

Eicher, head of the Securities and Exchange Commission until his appointment to the bench, lunched with the District Court judges Monday and is understood to have told them that he hoped to assume office on that date.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Private Purkey

Dear Oscar: I have not heard from you for over two weeks now. I am awful worried for fear you may have been moved out of camp and maybe off to some war front. I hope you would not go away without letting me hear from you. If this reaches you soon please drop me a line at once. I am crazy about you. With lots of love. DOLORES.

Dearest Dolores: Gee things are happening so fast I do not even get time to stop at a camp mail box no more. I think I am at the same camp I was when I last wrote you but am not certain on account of so much action. All I know is that I am not on no transport yet because I can still retain my chow. And Sergeant Mooney is still in fine health and as noisy as ever witch he wood not be if he was on the ocean on account he is a bum sailor two.

But anything can happen and it can't happen two soon so far as I am concerned as I am itching to get at them Japs and Heinies like everybody else in my outfit is. A few months ago all we wanted to do was to get finished with army life and get back to our homes but what has happened since has gave us a new picture of the set-up and I know that while I did not even feel up to fighting a landlord six months ago I am now soar because I can't get right in there and battle them Rising Sons of you know what.

A fresh order has just come through and I have got to close now with more love than ever for the only girl in the world. I will write again if I get a minute.

OSCAR.

Dear Oscar: I was so glad to hear from you again. In a way I hate to think of you getting into action but I know how you feel and I know it will make me proud when I see your name in the citations which I am sure will happen. I suppose you read about that Lieut. Bulkeley from Long Island City who took one of those speedboats into a bay and torpedoed a Japanese ship. I never read of a heroic act like that without feeling that you would do the same thing. It was such a thrilling exploit, just like in the movies.

I will write you a long letter tonight. This is just a note I am rushing from the office my darling. Oceans of love. DOLORES.

Dearest Dolores: You will never know how much it means to get a letter from you, no matter how short. You are a great kid but I wish you wood get your mind off the navy. It was a swell piece of work that Lieut. Bulkeley did but I wish you wood concentrate on the army and forget all about the sailor end of the service. And do not send me "oceans" of love as I do not like the water.

I seen one of them PT boats when they first came out, in fact I got a ride on one before I got drafted. That was when I thought I might join the navy but the first half hour in one of them things cured me. They are really a floating rumpus room. I took you out in an outboard speedboat a couple of summers ago and you remember how we got slapped around.

Well these PT boats are part speedboat, part airplane and part electric washing machine and the way you get pounded around is nobody's business. The fact you have a bunch of high explosives on deck don't make it more fun neither.

All I can say that Lieut. Bulkeley didn't have to wait for the citation to be a hero. He was a hero the minute he got aboard one.

Gosh, I have got to close again as Sergeant Mooney is yelling for me to do some more dirty work. More later. All my love and remember the army is as brave as the navy and do not worry about any sailors. OSCAR.

P. S.: A buddy just showed me some dice with skid chains on 'em. He says they are for work in a jungle. Maybe he knows something.

Fair Enough

Little Economic Consequences

JOE CALLED up to say goodbye and thanks for past patronage because he is going out of business at the end of the week. He said the gasoline and oil business just about paid his rent and the help, while the tires and accessories gave him his living. Now, already, some of the people are laying up their cars or using them so sparingly that they consume hardly any fuel and oil, so he has laid off the boys and is winding things up, anticipating that by next fall, at the latest, many another like him will chuck it. Anyway, Joe's simple but deadly estimate of his situation shows him that starting right now, or even two weeks ago, with no tires to sell he is through.

PEGLER

Joe is no head to fret about big economic consequences. He isn't multiplying himself by some score-by-innings statistic representing all the other guys named Joe who run gas and service stations throughout the country and the drivers who deliver the fuel in the big trucks and the office help 'way back yonder in the system by which fuel, oil, tires and all take shape from raw materials and travel to the service stations. It makes no never-mind to him that the advertising agencies which handled the copy for his goods are laying off help and that in the newspaper shops, with the decline of such linage and revenue, there will be corresponding declines in the mechanical and advertising and editorial staffs.

It isn't that he is selfish or intentionally indifferent. It is merely that he is just Joe, an individual, who has always assumed that these big, formless, soulless powers of commerce and industry were as reliable as the solar system. He doesn't know that his last name is legion. In fact, it isn't. It is Gross. Joe Gross, age 40, married, with two kids, a little home and a mortgage.

JOE ISN'T soldier stuff at the present stage of the war, at his age and with his dependents, so he is going to take one of those Government courses and become a mechanic, because the country around him is crowded with plants in which they are beginning to make war things. They are enlarging the vacuum cleaner factory down the line, but not to increase their vacuum cleaner capacity. Old, cold stacks which didn't give a cigarette's worth of smoke for years and years, are hot around the clock and at night the interiors are bright and men are working at machines.

Joe is no part of a machinist, for all his years around a service station, but he knows the anatomy of the ordinary automobile engine and is handy enough with a wrench, so he figures he can learn to be a machinist. Anyway, that is the obvious thing to try, and he might be pretty good at that. What else would he do? Become a headwaiter at the Waldorf, with his how's-tricks personality and those rough and grease-stained hands, or study for the opera with that newsboy's voice?

The gas company may try to find an optimist to take over the spot and struggle along, but it is a game that no man can win. Joe has it figured out right. No tires, no margin to live on and the longer no tires the fewer the cars in action and the smaller the volume of sales of fuel and oil. Even the parking lot goes. Who is going to park what on no tires?

So probably the gas company will uproot the pumps and the owner of the real estate will have his place back on his hands when the lease expires and not even good for a vegetable patch with all that gravel and the oil saturation. But the taxes will grind on just the same and when they have ground just so long the owner will give it back to the Indians, and Joe will be working at a lathe in some brass plant turning out thousands of some little things for a rifle, gun or shell and probably earning nearly as much in pay out of taxes via the war-order subcontractor as he margined for himself on the tires. He probably will lend some of it back to the Government for bonds because he is patriotic and wants to do his bit to make the world safe for his children.

The men who push the big tank trucks and the overland boxcars heavy with freight which rumble past Joe's place on the post road are in a fix, too, for the tankers must vanish when Joe quits business and the freighters, after all, roll on rubber, too. And them with families and some of them with mortgages, too.

Only a few years ago over in Munich a shrieking, shrewish nut in a greasy raincoat, with an insane glare and a Chaplin mustache, was first beginning to squawk that he would rule the world or bring it down in ruins about him and Joe and all of us saw him in the movies and laughed and laughed.

Prices Bill Likely to Be Law

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt was authoritatively reported yesterday to have decided to approve the much amended price control bill and at the same time issue a strong statement saying that it does not go far enough in its intended control of war-time inflation.

Well-informed sources said that Mr. Roosevelt had no choice but to sign the measure, even though it differed materially from the legislation he recommended to Congress last July.

They said that the President probably would suggest that the restrictions placed around farm price ceilings might hamper the whole price control program. The legislation, on which the Senate completed Congressional action Tuesday, would forbid the fixing of price ceilings on agricultural products below some of the highest levels in history.

A Congressional friend of Mr. Roosevelt said yesterday that once the President had the basic power to fix prices, through an administrator, he would be in a much better position to ask for strengthening amendments. A veto, he pointed out, would only reopen the six-month controversy.

The prgram, as approved by Congress, would authorize a price administrator to place ceilings on any prices which threatened to become disproportionately high and impede the war effort. The base period for all such ceilings except on farm products would be from October 1 to October 15, 1941.

No agricultural ceilings could be fixed at less than the highest of one of the following: 110 per cent of parity, the average market prices from 1919 to 1929 or the October 1 or December 15 market level. Parity is a price which would give farm products the same purchasing power they had in 1909-14.

Moreover, the prior approval of Secretary of Agriculture Wickard would be required in order to establish a ceiling.

Bombs, Torpedoes Combine to Dedicate First Lady of Greek Stage to U. S. Audiences

Katina Paxinou Will Play Title Role In 'Hedda Gabler'

By Bernard Freeman
Associated Press Staff Writer

Boston, Jan. 28.—A couple of bombings, a torpedoeing and a little matter of a near plane mishap—add them together and you have the reason why Katina Paxinou, first lady of the Greek theater, is going to do her acting in the United States this season.

When the war closed off the Mediterranean as a route home from London, Mme. Paxinou started for Greece via the United States and across the Pacific.

She had been bombed out of her London hotel twice and, she admits there were some moments when she wasn't quite sure she was going to reach America.

One of these was on a dark night, ten months ago, when the ship on which she had started across the Atlantic was torpedoed.

She rushed to the deck in her pajamas and won a seat in a lifeboat. A seaman handed her a pair of dirty dungarees, and the actress—hailed by some as the greatest European discovery since Duse and Bernhardt—was tickled to death to get them.

"We spent 18 hours in the open boat before a destroyer picked us up and took us back to Scotland," she said.

Makes Fresh Start

She made a fresh start a few months later by clipper and had a few uncomfortable moments when there was a near crash after the takeoff from Lisbon, but the rest of the trip was made in safety and now she's here for the duration while the rest of her family, including a daughter, is still in Nazi-dominated Greece.

Somewhat slight, with jet black hair and features that are stunning rather than beautiful, Paxinou speaks half a dozen different languages—and prefers to talk about the theater in all of them.

She's been on the stage 14 years and had to break with her family to get there.

To Play Hedda Gabler

"My parents thought it was beneath the family dignity to go on the stage, but I broke all my ties with them and I was the first person from society to become an actress.

"Now, thanks to some success, things are different, and I am again a favorite daughter."

Mme. Paxinou was here in 1931 to play a part in "Elektra," done in Greek, and learned quite a bit about American idiom and American character—enough, as a matter of fact, to learn to complain about hotel food prices.

"Why, the nerve of them," she said, speaking of the hotel where she was staying, "to charge $1.05 for orange juice, rolls and coffee, when so many people are starving in Greece and in Europe."

To provide Mme. Paxinou with a suitable vehicle for her American debut in English, Producer Luther Greene has dusted off Ibsen's old war-horse, "Hedda Gabler." It opens in New York Thursday.

She's had only two weeks of rehearsal in a part which she's never played before—not even in Greek—but she thinks that her interpretation of Hedda—that of a ruthless, unyielding, neurotic woman—will provide some food for discussion.

Paxinou is a discovery of the famed Canadian-born London producer, C. B. Cochran. She was playing in London with the Greek National Theater in "Hamlet" and "Elektra" just after the start of the war when Cochran, in the audience, spotted her.

"He came back stage after the performance and asked me to play for him," Mme. Paxinou related. "I couldn't that year but I came back in 1940 and I did Ibsen's 'ghosts' with him.

"'I' will never forget that engagement," she said. "We opened the night Dunkirk was being evacuated, but even though the news was so horrible, the theater was packed for the next two weeks, which is quite unusual since 'Ghosts,' as you know, is not a very cheerful play."

Mme. Paxinou hopes to master English well enough to play in some of Eugene O'Neill's plays in this country. She considers the American playwright the greatest living author, and has been his chief sponsor in Greece by both translating his works and acting in them.

"To the Greeks, O'Neill means more than any other foreign author," she said, "because he writes about man's inner conflicts, and of the land and the sea."

Bomber Crews Carry Good-Luck Pieces on Hops

London (INS).—Many members of R. A. F. bomber crews carry some personal possession with them whenever they fly over Germany. There is usually a story attaching to these objects.

One bomber pilot keeps in his pocket a small splinter from a bomb which wrecked his home. Another carries a cigarette holder bought in Berlin before the war.

An observer's cigarette case is flattened and will no longer hold cigarettes; it has twice saved his life and he regards it as a bullet proof jacket. He never flies to Germany without it.

A rear gunner carries a small piece of chocolate. He once drifted for some days in a dinghy after coming down in the sea.

"While I still had a piece of chocolate," he says, "I felt there was a good chance of rescue. It was somehow a link with land. It brought me luck then and it only seems fair to give it another chance."

Moscow Again Has an Air of Normal Life

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow.—It's difficult to realize that only a few weeks ago Moscow was almost within range of Nazi guns.

This Soviet capital gradually is assuming the aspects of normal city life. People are returning constantly, settling down again in apartments from which many of them moved when Soviet authorities sent them into safer areas.

Everyone won't be brought back because scores of industries and business enterprises have been moved to other sectors, where they will remain during the war. Thus it may be some time before Moscow again is a city of 4,000,000.

From one point of view this is a happy feature. The city long was overcrowded. Now this situation has been eased.

As I look out of my window, there is a peaceful city scene.

Children tramp up and down the broad, unscarred streets to and from school. Automobiles—plenty of them—move leisurely out their various businesses. Street cars and buses rumble along, with people waiting at every stop quite as usual.

Underground the subways operate normally. Even there you see little or no evidence that they have been used as air raid shelters. To the casual eye they are as spick and span as an operating room.

The chief reminder that a grim war is going on is a sea of graphic posters which engulf many walls and windows. They promise further victories to come; advise against discussions of the war, lest some secret be given away; mock Hitler and his lieutenants.

Many of these are humorous, people stop to look at them, say something to other bystanders, then move on. Naturally soldiers are to be seen everywhere. You get the impression that in a couple of minutes Moscow could mobilize a couple of armies from its broad streets.

Plenty of Athletics

Sports events go on without interruption. Big hockey games are played every week. There is plenty of public skating, taken to enthusiastically by young and old.

Theaters are operating in full swing—I got tickets to see a folk-dancing pageant on Saturday night and the ballet Sunday afternoon. The movies are as popular as ever.

Last night by moonlight I walked across a spacious, well-swept square to see a movie in a packed house. The audience was composed of people of all ages—reflecting like people everywhere, their happiness over the capture of Mozhaisk.

Newspapers are being published regularly. The gas, light and water services function satisfactorily. There doesn't seem to be anything wrong with the Russian transportation system, either, for you can buy such things as tangerines from the south, sweets from the Orient and caviar from Astrakan.

Old System Held Cause For Disaster

By Maj. Alexander P. De Seversky
United Press' Air Analyst

The report on the Pearl Harbor inquiry has rightly alarmed the American people. In the interests of American victory, it is to be hoped devoutly that the alarm will be deep encugh to stir us into quick and decisive action.

What is called for, however, is not punitive action against individuals directly or indirectly responsible for the extent of the disaster. The need is for far-reaching reform of our military set-up as prelude to a thorough revision of our strategic thinking.

There is some danger that the two officers singled out for special blame, Admiral Kimmel and Gen. Short, will be made scapegoats for a state of affairs infinitely larger than they are. Without condoning their gross negligence and complacency, it should be recognized that they are in a sense the victims of our congealed strategic ideas.

Their failure to credit the likelihood of a Japanese attack by air is not to be wondered at, since both the admiral and the general are typical products of Army and Navy training, in which air power is regarded as an accessory rather than an independent weapon. It is psychologically impossible for certain men trained to think in terms of surface operations to lift their minds to the level of modern aviation.

Significant Passage

There is a significant passage in the Pearl Harbor report:

"The commanding general, Hawaiian department; the commander in chief of the fleet and the commandant Fourteenth Naval District; their senior subordinates and their principal staff officers considered the possibility of air raids. Without exception they believed that the chances of such a raid while the Pacific Fleet was based upon Pearl Harbor were practically nil. The attack of Sunday, December 7, 1941, was therefore a complete surprise to each of them."

Such underestimation of the role of air power is not unique. On the contrary, it is typical of the Army and Navy minds in the upper brackets of authority. The one certainty is that, precisely as it brought us disaster in Pearl Harbor, it will being us greater disasters elsewhere unless that mentality is removed from places of power.

The key to their strategic illiteracy is in the phrase "while the Pacific Fleet was based upon Pearl Harbor." Clearly these military and naval men assumed that the presence of a strong surface fleet would deter enemy aviation. They have failed to catch up with the lessons taught by the whole course of this war, namely that only air power can fight air power, and that air power has been relentlessly in pursuit of surface naval forces all over the globe, which it has destroyed whenever it made contact.

Far from scaring off Japanese aviation, the presence of the fleet was probably the principal temptation for making the air attack, since surface vessels in harbor offer the easiest targets for air power.

Another important fact implicit in the report which deserves emphasis is that there existed in the Hawaiian area no service specifically charged with the responsibility of guarding the "air ocean" which covers land and sea alike. That responsibility was divided vaguely between the Army and the Navy, neither of which accepted it as any more than an auxiliary or side-line function.

Magna Carta, Shown Here, Has Germs of 'Four Freedoms'

Magna Carta, which was visited by an estimated 10,000,000 people during the six months it was on exhibition at the World's Fair, New York, has been in the Library of Congress in Washington since. It faces the Declaration of Independence.

Recalling that it was on June 15, 1215, that the Archbishop Langton, the bishops and barons of England, together with the citizens of London, wrung from the reluctant King John the "great charter," G. T. Hankin, distinguished historian and former inspector of the British ministry of education, who was in charge of the Magna Carta at the fair and who is now in this country, writes:

"The charter contains many provisions which are now out of date but the germs of the 'Four Freedoms,' which have been so eloquently enunciated by President Roosevelt and for which democracy is striving today, may be discerned in some of its 61 clauses.

"'Liberty of conscience' in the modern sense of the term, was not a medieval idea. The Protestant Reformation, and the claim of the right of individual judgment was then 300 years in the future. But Clause 1 of the great charter—'The church shall be free and have her whole rights and liberties inviolate'—affirms that there is in the world some spiritual power other than force, and calls upon the King to respect it.

Rights of the Taxed

"Clause 12.—'No scutage or aid shall be imposed in our kingdom'—is perhaps the most quoted and misinterpreted section of the whole document. It has been used to support the claim of Parliament to control all taxation, to refuse money to the King and so to control his actions. Its real meaning is that the barons took to themselves the right to settle whether they would pay shield money (in lieu of military service) or other taxes. Nevertheless, here one can discern the beginning of the control of taxation by those who have to pay it, the very basis of democratic government.

"Clause 13—'The City of London shall have all its ancient liberties—and all other cities, boroughs, towns and ports shall have all their liberties and free customs'—is a recognition of far-reaching importance of the rights of the townspeople in the days of feudalism, when the landowner was all powerful and when the king and barons controlled almost all the armed forces. Democracy has its roots in local self-government. The archbishop and barons, greedy though they may have been for their own rights and privileges, gave in this clause an opportunity for the merchant class, and the townsfolk, to weld themselves into self-governing communities whose wealth and manpower, as trade increased, gave them eventually a deciding voice in the affairs of the kingdom.

"The stark simplicity of Clause 40—'To no man will we sell, to no man will we delay, right or justice'—brings the mind back to the present day, to the horrors of the prison and the concentration camp.

Far Off Freedoms to Some

"Indeed, these 'four freedoms,' claimed 726 years ago, would constitute a very charter of freedom for Europe today—freedom of the church, freedom to control taxation, freedom for local self-government and freedom of the individual. How remote, what a far off mirage must they seem to the Norwegian, the Frenchman, the Czech and the Pole.

"Magna Carta was forced by June 19, monish scribes had copied its crabbed Latin phrases on parchment so that its provisions might be read aloud in every township and bailiwick in England and men might see the royal seal that took the place of a signature. It was indeed a great step forward that the ancient rights of the people—

"'Ancient rights unnoticed as the breath we draw:
"'Leave to live with no man's leave underneath the law'

—should be proclaimed publicly.

But the battle was not won. The struggle continued through the ages, both within and without England. Within Britain, a King's head had to fall before the people truly gained their freedom. And in the British Empire the 13 colonies in North America were forced to take up arms to obtain that freedom.

Colonists Wanted Rights

The colonists in 1776, revolting from George III of England, declared that their rights under the Magna Carta had been disregarded by the King and his servants, and that, therefore, rebellion was justified. They won and took with them the ideals foreshadowed in Magna Carta, from which, indeed, the American Constitution is the direct descendant.

"Nevertheless—'The price of freedom is perpetual vigilance' the 'Four Freedoms' must be proclaimed again and again, perhaps even defended by force, as Britain and the Dominions know.

"Rudyard Kipling, in his poem, 'Song of the White Man,' wrote:

"'Now this is the faith that the white men hold
When they build their homes afar,
Freedom for ourselves and freedom for our sons

Heavy Squalls Sweep Strait Of Macassar

Macassar Strait, where the United States Navy announced the sinking of a number of Japanese ships, is one of the broadest of the many channels which separate the islands of the Netherlands Indies, says a bulletin from the National Geographic Society.

"Situated between the east coast of Borneo and the west coast of the smaller island of Celebes, this strait at its widest extent is 185 miles across," the bulletin points out. "Even at its narrowest, at the northern outlet to the Celebes Sea, it stretches more than 70 miles—a distance some three times that of the Strait of Dover between England and the German-held coast of France.

Over 8000 Feet Deep

"Macassar Strait (also spelled Makassar) is generally regarded as difficult for navigation because of its many coastal shoals, small islands and strong currents. It is particularly hazardous during the present season of January and February, when rain, heavy squalls and rough seas are the rule. The strait is among the deeper bodies of water found within the Netherlands archipelago, having a maximum depth of more than 8000 feet.

"Southwest of the Philippines, by way of the Celebes Sea, the Strait of Macassar offers the most direct route from the still embattled United States islands to the chief Netherlands island of Java. A 4000-mile link between the Celebes and the Java Seas, it is approximately as long as Florida's Atlantic Coast. It accounts for about a third of the journey from Mindanao, in the Philippines, to the important Netherlands base of Soerabaja, Java. The strait, therefore, can be reached relatively easily by airplanes from the base.

Former Oil Outlet

"Although less important commercially than the Malacca Strait (between Netherlands Sumatra and British Malaya), and certain other traffic routes athwart the Netherlands Indies, the Macassar Channel is an outlet for several active ports.

"Balikpapan, about halfway along the west coast of the strait in the Netherlands portion of Borneo, was a busy oil distribution center. Now in Japanese hands, it was completely destroyed, according to official reports, along with all of its extensive petroleum properties, before the invaders reached it.

"Southeast across the strait, although not directly on it, is the Celebes capital and chief port of Macassar. Long an important trading center of the East, and now equipped with first-class port facilities, this city normally handles import-export business dealing in goods from Europe, Asia, and the Americas. Its annual shipping amounted in peacetime to more than a million tons.

WAR-TIME HOUSING CALLS FOR NON-CRITICAL RED CEDAR SHINGLES

A product of nature endowed with insulative qualities and natural preservative oils, Red Cedar Shingles provide protection against extremes of weather when used for roofs and exterior walls.

In describing cedar wood, the late George B. Sudworth of the U. S. Forest Service stated: "Great durability under all sorts of exposure is its most important commercial quality."

Not listed among "critical defense materials" and readily available everywhere, Red Cedar Shingles offer excellent service for war-time housing projects, for farm buildings, and for remodeling and repair.

In areas of the United States and Canada where tremendous industrial expansion has developed, Red Cedar Shingles are providing attractive, serviceable and permanent roofs and sidewalls for scores of housing projects.

Actual blueprints, detailing the recommended application practices for various types and designs of Red Cedar Shingle roofs and sidewalls are available free of charge from the Red Cedar Shingle Bureau. These will prove of especial interest to builders, architects and engineers. Consult W. D. Richardson, representative of the Red Cedar Shingle Bureau, 4120 Edmunds N. W., Washington, D. War Output Chief Defends $1-a-Year Men

By Milton Magruder
United Press Staff Writer

Donald M. Nelson did some plain talking to Congress yesterday about his new post as chief of America's vast war production drive.

He said flatly that he will accept full responsibility as "the goat" if the armament program bogs down. But he reminded that Congressional attacks on dollar-a-year men make it difficut for him to obtain "good men" to fill vital posts.

Testifying at his own request before the special Senate Truman Committee, which recently shocked Congress with its report of war production lags, "unconscionable" profits on arms contracts and "lobbying" by dollar-a-year executives, Nelson said he has "everything to lose and nothing to gain" in taking over one-man control of the armament program.

"I'm ready to be the goat," he said.

Asked by Senator Ralph O. Brewster (Republican), of Maine, whether he would stand firm against any legislative, executive or judicial attempt to interfere, Nelson replied:

"I'm not interested in politics in any particular. I recognize it's a business you must learn from childhood—just like the mail-order business.

"I'm here for one purpose, to put this program over."

Chairman Harry S. Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, told Nelson the committee had "fought to get you this job and we'll fight to help you carry it out."

Nelson and Senator Joseph H. Ball (Republican), of Minnesota, tiffed briefly on the question of dollar-a-year men when the Senator remarked that they have an "unconscious bias" toward maintaining "status quo" in industry and asked if many of Nelson's division heads were in the dollar-a-year category.

"Yes, sir; they are," he replied, "I believe the men I have picked in key jobs are men who believe, as you and I do, that we must do an all-out job on this defense conversion."

Ball interposed that their "one trouble is that their whole psychology is toward maintaining the present industrial setup."

"Isn't that criticism of all businessmen?" Nelson asked. "Wouldn't that be true whether or not they are on a salary basis?"

Ball conceded that it would, but added that he felt "the subconscious holdback" was partly the cause of failure to expand wartime production.

"I think that is partly true," Nelson said.

He characterized the use of dollar-a-year men as necessary to obtain the "maximum results from industry," and laid down four strict rules for their appointment to prevent abuse;

1. They should be "of outstanding business or technical ability, of unimpeachable integrity, and especially qualified for the work for which they are chosen."

2. One should not be employed if a man of equal ability is found "with reasonable effort" and induced to serve "on a regular Government salary basis."

3. None should be hired for a position in which they could make decisions "directly affecting" affairs of their own firms.

4. Appointments should be made after "thorough investigation" by an appropriate Government agency.

Jack Devereux Joins the Marines and Hopes To Pick Up Where Uncle Left Off at Wake

Another Devereux, his fighting Irish blood at boiling level over what the Japanese did to his uncle's men at Wake Island, has enlisted in the Marines, it was revealed yesterday.

This one is brown-eyed John Ryan Devereux 3d, 19-year-old nephew of Maj. James Patrick Sinnott Devereux, who commanded the gallant defenders of Wake. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Devereux, 1 West Bradley Lane, Chevy Chase, Md.

Jack, as he's known to his schoolmates at Landon School for Boys in Bethesda, Md., has one hope that surges through him like a fire: He wants a crack at the Japanese who stormed Wake.

"He has been very much worked up ever since Wake was attacked," his mother said. "We persuaded him to finish this semester at school, although he wanted to go even earlier.

"He hopes to go to the Pacific and to meet the Japanese. 'The sooner the better,' he says."

Jack would have been graduated next spring from the Landon School. For the record, he is under draft age and enlists in the Marines as a private.

He carries forward a brilliant heritage. The Devereux family has had many soldiers. Jack's grandfather organized an ambulance corps here in World War I after seeing service in the Spanish-American War, and his father, now an engineer employed by the Government, joined the Army and fought in France at the same age Jack is joining the Marines.

Jack's uncle, the man who led the Wake defense, has been an especial idol of his nephew. They have considerable in common, including their great love for horses. Jack is captain of his school's riding team and was in the show at Fort Myer last night.

Scribner's Writer Seized as Jap Agent

British "Herald," of Lake Geneva, and for other publications. Summoned in the Lake Geneva investigation, Townsend vanished and did not appear until after the Pearl Harbor attack. The indictment accused Townsend of violating the Foreign Agent Act and of criminal conspiracy.

Frederick Vincent Williams, publicity man for the California Democratic State Committee in 1928 and 1932, later publicity aide for the Japanese ship line Nippon Yusen Kaisha in connection with the Manila Eucharistic Congress in 1937. Accused of conspiracy and nine counts of false registration as a foreign agent.

David Warren Ryder, former newspaper man and alleged associate of Townsend and Williams. Accused of conspiracy and failure to register.

Tsutomu Obana, secretary of the Japanese Chamber of Commerce in San Francisco, who has been interned as an enemy alien. Accused of conspiracy and four false registrations.

K. Takahashi, former San Francisco manager of N. Y. K., and S. Tekeuchi, of Mitsuibishi, the Japanese financial house. Both accused of conspiracy, these men returned to Japan before the war began, taking records of their operations.

The consuls general alleged to have conspired with these six are K. Shiosaki and Toshito Sato, who have also returned to Japan.

The indictment followed months of investigation by Special Prosecutors Arthur B. Caldwell and Albert E. Arent of the Department of Justice.

Shiosaki, Takahashi, Takeuchi and other Japanese set up Jikyoku Iinkai, also known as the Japanese Committee on Trade and Information, in September, 1937. The indictment said the mission of this committee was to spread propaganda to influence American public opinion against China and in favor of Japan.

Townsend and Ryder wrote and edited pamphlets and articles intended to bring this about, the indictment said. Williams was alleged to have been press agent for Jikyoku Iinkai, giving lectures himself and arranging for them to be given by others favorable to the interests of the Japanese government.

To conceal their propaganda activities and mask the true mission of Jikyoku Iinkai, the indictment said, the accused men entered into a conspiracy to withhold registration statements required by the Foreign Agent Act and to suppress important facts from the statements that were filed.

This conspiracy arranged for dissolution of Jikoyku in 1940, the indictment said, but the propaganda work went on. Williams then registered as representative of the newspaper, Japan Times and Mail, the indictment charged, but concealed the facts that his real job was to plead Japan's case and that he drew his $350 a month salary from the Japanese consulate general in San Francisco.

The Associated Press in San Francisco last night reported that Williams blamed his indictment on "enemies."

"I have written and talked with the object of keeping peace on the Pacific," Williams was quoted as commenting, "and have made enemies of the Communists and others. Now there's war instead of peace. I've warned my people how strong the Japanese were and told them they couldn't be pushed over in three months."

Ryder appeared before United States Commissioner in San Francisco and posted $5000 bond.

He denied that he ever had any business dealings with any of the people indicted with him. He said he wrote to the Secretary of State offering to register as a foreign agent because of his publication of the magazine, "Far Eastern Affairs."

The magazine, he said, was friendly to the Japanese peace party.

Green Attacks House Report As Anti-Union

By the Associated Press

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor declared last night that the report of the House Naval Committee on defense profits constituted a "slur on the record of the American trade union movement."

A majority report January 19, signed by 14 members, blamed strikes as "the greatest single cause of delay in the defense program" and asserted that "tremendous financial gains" made by unions during the defense effort "present an astounding picture of concentration of wealth, hitherto usually associated only with industry and finance."

Green said in a statement that the "committee's conclusion that the American trade unions have sought to benefit from the defense program to the detriment of the public interest is utterly without foundation or substantiation."

"The committee's failure to examine and report on organized labor's contribution to defense and the cost of such contribution sustained by trade unions is conclusive proof of the committee's antilabor bias."

The A. F. L. leader said that the "astounding picture of concentration of wealth" contained in the report was based on findings of the committee that 117 labor organizations, whose membership totals 6,065,832 members, increased their assets by $10,679,294 during a year and one-half, extending from October 1, 1939, to March 31, 1941.

Green said it was a matter of "simple arithmetic" that the figures represented an increase in assets of $1.75 per member for a period of 18 months, or 9.7 cents per member per month. For the 3,276,566 members of the 81 A. F. L. unions alone, he continued, there was an increase in assets of $2.28 per member for the 18-month period, or an increase of 12.6 cents per member per month.

Dies Forecasts WestCoastTragedy

American Bund and the Kyffhauserbund. The amendments were eliminated in conference, and, in accepting the conference report, the House rejected Dies' contention that, without his proposed changes, the measure will fail to reach "the large class of foreign agents in this country."

Opponents of Dies' amendments contended that they lacked constitutionality. Representative Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, Judiciary Committee chairman, asserted that the bill, as finally passed, covered every individual or association of individuals acting as foreign agents.

Off the House floor, Dies said that evidence gathered by a Japanese undercover agent for the committee in months of investigation, included a map disclosing the Japanese plan of attack in the Pacific.

Existence of this exhibit, together with other documents and information in possession of the committee, Dies said, was made known to top officials in the State Department and other Government agencies, who induced him to withhold public disclosure because the Administration feared publication might plunge this Nation into war by antagonizing the Japanese.

Dies said he came to Washington last September prepared to open hearings on Japanese espionage at Hawaii. About 45 witnesses were ready to testify, he said, including a Japanese commercial attache who had agreed to "tell all."

"But I let them talk me out of it by asking me if I wanted to be responsible for sending this country into war," Dies declared. "It was the biggest mistake of my life."

"In a few weeks our committee will release a full report on Japanese espionage and sabotage," Dies asserted on the floor. "This report will contain many official letters and it will disclose that if our committee had been permitted to reveal the facts last September, the tragedy of Pearl Harbor might have been averted.

"The letters and documents in our possession may shed more light on the true situation than anything that has yet been made public. It will reveal the true attitude of official Washington toward the whole fifth column question in all its aspects.

"That, of course, is water over the dam. What is important, however, is that there be an immediate end to this suicidal policy of coddling the tools of foreign powers. No nation can defeat the uniformed soldiers of the enemy unless it first defeats the uniformed and secret soldiers of the enemy in its midst.

"A fear of displeasing foreign powers and a maudlin attitude toward fifth columnists was largely responsible for the unparalleled tragedy at Pearl Harbor.

Defending the Capital . . .

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

The Washington Provisional Brigade, top "show" segment of the Army, has put aside ceremony for the time being and turned itself into a part of the "fighting forces."

Almost any bayonet one could run into around Washington would be held by one of its soldiers—for the brigade, its size upped to 6000 since Pearl Harbor, is the nucleus of all the forces guarding the Capital City.

At bridges and utilities, around the White House, and in Capitol Hill buildings its men are on 24-hour duty. They occupy all the tents along the Potomac and all those on the other side of town along the Anacostia.

Commanded by Brig. Gen. Albert Cox, former Washington attorney, they are the boys Washingtonians can yell for as the "hometown army." Some are regulars and some are National Guard, and — like other Washingtonians—they come from all States in the union. Specifically, they are the Third Cavalry from Fort Myer, Battery C of the from Fort Myer, the 703d Military Police Battallion from the Arlington Cantonment, and—since war began—the 176th Infantry from Fort Meade.

Fored in 1921, the brigade is now having its second contact with wartime conditions, although most of its officers are World War veterans. Its first was with the bonus marchers in 1932.

Some of the brigade soldiers think the bonus march the most dramatic event in their careers. Others select burial of the Unknown Soldier, of which the brigade had charge.

Visit of the King and Queen of England provided the brigade with a job almost equal to the one which comes each four years with inauguration of a President.

In the brigade is the top-ranking noncommissioned officer in the United States Army—Master Sergeant A. C. Baty. Serg. Baty, who is in charge of the President's color detail, has carried the flags of all Presidents since and including Harding. He is the man who hands the wreath to the President and visiting dignitaries when they visit the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Armistice Day is the time he remembers best each year. It recalls his World War days, and he always gets to wear his special blue ceremonial uniform and stand close to the President.

Sergt. Baty was supposed to retire yast year. He was at the White House for the last Army and Navy reception when someone passed his retirement plans on to President Roosevelt. The President called him over and remarked the idea seemed a shame "when there's so much of you left yet."

Sergt. Baty decided the President was right, did not retire. He's been in the service for 31 years. "That's how I got to be the Number One sergeant," he says. "Someone has to be it, and I just stayed in the longest."

In addition to his other duties, Gen. Cox is provost marshal of the munitions and new War Department buildings. Assitant provost marshal is Lieut. Col. Don Lowry.

Col. H. B. Smith is the brigade adjutant, Col. R. H. Barrett is executive officer, Lieut. Col. William F. Rehm its plans and training officer. Gen. Cox is its thirteenth commander.

Capt. Colin P. Kelly, Jr.

The Washington Post presents this series on the life of Colin P. Kelly, jr., from first-hand information given by the parents and the widow of the war hero, as well as boyhood friends and neighbors in his home town. The widow of Capt. Kelly, who has unsparingly given her services to the Red Cross, has declined all offers of remuneration as a result of her position after her husband's heroic death.

Chapter XII

'. . . A Place Among the Immortals'

By Carol Frink
As Told by His Parents and Widow

MADISON, Fla., Jan. 28.—When Capt. Colin P. Kelly said goodby last September 5 to the wife and baby he was never to see again, he started on a transpacific formation flight now rated as one of the greatest in aviation history.

His destination, then a secret kept even from his wife, was the Philippine Islands. To avoid Japanese patrols it was necessary to make the flight from Honolulu to Fort Stotsenburg over an uncharted route which took the formation deep into the south Pacific. Most of the long route had never been flown before.

On the seven-day flight, which was made in four-engined bombardment planes, were 75 officers and men under command of Maj. Emmett O'Donell, jr., of Brooklyn, N. Y. There were three majors, three captains, and 23 lieutenants.

All officers and men who made the flight have been recommended to the President for awards of the Distinguished Flying Cross for "heroism and extraordinary achievement." Thus Capt. Kelly had already been cited for heroism even before his spectacular sinking of the Japanese battleship Haruna.

A few brief letters, dispatched from faraway places with strange, romantic postmarks found their way to Madison in the weeks after Colin's flight, but they were heavily censored and gave little information. In one, from Borneo, Colin told his father he was receiving American bombers as they were flown there. Another letter came from Australia.

Then there was a letter to his mother from the Philippines, telling her he had sent her a present—a present that, so far, has not arrived.

"I always wanted a big white silk shawl," Mamie Kelly explained.

"I had asked Colin to send me one. I used to tell him, 'every time I'd put it around my shoulders I'd think it was your arms keeping me warm.' "In Hawaii Colin looked for the shawl but wrote me he couldn't find just the one he wanted," Mrs. Kelly said.

"But in the letter from the Philippines Colin wrote:

"Mother, here's where you get your shawl,' and he said he had mailed it to me."

"I suppose," Mrs. Kelly added, "It was on a ship that was sunk. My lovely shawl is probably at the bottom of the sea."

In looking through their letters from Colin, Mr. Kelly came upon one in which Colin, an absorbed student of world affairs, predicted the war in which he was to lose his life with uncanny accuracy. Dated August 25, 1940, the letter read:

"The world situation is getting no better fast, I think, and I am more convinced than ever that our first trouble will be in the Orient. I made that prediction about a year ago and was told by certain people who should have known better that I was wrong.

"I still believe that. While we may be drawn into the conflict on the Atlantic, England will still furnish the bulk of the force and we will be something of a supplementary force. The situation will be reversed in the Orient, however.

"WHEN THINGS START TO POP THERE WE ARE GOING TO BE PRETTY MUCH IN THE DRIVER'S SEAT. And while we should get some help from the British and Dutch, we will be the big man there. Even the help we might receive from the British and Dutch will be of American origin to a large extent . . ."

THE last word from Colin was received by his mother and father almost a month after his death. It was postmarked the Celebes, and dated Armistice Day, November 11. It was a picture postcard of a curious, rather ridiculous thatched native hut, hoisted aloft on stilts. In the message Colin suggested the house as a plan "for the lot in town."

The lot in town was a standing family joke. Mamie Kelly explained for years the Kellys had a lot in the best part of Madison, building dreamhouses that constantly changed in plan. But though on the point of breaking ground many times, they always decided, at the last moment, they couldn't bear to leave the old place in the country.

On the ninth of December, Mamie Kelly attended a church supper given in honor of the new preacher at the Presbyterian Church. During the course of the evening members were asked to say a few words of welcome to the Rev. H. R. Gladney, and when Mrs. Kelly's turn came, she concluded by asking "all of you good people to pray for the safety of my boy across the sea."

When Daisy Smart asked her, after the summer, where Colin was, Mamie Kelly replied that she didn't rightly know, but supposed he was in Australia.

On the morning of December 12 the Kellys, though early risers, had not turned on their radio for the 6 a. m. news broadcast. But Mr. Kelly's brother, Dr. Claude C. Kelly, was listening at his home in Hartford, Conn. He was the first member of the family to hear the news of Colin's death. He put in a call to Madison at once and, as gently as he could, broke the news to his brother. Then he took the first train to Madison.

MAMIE Kelly's first words were not concerned with her own loss, but with her country's gain. She said:

"I want to give honor where honor is due — to God, who gave me this glorious son. We have prayed with and for Colin from boyhood that he would be an honor to his God and his country and his name. He took the Bible for his guide, wherein true greatness lies. He was faithful in his duty to God and country."

Colin's father commented shortly: "I'm proud that he did his part for his country."

The news came to Marion Kelly in Brooklyn, N. Y., where, with little Corky, she had been staying with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore A. Wick, since her arrival from Hawaii on Thanksgiving Day.

"I'd rather have Colin than anything else in the world," she told newsmen. "But if he had to go, I'm glad it was this way. I know he had no thought of glory for himself, but only to do his best for his country."

Marion brought Corky to Madison on the first train she could get out of New York that day.

"I would have taken a plane, but they were grounded by the weather," she told this writer later. "I wanted to get Corky to Colin's mother and father as quickly as possible, so they'd feel they still had something to live for in Colin's son."

MARION herself feels that Corky is her own purpose in life now. She told me:

"I've always been crazy about my baby, of cqurse, but now that his father is gone you can't think how much more he means to me. I felt so greatful for him—so happy to have a small replica of Colin—that I even wrote to the doctor who delivered him, and thanked him all over again.

"Now," the slim, dark-haired girl who smiles "because Colin loved my smile," told me. "I must be both father and mother to Corky. I can't very well make plans for our future life until this war is over, but when it is I will make a home for us.

"I want to go back to the work I did before I was married, so I can support my son. But I don't want to trade on Colin's name—I don't want a job that's offered me just because I'm a hero's widow.

"Colin," she said, "will never be forgotten. But I will be forgotten very soon. And when that time comes I will go out in the world and find my place."

Mrs. Kelly, jr., quickly plunged into Red Cross and other war work. Along with the hundreds of letters of sympathy and encouragement she has received from people all over the world, have been a few critical ones from persons who thought she should have retired into deep mourning.

"Colin wouldn't want me to do that," she told me. "He would want me to carry on, and for his sake that is what I am determined to do. It would be a luxury to sink myself in grief, but there is no time for that now. The country is at war and the work of every person is needed."

Speaking of her husband's self-sacrifice, Marion told me:

"Colin knew, I'm sure, that he would be the last man in the plane, and that he would land it if he possibly could. I think he wanted to save as much of the ship as he could—particularly the bombsight. He wouldn't want that to fall into enemy hands."

She takes consolation in the fact that Colin proved a pet theory in sinking the Haruna.

"He used to dispute Navy claims that 'it takes a battleship to sink a battleship'," Marion said. "He said it could be done from the air. When I heard of his death, that's one of the first things I thought of. Bless his heart, I wanted him to know that he had succeeded — that he had proved his point. Colin has always been something of a pioneer."

AMERICA was quick to acclaim Colin Kelly as the first hero of the new war. President Roosevelt wrote a letter to the "President of the United States in 1956" asking that Colin P. Kelly, 3d (Corky) be appointed a West Point cadet.

Legislation was introduced in Congress to award the Congressional Medal of Honor posthumously.

The town of Monticello, where he was born, gave a 500-acre tract of land to the Government for an airport to be named for him. The Tampa Tribune started a "Corky Kelly Educational Fund" and Spessard L. Howard, Governor of Florida, accepted the chairmanship. Plans for permanent memorials were started in a number of sections of the country; at Marion, Ala., where Colin attended the military institute; at Charleston, S. C.; at West Point, and of course, at Madison.

But the most touching tribute of all was paid the hero in his own home town when his friends, neighbors and relatives for miles around gathered at the Presbyterian Church on Sunday morning, December 21.

The century-old church, where Capt. Kelly was baptised, and still held his membership at the time of his death, was decorated with white flowers and American flags.

Madison was silent and deserted while everybody in town attended the services. A section had been set aside for "Mistuh Colin's" Negro friends, and outside the overflow heard the memorial service by means of a loud speaker. Army planes roared a last salute overhead.

The choir with whom Colin used to sing, sang the West Point Alma Mater. The new preacher offered a prayer, the mayor and Judge Kelly each talked and finally the Rev. Lathan, Colin's lifelong friend, spoke. The elderly man who used to joke with Colin, spoke in a voice that trembled with personal sorrow. His words were few.

"A grateful Nation has given to Colin Kelly a place among the immortals," he said. "He died that religion and liberty might live . . .

"I think I can hear the great Commander in Chief saying, 'Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord'."

THE END.

For Home Safety and Comfort During Blackouts

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Household Editor

Air-raid shelter at home is a subject uppermost in the minds of Washington homemakers. Much has been written about the methods and materials needed to prepare a refuge room in the home.

While the problems in making a refuge haven vary in homes, yet there are many general principles to consider. If you are a bit hazy as to the planning of your room for air-raid protection, the suggestions given by a local department store by means of an exhibit room completely fitted with blackout and combatant accessories, will be of much interest. This air-raid refuge room is open to the public so that all citizens may see the precautionary suggestions outlined by the Office of Civilian Defense

The room is pictured here, with Capt. J. W. Kay, of the District of Columbia Fire Department showing Miss Marian Clear how to adjust the nozzle of the spray of the hose to combat incendiary bombs. Capt. Kay says a spray should be used—not as a stream of liquid—and always the stream should be broken with the thumb and not with the thumb pressed against the nozzle.

Lucite Artist Terms Plastic 'Black Magic'

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

THAT LOVELY transparent material, lucite, which is used for many modern things we have in our homes today—bowls, boxes, clocks, ornaments, even furniture—is a man-made miracle of the chemical laboratory. Though most of us are familiar with what it looks like, few of us understand it, and so I asked Scott Wilson, a leading designer who works a good deal with lucite, to explain something about how it "works." And this is what he told me:

"Lucite frankly baffles me. It is defined rather formidably as a methyl methacrylate resin, but in everyday language it is a crystal-clear plastic with about the hardness and flexibility of a piece of white pine. It has about one-fourth the weight of glass and is not nearly so easily broken, and its chief chemical components are coal, tar, air and water. This is undoubtedly true, though I often suspect that a certain amount of black magic has also entered into its making. The raw material is sold to fabricators in two forms: First, as a powder for use in injection and compression molding; and second in clear shiny tubes, rods and sheets of various diameters and thicknesses. I use the material in these last forms, and the most practical way to work out new models is to put on a pair of overalls and go into the factory myself. Of course, I do my original planning on paper in my studio in New York. Then twice a year I go to the factory in California and launch on a working spree.

"The material heats quickly and must be watched carefully for if it reaches too high a temperature, bubbles are liable to form in it, producing a somewhat decorative but not always desirable effect.

Enliven Wintry Room by Plants

A SPLASH of color for wintry rooms—the Kalanchoe with its profusion of tiny flame-colored blooms.

Plants transform the house, during these blustery months. And you can grow beauties almost anywhere, if you know the right plants for the right spot.

Kalanchoe and cactus are happy neighbors in a sunny window—both like sun. Bed the cactus in a sandy loam, the Kalancho in porus gritty soil. In a novelty container the picturesque cactus won't be overshadowed by Kalanchoe's eye-compelling color.

But perhaps you have a north window to contend with or would like to brighten a part of the room that doesn't get direct sun.

You can still grow the vivid green and white-striped pandanus, with its long sword-like leaves, or the brilliant purple-flowered African violet. In winter, pandanus likes its leaves sponged occasionally with warm soapy water. African violet flourishes if you give it lots of water—but, please! none on its leaves.

In a spot that's moderately sunny—what can't you grow! Shy yellow primroses, the lovely star begonia with pointed star-shaped leaves, the iris-like marica!

For sheer beauty on a small scale nothing surpasses a little terrarium. Give your friends something to talk about—a real woodland scene in miniature, planted in a brandy sniffer or a tiny fish bowl. You can work a little miracle with moss, pebble and fern!

Our 40-page booklet, "Success with House Plants and Flowers," gives complete directions for making fascinating terrariums and dish gardens. Tells how to grow flowering and foliage plants, bulbs, ferns and vines. Advises on watering, repotting; checking pests.

Send 15 cents (plus 1 cent to cover cost of mailing) for our booklet, "Success With House Plants and Flowers," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Youth's Enlistment in Navy Prompts Sweetheart, A College Girl, Who Has Loved Him Eight Years, To Consider Marriage, Against Parents' Wishes

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 20, in my junior year at college. For eight years I have been going with a boy just my age, and we are very much in love. Two weeks ago he enlisted in the Navy, and in a few weeks will be sent away to school, which will give him a chance to become an ensign in the Naval Reserve.

The prospect of being separated for an indefinite—but certainly very long—time is already resulting in almost unbearable emotional strain. But if we were to marry, in order to establish "a sense of unity in absence"—as you once said in one of your columns—my parents would refuse to keep me in college, and I still have a year and a half to go before graduating.

Although we have been going together steadily for eight years, my parents have never fully approved of this young man—mostly because he comes from what they term "a lower social class" than the one to which my family belongs. My problem is this: Should I continue in college unmarried? Or should I marry and keep it a secret, therefore finishing my college work, which I dearly love? Or should I marry him openly, and take the consequences, whatever they may be? Your advice will be greatly appreciated. Sincerely, LETITIA.

Marriage Inadvisable In This Instance

DEAR LETITIA: Since your social status, as well as your psychological attitude, is still that of dependent school girl, I would consider it extremely ill advised for you to marry this boy, at this time. Inasmuch as you have some years to go, before you will have completed your formal education and proved yourself capable of being economically self sufficing in emergency—years, indeed, which in all their ramifications of experience will mark your transition from girlhood to young womanhood—it seems to me right and proper that you should follow a course of action in the immediate future that is dictated more by common sense considerations than by sheer emotional turbulence.

Until you have developed (by philosophic practice) the qualities of patience, self-control, fortitude and optimistic adaptability to temporarily obstructive circumstance, in addition to the ability to be financially self-supporting, you must be adjudged too immature in character, too "unseasoned" socially, to contract a marriage which, at best (and regardless of its other conjecturable assets) positively cannot offer you either economic security or continuous emotional consolation during the years just ahead.

Moreover, despite the fact that you are currently demoralized by the prospect of being separated from your sweetheart by the hazards of war for an indefinite period, I am convinced that you will do better work as a student if you refrain from plunging headlong into the maelstorm of incalculable emotional stresses and psychological complexities that are the inevitable concomitant of a "war time" marriage.

If you have the intelligence to sincerely wish to "come of age," in mind and spirit and potential social usefulness, your work as student offers you the straight road to individual progress at this time. By pursuing it, while remaining faithful in your heart to your love, you will be making a greater contribution to the boy's peace of mind than you would be in saddling him—if only psychically—with responsibility to a wife.

And while you cannot, of course, comprehend this truth today, your schoolgirl love for the boy—"grande passion" though it may seem to you to be—can never exact the same toll of your nerves, under the pressure of separation, while you retain the psychic insulation of your status as his fiancee, as it would if you had been briefly his bride, and then circumstantially divorced or dismissed from his life.

Therefore, the best advice I can give you is (1) to dismiss the idea of immediate marriage to the lad as a tantalizing mirage born of "wishful thinking;" (2) to deal honorably with your parents by accepting their continued support on the terms they hold out, and (3) to devote the next 18 months to the "good citizen" business of completing with credit the full-time task at hand, namely: your "dearly loved" college work. In so doing, you will be at once developing strength of character to withstand the exigencies of this hour in history, and cultivating specifically fruitful social abilities—such as the world needs and you will need, when you have reached the age to claim full emancipation from parental authority. M. H.

What Men Think Of Women's Styles

By John Harkins

This is one of a series on what men in varied pursuits think of women's apparel.

WE SAW a few days ago a picture of a Hollywood damsel skidding down a snowpile in a cellophane ski suit. It was quite revealing. Furthermore, if you think this style sample is meant to suggest that anything goes in women's clothes this year, then you are thinking in excellent form this morning. Anyone who wants to take to the hills now has fair warning.

• • • •

Hollywood listening posts the other day he reported that the woman of 1942 would wear just what she liked, or just what she was certain the other girl in the theater foursome was sure not to like, and men could make the best of it.

• • • •

"The ladies—Bless 'em all," as James Cagney sings in "Captains of the Clouds"—will continue to treat the hat situation with humor and wit, if those are the words for it. The new hats, says our man with his ear to the ground, include dunce caps with feathers, little felt scuttles, turbans that have a draper around the neck (suggesting a very femme fatale or a very sore throat) and huge berets designed to make the wearer look very smart or very like a spaniel. Furthermore, the women are going to wear their hats right in to dinner, according to an ordinarily reliable authority. Ann Sheridan wears her hat right in to dinner in "The Man Who Came to Dinner." In this instance, however, it should be pointed out that she has some justification, since Monty Woolley refuses to check his beard outside.

• • • •

There is something to be said about hair, as usual, and it is confusing to the male animal, as usual. Hair, according to the West Coast prophets, is going up like taxes. There will be pompadours that go up in front, or up in back, or up on one side and over to the other. And bangs that turn under or up. In addition, a lot of youngsters will continue to wear that bob that droops over one eye, creating that sheepdog look, but presumably a lot of persons like sheepdogs, too.

• • • •

What every gentleman probably is waiting to hear is the advance word on skirts. Well, they will be longer and shorter, which should please everyone. In the daytime, when visibility is good, they will be longer. For the evening the women speak now of a gown of "ballerina length," which should give you an idea. There is, also, something for the evening that is both longer and shorter, shorter in front and longer to the file closers. This is all very confusing.

• • • •

Hostess gowns, pajamas and other such frilly-thrillies should be left to the confidential advices of Miss Katherine Vincent. This unwilling spy will shift to the safety of shoes, sports wear and umbrellas. Shoes probably cannot get any clumsier-looking, so there is not much to fear on that point. Sports wear, we are told, is becoming more and more functional, but we would not know much about that, since the only sports costume we have paid much attention to is the bathing suit, which generally seems just about to serve its purpose (but don't ask us to say what that purpose is). Umbrellas were carried by women to football games, and that, men, has been our Munich. Perhaps something can be done about that before another football season rolls around.

Ancient Beauty Aids Still Show Results

Cleopatra's beauty ritual has been rediscovered by Hollywood's stars. It's been refined, of course, but it has the same old base: herbs provided by nature.

Screen actress Rosemary de Camp is partly responsible for this revival. It all started on location for Alexander Korda's "The Jungle Book," when she resorted to this treatment as a cure for a skin ravaged by wind and sun.

This is the procedure. When the face has been cleansed with an herb cleansing-cream, it's covered with a coating of skin-food with the same base. Then the face is held for several minutes over a steaming pan of herbs. At first the skin looks too pink, but soon it's soft and smooth and glowing. And a thin layer of herb foundation cream leaves the face in an ideal condition for what little make-up is needed.

For South Now, North Later

If you are fortunate enough to be going to Florida, this two-piece costume of silk shantung, is just the thing for Southern climes. Royal Doulton Chinaware inspired its designer, Anthony Blotta. The rouge velveteen pocket-flaps furnish interesting color contrast. Note also the hand-painted miniature plates for buttons. The outfit is appropriate for late spring, as well as resort wear. Beguiling simplicity, as noted throughout the dress, is typical of Blotta's styling.

Slim the Hips To Look Trim In Uniform

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOU are to wear your defense uniform with requisite dash, you'll have to acquire a military figure. It's broad shoulders you want—waistline and hips should be trim and slim.

But the way you look isn't nearly as important as the way you feel, and the small amount of regular exercise needed to keep your muscles elastic and your fingers firm will also keep you feeling fit and alive.

A daily half-dozen will do the trick. You perhaps need a couple to nip in the waist, a couple more to counteract the pull of gravity and tone the muscular girdle, and a pair of streamliners for the hips. Here is a sample trio—and these exercises will put you back in shape in short order, but they are not intended for beginners or sissies.

TO SUPPLE THE WAIST

POSITION: Stand on one knee with other leg stretched out at sides, arms stretched overhead, and hands grasping a wand near each end.

MOVEMENT: Stretch up, then bend to alternate sides, touching end of wand to the floor. Repeat with position of legs reversed. It's a difficult stretcher, but it's streamlining. Repeat not over six times, then work up to 12.

TO TONE THE MIDRIFF

POSITION: Lying on back on the floor, legs straight down, arms outstretched on floor overhead.

MOVEMENT: Slowly come up to sitting position, arms outstretched and bending over touch hands to toes. Then slowly lower backward to starting position. Five times for that exercise, gradually increase to ten.

TO SLIM THE HIPS

POSITION: Lying on left side on the floor, right hand on floor in front for support, legs stretched down.

MOVEMENT: Make wide circles with the top legs, swinging the leg from the hip socket. Circle six times in one direction, relax, then circle six times in the opposite direction. Relax. Change sides and repeat with the other leg.

There are any number of hip slimmers that you can take from this same position of lying on the side, legs extended: raising the top leg high in the air is good exercise, or you can shuttle into action with the side scissors, moving the legs back and forth like a scissors.

At the finish, shake legs vigorously from hips to rid these muscles of tension. Then take a good stretch, followed by relaxing, to loosen up all your muscles and leave you feeling rested.

No More Hooks

In keeping with the conservation of materials for defense, the blouse makers are on the job. Over-the-skirt versions with surplice bodice closing are new and different. They tie on, sometimes with an extra long sash which encircles the waist in girdle fashion.

Wipe Rubbers After Wearing

Mud-splattered rubbers and galoshes are an unpleasant sight and spoil any costume. It is inevitable that they should get soiled while plowing through slush and snow, but they need not be left in their ugly condition.

Make it a habit to wipe the footgear with a cloth wrung out in cool sudsy water as soon as they are taken from the feet. Dry with a clean cloth—and the rubbers or galoshes will be ready for the next day of rain, or mud, or snow.

Capital Whirl

By Hope Ridings Miller

"I'm just going to keep the home fires burning," said Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley when I asked her yesterday if she had any immediate plans for joining her husband in New Zealand. . . . "I'm happy about his appointment because I know he's happy," she went on. "He was in the last war; he loves to be in the line of action. . . . I'll just keep the family together here and await further developments."

Mrs. Patrick Hurley

Most of Washington's tea table talk turned on the new job given to Col. Hurley, who was recently nominated to be brigadier general and who is believed even now to be on his way to the post as America's first Minister to New Zealand. . . . Seems an ideal choice. . . . With New Zealand and Australia as two of the most valued outposts of the United Nations, there's every reason to have an exceptionally able man in the job. . . . And, as everybody knows, the new Minister brings to his post an exceptionally wide knowledge of military matters (having served in France in the first World War) and also of administrative government (having admirably held the position of Secretary of War in the Hoover Administration).

Knows How to Keep a Secret

News had just begun to circulate that Col. Hurley had been nominated brigadier general when Mrs. Hurley appeared at an after-the-concert party at an embassy a few evenings ago. . . . By common consent, she was the most beautiful woman in a room filled with beautiful women. . . . Her powder blue crepe frock, cut on simple lines, exactly matched her long kid gloves and her whole costume was a perfect foil for her flawless white coiffure. . . . Always gracious, she answered question after question about her husband—yet never dropped a hint about the appointment of which even then she must have been informed. . . . Yes, she had been told he would not be on the front firing line; but as to where he would be stationed exactly—well, that was on the lap of the powers that be. . . . She wasn't cagey about it, yet she cleverly refrained from giving out the slightest bit of information. . . . And after hearing about her husband's new appointment yesterday, and realizing she knew all about it that evening recently, I realized there was one woman who could keep a secret . . . without seeming smug about it. And that, my good reader, takes a bit of doing in a town as snoopy as this Nation's Capital.

Whether—come spring—Mrs. Hurley will move back to Belmont Plantation, the family home near Leesburg, she does not yet know. . . . For several years the family have come into town for the winter and then with the early spring breezes have returned to their Virginia home—a great red brick Georgian house, built in 1796 by Ludwell Lee, son of the signer of the Declaration of Independence—same family, of course, as that of Robert E. Lee, of later and greater fame. . . . It was there, one snowy April day in 1940, that the eldest daughter of the family, Patricia, became Mrs. Henry Beall Gwynn. . . . Ruth, second Hurley daughter, made her bow to Capital society in November in the Massachusetts Avenue house that the Hurleys leased for the winter.

Mrs. Henry Beall Gwynn

Mary Hope Hurley, the youngest daughter, is still in school; and so is the only son in the family, 17-year-old Patrick Wilson Hurley, who had been known as "Wilson," but decided a few months ago to start calling himself Pat. So just plain Pat it has been ever since.

When Walter Nash, first New Zealand Minister to the United States, arrives in Washington he will find his country's legation ready and waiting. . . . The former home of the State Department's James Clement Dunn, the Observatory Circle residence has been redecorated in the past few weeks, but the job now is finished and the new master expected to be here almost any day now. . . . In case you've forgotten, he was born in England; attended St. John's Church School; has been serving his country as deputy prime minister and minister of finance; is married and has three sons; has visited in Washington four times, en route to England or vice versa, and is known as the Hon. Mr. Nash.

Birthday Parties Take Spotlight

Oddments of Interest: The Brazilian Ambassador, Carlos Martins, and Dr. and Mme. Luthero Sarmanho Vargas, son and daughter-in-law of the President of Brazil, will be guests of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Rockefeller at the President's Birthday Dinner at the Willard Hotel tomorrow night. . . . Mme. Martins, who is cutting her social calendar to a minimum these days, in order to get a much-needed rest, will not be in the party; will not, in fact, be able to take part in any of the birthday festivities. . . . Meyer Davis and his orchestra will play for the dinner at the Willard and then proceed to North Wales, Walter P. Chrysler's Warrenton home, to play for the birthday ball there. . . . The house will be blacked out for the evening, with only the faintest blue flicker to guide guests into the mammoth drawing rooms. . . . Approved and ready for an emergency is the bomb shelter beneath the house, and also open for the evening will be the ancient tunnel, once a slave hideaway and road to escape—an underground path with an exit a hundred yards away from the main house.

Chilean Admiral Is Honor Guest At Hotel Fete

Although one honor guest was detained in New York, the party given by the Naval Attache of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Cortes went on as scheduled yesterday afternoon at the Shoreham Hotel with the other honor guest, Vice Admiral Juan Gerken, holding the spotlight.

Although the 5 to 7 o'clock cocktail party was originally scheduled to honor the newly arrived head of the Chilean Naval Mission, Admiral Vincente Merino Bielich, he was forced to remain in New York and will not come to Washington until early next week.

The naval attaches of all the missions here—that are friendly—attended yesterday's party as did a smattering of officials and many high-ranking United States Navy Officers. Vice Admiral Gerkin, who has been heading the Washington mission, will leave shortly for Chile and will go to New York on Friday. Sharing honors at the party was Admiral Paulino Rogas, commandant of the Chilean marines.

Jacqette Storm, Frederick Hicks To Marry Feb. 14

Plans have been completed for the marriage of Miss Jacquette Storm and Frederick Stevens Hicks on Saturday, February 14, in the chapel of St. Paul's Church in Englewood, N. J., with only relatives and a few intimate friends attending.

Mrs. Macneil of Barra, mother of the bridegroom, will be joined on February 9 by her daughter, Mrs. John R. Mage, the former Georgina Hicks, who is coming from her home in Pasadena, Calif., to attend the wedding. She will return to Washington with Mrs. Macneil for a short visit at their home on Thirtieth Street.

At present Mrs. Macneil is spending a few days at the Hicks home, Shorewood, Sands Point, Long Island, which Mr. Hicks inherited from his father, the late alien property custodian.

W. W. Jeffries Weds Mrs. Fairchild

In the chapel of the church where she has been soprano soloist for the past 11 years, Mrs. La Vergne Sims Fairchild was married yesterday to William Walter Jeffries. The Rev. John Rustin, pastor of the church, Mount Vernon Place Memorial, officiated for the 5 o'clock ceremony.

The bride was costumed in a gray and blue wool tailor-made suit which she wore with a blue straw-and-ribbon hat and orchids. Mrs. John H. Elvin, wife of Dr. Elvin, was wearing a gold suit and feathered blue hat as her only attendant. Her corsage of blue iris with golden centers echoed the shades of her costume.

Best man for Mr. Jeffries was Lacy Shaw, and ushers were David Manley and Arthur Tabbutt.

Music, which has an important place in the life of the bride, took an important place at her marriage. Before the ceremony, Prof. Deane Shure, at the organ, played a prenuptial recital. Miss Lone Dolin sang.

A short musicale was presented at the reception, which was also at the church. Taking part were Miss Yolanda Grinager, cellist; Mrs. Roy North, violinist, and Mrs. Irma Crays, pianist. Mrs. Lily Garrett, who came from Minneapolis to attend the wedding, sang two selections. Assisting at the reception were Mrs. Norton Ring, Mrs. Jesse Rustin, Mrs. Julian Howe, Mrs. Rose Salter, Mrs. Herman Bruffey and Mrs. Louis Dibble.

Mr. and Mrs. Jeffries left immediately for a wedding trip to Florida, and after three weeks they plan to return and make their home in Takoma Park. At a later date they intend to visit Mrs. Jeffries' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard D. Sims, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Landon to Address Lincoln Day Dinner

The annual banquet in commemoration of the birth of Abraham Lincoln by the Republican members of the United States Senate, the House of Representatives and the League of Republican Women of the District of Columbia, will be held on Wednesday, February 11, at 7:30 p. m. at the Mayflower Hotel.

Former Gov. Alf M. London of Kansas will speak as well as Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., Representative Frances P. Bolton, and James E. Watson. The Metropolitan Opera Company has released for the occasion, Miss Doris Doe, contralto soloist who will be accompanied by Kurt Hetzel. A double quartet from Howard University will also sing.

The entire Republican delegation in both houses of Congress are expected to attend and the many reservations have already been made.

Engagements Announced Today

MISS MURIEL DONOVAN

Brooks Studio and Harris & Ewing

MISS MARTHA THERESA HOWARD

Miss Donovan Is Engaged

Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Donovan announce the engagement of their daughter, Muriel, to Lieut. Robert B. Brown, of Silver Spring, Md. The wedding will take place on Friday, March 6, at the Sixth Presbyterian Church in Washington.

Miss Donovan attended Wilson Teacher's College in this city and is now an employe of the Office of Government Reports, Executive Office of the President. Lieut. Brown is a graduate of Cornell University, where he received a degree in engineering last year. He is a member of the Sigma Nu Fraternity. Lieut. Brown is now connected with the Ordnance Department, United States Army.

Marion Lynn, James Payne Wed At The Retreat

The Retreat in nearby Virginia, home of the bride's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Montgomery Lewis, was the scene yesterday of the wedding of Miss Marion Nelson Lynn, daughter of Mrs. Thomas Noel Lynn, sr., and the late Mr. Lynn, and James Hugh Payne, son of Mrs. Henry A. Payne and the late Mr. Payne.

The Rev. James J. Widmer, pastor of All Saints' Catholic Church, officiated at the 11 o'clock morning ceremony. Mrs. William Nelson Lynn, sister-in-law of the bride, and Cleveland Fisher played the nuptial music.

Given in marriage by her brother, Thomas Noel Lynn, jr., the bride was gowned in white satin, fashioned with a sweetheart neckline and long bouffant skirt ending in a train. With it she wore a finger-tip length veil held to her hair with a coronet of orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of white roses. Her only ornament was a single strand of pearls.

Cousin of Bride Is Maid of Honor

Miss Cornelia Bonham Lewis, cousin of the bride, was the maid of honor and only attendant. She was gowned in blue taffeta, fashioned with a tight bodice and bouffant skirt. With it she wore a matching tulle veil held to her hair by a cluster of Talisman roses to match the sheaf she carried. John Barton Payne, brother of the bridegroom, was the best man.

Following the ceremony there was a wedding breakfast at the Retreat. Assisting were Mrs. T. L. Lynn, jr., and Mrs. Wallace Humphrey Lynn, sisters-in-law of the bride; Mrs. I. L. Shacklett, Mrs. S. H. Lynn and Miss Elizabeth Walker, aunts of the bride, and Mrs. Harry Purcell Davis, cousin of the bride.

Honeymoon In Florida

Miss Dorsey Entertains Miss Stanley

Another in the round of parties for Miss Mary Jane Stanley, who will become the bride of Cary Euwer February 7, took place yesterday when Miss Achsah Dorsey, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Benjamin H. Dorsey, entertained at a luncheon at the Army-Navy Town Club.

Seated at the table, which was festively decorated with miniature brides and a low floral bouquet of salmon gladioli and iris, were Miss Marjorie Souby, Miss Mary Stuart Price, Miss Sybella Clayton, Miss Anita Cajigas, the Misses Laura Belle and Jane Wyatt and Miss Alice Ingersoll.

Miss Ingersoll, who is the daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Royal E. Ingersoll, will go on with her piano studies at the Washington Musical Institute when her mother leaves soon for a visit in Newport. With Admiral Ingersoll on sea duty, Mrs. Ingersoll has given up their home on Cathedral Avenue and will visit in New England until the apartment she has booked at the Kennedy-Warren is ready for occupancy.

Miss Howard Will Marry

Mr. and Mrs. George B. Howard announce the engagement of their daughter, Martha Theresa, to David Newcomb Back, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Back, of this city.

Miss Howard attended George Washington University and her fiance is a student at Pennsylvania State College.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Gulick-Sterrett Engagement Told

The engagement of Miss Elizabeth Kyle Sterrett to Lieut. Spencer H. Gulick, of Cranford, N. J., has been announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hulbert Sterrett, of Piney Branch Road, Silver Spring, Md.

Miss Sterrett was graduated from Cranford High School and Berkeley-Llewellyn in New York. Lieut. Gulick attended Columbia University and is stationed at Geiger Field, Spokane, Wash. Miss Sterrett, accompanied by her mother, left for Spokane on Tuesday, where the wedding will take place on Saturday.

31 Touring Colombian Students Will Visit White House Today

With a White House reception high-lighting their visit today and with a full day behind them, the group of 31 Colombian students who are "touring the Capital" will return to their studies at the University of Pennsylvania tomorrow.

Nelson Rockefeller was host at a luncheon at the Carlton yesterday honoring the group and later in the afternoon Charles Thomsen of the State Department gathered in a scattering of diplomats and officials to meet the students at a cocktail party in the Mayflower. From the Colombian Embassy came the Ambassador, Dr. Gabriel Turbay, tre First Secretary of the Embassy, Don Alberto Vargas Narino, the Second Secretary, Don Jose Camacho-Lorenzana and the Attache, Diego Mejia. Earlier in the afternoon the students visited the Colombian Embassy.

Today they will be given a reception at the White House at 4:30 p. m. and this evening they will attend the concert at the Pan-American Union. Tomorrow morning they will visit Mount Vernon en route to Pennsylvania.

The students include Jaime Carvajal, Senorita Angel Maria Castro, Senorita Isabel Cavanzo, Mario Espinosa, Senorita Paulina Gomez-Vega, Belisario Gonzalez, Hernando Gonzalez, Carlos Jose Guerrero, Marco Hernandez, Alfred Holguin, Arthuro Laguado, Hugo Latorre, Santiago Londono, Eduardo Millan, Jorge Morales, Senorita Helena Palau, Alfonso Perdomo, Jaime Penardanda Jorge Rodriguez, Gilberto Rodriguez, Victor Rodriguez, Jorge Santamaria, Fernando Tamayo, Gabriel Toro, Alberto Torres, Oscar Torres, Richard Triana, Alvaro Uribe, Francisco Vargas, Hernando Vargas and Gabriel Velasquez.

Mrs. Gregor Is Honor Guest At Hotel Luncheon

Miss Mary Benton Gore, daughter of Col. H. Grady Gore, entertained at a luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower in honor of Mrs. Frederick Gregor, who has been here from Hamilton, Ohio, with her husband. They left for their home last night, but will be returning to Washington frequently.

Yesterday Miss Gore gathered in a small group of Mrs. Gregor's former classmates at Holton-Arms, where she was very well known as Miss Anna May Marion. Guests included Mrs. Brien McMahon, Mrs. James M. E. O'Grady, Senorita Erma Castillo-Najera, daughter of the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo-Najera; Miss Betty Jensen, Mrs. John Maher, Miss Jean Harris, Miss Patricia Prochnik and Mrs. Donald Gustin.

Mrs. Roscoe Hearn Is on Visit Here

Now in Washington and being busily entertained is a visitor from Atlanta, Ga., Mrs. Roscoe H. Hearn, wife of the late Col. Hearn, U. S. A. During her stay here, probably about two weeks, she is the house guest of Miss Elizabeth Nuttman at the Westchester.

Yesterday she was the guest of honor at a luncheon at the Army-Navy Town Club given by Mrs. A. T. Smith, widow of Gen. Smith, U. S. A. Tomorrow Mrs. Clark Howell Woodward will entertain at luncheon for her, also at the Army-Navy Club. Several other small parties are also being planned in her honor during her stay. Mrs. Hearn and her husband lived in Washington for five years when he was here on the general staff from 1917 to 1922.

Miss Solley's Bridals Today To de Sieyes

Miss Virginia Hamilton Solley, has selected tomorrow for her wedding to Malcolm de Sieyes, son of Count and Countess Jacques de Sieyes, of this city. The ceremony will take place in St. Bartholomew's Episcopal Church, in New York.

Miss Solley, who is the daughter of Mrs. William H. Conroy, of Rye, N. Y., and Washington, Conn., and Dr. John B. Solley, of New York, made her debut in 1937, in New York, where she attended Chapin School. She also attended Shipley School in Bryn Mawr, Pa., and was graduated from Smith College.

Her fiance, who was graduated from Dartmouth College, has been attending the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration. His father is the personal representative in the United States of Gen. de Gaulle, leader of the Free French forces.

Joan Briegel Wedding Today

Duty's call comes suddenly these days and will brook no waiting, not even two days, so Miss Joan Reid Briegel has set ahead to today her marriage to Lieut. John Sherman Henderson, jr., U. S. M. C.

The ceremony will take place at National Cathedral with the Rev. Theodore O. Wedel officiating. Miss Briegel, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Briegel, has planned the wedding for Saturday.

As her bridesmaids will be unable to get here in time from other cities, she will be attended only by Mrs. Robert Arthur Weppner, jr. Mr. Weppner will be best man for Lieut. Henderson.

Due to the change in date, the wedding will be a quiet one with just the family present, so invitations to both wedding and reception are being recalled. Though Lieut. Henderson's destination remains undisclosed, his bride will accompany him. He is the son of John Sherman Henderson, of Washington.

Vitamin Cocktail

Tomato juice is one of our richest sources of Vitamin C—the vitamin which cannot be stored in the body but which must be supplied every day in our diet. One glassful of tomato juice a day supplies sufficient Vitamin C for the day. It is also a good source of Vitamins A and B.

Tomato juice is refreshing just as it comes from the can. But it also combines happily with various other juices and seasonings. For instance:

Tomato Juice With Cucumber and Lime—Combine 1 can tomato juice (14 ozs.), ½ cucumber chopped, ½ teaspoon salt, and 1 tablespoon fresh lime juice. Select a cucumber about 7 inches long, cut in half, then peel and chop it finely. Add chopped cucumber to the tomato juice and let stand in refrigerator for 1 hour. Strain, forcing as much of the cucumber juice through the sieve as possible. Add salt and fresh lime juice and serve chilled.

Tomato - Grapfruit Cocktail—Mix 1 can tomato juice with 1-3 cup unsweetened grapfruit juice, 1 teaspoon salt. Chill and serve. Makes 2 tall glassfuls.

D. C. Women Voters League Hear Dr. Lorwin

POINTING out the fallacy of considering peace a static quality, Dr. Lewis L. Lorwin, consultant, National Resources Planning Board and author of "Economic Consequences of the Second World War," urged continuous work for permanent peace both during and after the war.

Speaking on the "Price of a Durable Peace" before the members of the District of Columbia League of Women Voters at their luncheon meeting yesterday at the Y. W. C. A., Dr. Lorwin declared:

"No permanent or durable peace can be established by anybody or any one generation. Every generation must create its own peace by continuously building and improving upon the foundation laid by previous generations.

"So far as the American people are concerned we will not have a durable peace until we have heightened our sense of world responsibility. We must be willing to share some of our riches with the rest of the world . . . we have to share to live in peace."

The price this Nation is willing to pay will determine the kind of peace it will obtain after the war, Dr. Lorwin pointed out.

If it is willing to contribute to improve world conditions, its rewards will be greater than its efforts.

It would be unrealistic to minimize the toughness of problems of postwar era, Dr. Lorwin warned. He cited the intricate problems of China, Japan, India, and the attempts of the nations of eastern Europe to live together. "Survey their complex problems," he said, "then we can realize our task."

Emphasizing the need of being prepared to negotiate a peace at the end of this war, Dr. Lorwin explained that both official and unofficial groups in Washington and other parts of the country were preparing themselves for that task.

"We do not want to be caught unprepared for peace as we were at the Armistice in 1918," he said.

Dr. Lorwin thinks that President Roosevelt's four freedoms—freedom of speech and expression, freedom from want, freedom from fear and freedom of every person to worship God in his own way—with some modifications, could be the basis of a durable peace.

Dr. Lorwin was introduced by Mrs. Harvey E. Becknell, chairman, foreign policy committee of the D. C. League.

The business meeting preceding the lecture was presided over by Mrs. Eugene Callagahan, president of the league. Mrs. Lewis L. Lorwin, member of the league and wife of the speaker, was a guest at the speaker's table, as were Miss Eleanor Dennison, program secretary, National League of Women Voters; Mrs. William Johnstone, former foreign policy chairman. D. C. League; Mrs. Henry Chalmers, Mrs. M. O. Lorenz, Mrs. Carson S. Duncan, Mrs. Edward Harding, foreign policy chairman, Maryland State League; Mrs. D. V. Sandifer, foreign policy chairman, Montgomery County League; Mrs. John Randolph, foreign policy chairman, Burlington (Iowa) League; Mrs. J. H. Keeley, vice chairman, foreign policy committee, D. C. League; Mrs. Harvey E. Beknell, chairman, foreign policy committee, D. C. League.

Mrs. Eugene Callaghan, president of the D. C. League of Women Voters, talks over postwar problems with Dr. Lewis L. Lorwin, author of "Economic Consequences of the Second World War," at the club's luncheon meeting yesterday at the Y. W. C. A. Dr. Lorwin was guest speaker

Mrs. Mackay, Who Helped to Organize Chinese Red Cross, Receives Honor Here

WHEN Mrs. Raymond C. Mackay moves to Norfolk, Va., soon, she will take with her a certificate of appreciation signed by President Roosevelt, Norman Davis and Brig. Gen. F. R. Keefer, chairman of the D. C. Chapter, Red Cross.

The certificate was presented to her by the District Red Cross Volunteer Special Services, of which she was former vice chairman, in recognition of outstanding services in the District.

Recently appointed to the national committee that serves in advisory capacity to Norman Davis, Mrs. Mackay will study the needs for new or expanded volunteer services.

MRS. MACKEY

Her appointment was announced yesterday at a luncheon in her honor at the Women's University Club. Those present were: Miss Mabel Boardman, chairman of the Volunteer Services; Mrs. Lynn F. Woodworth, vice chairman; Mrs. Frances P. Jenks, Mrs. John B. Cleland, jr., and the chairman of the nine branches of the Volunteer Special Services.

Active in Red Cross work—for as long as she can remember—Mrs. Mackay, assisted her father, Dr. John C. Ferguson, founder of Nanking University, in organizing the Chinese Red Cross. Along with her father, she was decorated by the Chinese government for her services. Returning to the United States, she has continued her Red Cross work with great zest. In 1936 she became associated with the Gray Ladies of Walter Reed Hospital.

Heads 76th Club

MRS. ALEXANDER WILEY, wife of Senator Wiley, of Wisconsin, is the 1942 president of the Seventy-sixth Club. Named to the office yesterday at a luncheon meeting of the club at the Grabe Dodge Hotel, Mrs. Wiley succeeds Mrs. G. W. Gillie, of Indiana.

MRS. WILEY

Other officers elected at the same time are Mrs. T. C. Gathings, of Arkansas, first vice president; Mrs. Bartel J. Johnson, of Michigan, second vice president; Mrs. John Vorys, of Ohio, third vice president; Mrs. Joe O'Brien, of New York, secretary; Mrs. Carl Mundt, of South Dakota, corresponding secretary; Mrs. W. F. Norrell, of Arkansas, treasurer; Mrs. Karl Le Compte, of Iowa, publicity chairman.

The club is composed of Congressional wives whose husbands came to Washington during the Seventy-sixth Congress. If, as occasionally happens—the Representative is elected to the Senate, the wife often retains her membership in the club.

Fashions and Cards

A Fashion Show and Card Party, will be presented by the District of Columbia Pharmaceutical Association's Women's Auxiliary as its annual program, at the Chevy Chase Women's Club, at 1:30 o'clock, February 4. Mrs. Paul W. Briggs, president of the Womens Auxiliary, will officiate and present prizes for the games. A rehearsal of the Fashion show, replete with models, will be staged tomorrow, from 5 to 6, at Chevy Chase Women's Club.

Prize Winning Writers

Mrs. Nellie Walker Irish, chairman of contests for the Writer's League of Washington, announces the winners in the league's poetry contest as follows: First prize, Mrs. Eva Grant Marshall for "Prophecy;" second prize, Andrew N. Smith for "Youth's Shrine;" and third prize, Miss Elizabeth Layman for "Christmas." Honorable mention went to Mrs. Agnes Wright for "Grandmother's Sugar Bowl."

Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler, editor of Blue Moon Poetry Magazine, acted as judge in the contest.

Y. W. C. A. Tea

Mrs. Lawrence H. Shepard, newly appointed general secretary of the Washington Y. W. C. A., will be honored at a reception to be given by the board of directors of the Young Women's Christian Association of the District of Columbia in Barker Hall tomorrow afternoon, 4 to 6.

Judge Annabel Matthews of the United States Processing Tax Board of Review, chairman of the board of trustees of the Y. W. C. A., will head the receiving line. With her will be Miss Elsa Peterson, president of the Y. W. C. A., and Mrs. Shepard. Presiding at the tea table will be Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, Mme Alfred Sze, Mrs. Stanley Forman Reed, Mrs. Henry Wallace, Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr and Mrs. Edwin D. Parker.

Magazines for Selectees

As a contribution to national defense, the District branch, National League of American Pen Women, has requested each person who attends any meetings of the league during the month of February to bring a magazine. The magazines so collected will be sent to Army camps. Any magazine contributed must be one that will appeal to men, it must be new, and of recent publication. Members will also bring books for the "Victory Book Drive."

Shoppers' League Plans Tea Tomorrow

Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, the Hon. Marion J. Harron, Mrs. James D. LeCron and Mrs. Donald Richberg will assist the officers of the Washington League of Women Shoppers as hostesses at the membership tea to be held tomorrow at the home of Mrs. Raymond Clapper.

Cynthia Wentworth Hannum, president of the Washington League, will speak on the winter program of league activities, and new members will be given an opportunity to meet committee chairmen. The tea is intended to acquaint prospective members with the work of the league in the field of living standards, legislation, labor conditions and consumer education.

Proffers Ritual Work

Mrs. Virginia McCarthy, Chapeau Departmental of Salon No. 14, Eight and Forty, Honor Society of the American Legion Auxiliary, announces that the ritual and regalia team of the local Eight and Forty is now ready to serve the American Legion Auxiliary units. Upon request by the units the ritual team will perform the initiation cermony of newly admitted members to the units. Those units desiring the services of the ritual and regalia team may contact Mrs. Vesta Rodruck, Woodley 3549.

Children's Recital

Mrs. Mabel Barrows and Mrs. Melba K. Street will present their pupils in music and dramatic art in joint recital tomorrow at the clubrooms of the Washington Society for the Hard of Hearing, 2431 Fourteenth Street Northwest, at 8 o'clock. Two plays will be given by the small actors, "Nimblewit and Fingerkin," a morality play by Constance D'Archy, and "Star Struck," with a scene in Hollywood. Members of the cast of the first play will be Linda Jane Loehler, a witch; Dorothy Belle Scates, woodcutter's daughter; Elaine Hansen, a sprite; Charlotte Hooven, Nimble Wit; Elaine Freeman, Janis Edlavitch, Jackie Loehler, Nancy Hall and Patsy Howard, the Fingerkins; Barbara Ann Peden, Joanne Hall and Constance Patton take the parts in the second play. Irwin Edlavitch will give recitations.

Gene Autry, Judy Canova Here for Ball

Gene Autry, film cowboy, roared into town at 5:25 p. m. yesterday at Washington National Airport, a few minutes ahead of Judy Canova to win the Birthday Ball cross-country race. Inclement weather held up his dash toward Washington else he would have arrived yesterday morning.

The dash for the first to arrive here among the movie stars invited for the President's Diamond Jubilee Birthday Ball was actually won by Michele Morgan, who arrived here by train shortly after noon. She said she merely came here to see the President, the Lincoln Memorial and other sights.

Autry, with his pretty wife, made his first appearance at the Fort Myer Horse Show, also staged for the President's Birthday celebration. He will be there again tonight.

Dorothy Lamour was the third star to arrive here. She came by train from New York and attended the horse show where she rode in the coach class.

Other film stars will arrive today. The Hollywood Special is due in at 8:40 a. m. at Washington Terminal and aboard will be Rosalind Russell, Gene Raymond, Jackie Cooper, Bonita Granville, Brenda Marshall, William Holden, Patricia Morton and Wayne Morris, now a United States Navy ensign.

This afternoon, at 4 p. m., Pat O'Brien comes in and Mickey Rooney is expected at 12:20 p. m. tomorrow. Lieut. Jimmy Stewart is scheduled to fly in from Maxwell Field some time today. Lieut. Douglas Fairbanks and Lieut. Robert Montgomery are already on hand.

A private reception will be given for the stars today at the Willard Hotel by Mrs. Alben Barkley, Mrs. Walter George and Mrs. Robert La Follette. A number of the stars will go to Baltimore tonight for a Birthday Ball celebration at the Fifth Regiment Armory.

Colorado Town Mourns for 36 Killed in Mine

By International News Service

Mount Harris, Colo., Jan. 28.—This little mining village was in mourning tonight for the 34 miners killed in an explosion of the Wadge Mine of the Victor American Coal Co. last night.

All business houses were closed, schools were dismissed and work in the numerous coal mines dotting this area ceased as the badly burned bodies were brought to the surface late today. Mount Harris' lone movie theater was converted into a morgue.

The explosion, which occurred in the 5500-foot level, was caused by methane gas, commonly known as marsh gas and known to miners as fire damp, State Coal Mine Inspector Tom Allen announced tonight. When mixed with oxygen, methane gas becomes highly explosive.

The victims apparently were killed instantly, Allen said. They were buried under tons of rock, coal and earth.

Gas flooded the mine shafts following the explosion, preventing rescue workers from reaching the scene for eight hours.

Twenty-four of the victims were married.

Racial Divisions Condition Plasma Use

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People declared tonight it had been advised by the Red Cross that blood donations from Negro as well as white persons would be accepted but "the blood will be processed separately so that those receiving transfusions may be given plasma from blood of their own race."

Movie Stars and Horses Both Shine in Fort Myer Riding Hall

"HORSE MARINE"—John Ryan Devereux 3d, nephew of Maj. James Devereux, Marine Corps hero of Wake Island, is shown with Honeysuckle, bay gelding, which he rode last night in the President's Birthday Horse Show at Fort Myer. Young Devereux has enlisted in the Marine Corps, will be sworn in February 9

lowered, two gayly decorated tallyhos drove up to the central platform, and the screen celebrities were wheeled slowly twice around so that everybody could get a look.

Then, the visiting delegation of players made speeches, and Autry, the singing cowboy, offered "You Are My Sunshine," an act which showered him with warm applause.

It is hard to pick a high spot from a show with so many bright spots, but perhaps the most exciting moment occurred when the Greyhorse Battery of the Field Artillery roared in, full gallop, with caissons behind, to present an exhibition of drill and maneuver.

Cannabais, mount of Capt. J. D. Stouffer, added a comic touch to the show to the delight of the crowd. As the brown gelding entered the show ring he paused to scrutinize the hall's two wooden dogs, belovedly known as Abercrombe and Fitch, and for a long minute it appeared that Cannabais would decide to attack. However, dignity and decorum won, and accompanied by a sympathetic chuckle from the spectators, the gelding went out to a good demonstration of his abilities.

The audience got another chuckle when Lady Halifax came out of the ring to award first place to "Liz" Whitney's Bon Nuit. The prize stallion, with great interest, stepped forward, nuzzled the British Ambassador's wife and poked his nose into the silver-platter prize, as if hoping to find a lump of sugar for him.

Lord and Lady Halifax were the ranking guests of the evening, and they watched the show, and presented some of the prizes, from the box of Fort Myer's commandant and his wife, Col. and Mrs. W. W. Gordon.

A hands-across-the-sea gesture—seen so often these days in the Nation's Capital—was offered in the form of a rousing cheer for Maj. F. H. Jayne, of the British Embassy staff, who appeared on a show mount for the first time since his country went to war two year's ago. He did all right, too.

The show will be repeated tonight. The house is sold out.

Senate Votes Teeth for Priorities Law

The original bill exempted all workers in this class from the Hatch Act, but a compromise substituted by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, excused only air-raid wardens, fire wardens and similar part-time workers from the anti-politics ban.

In addition to draft board members, the Hatch law will continue to apply to any part-time nominally paid employe serving the Government "in any capacity relating to the procurement or manufacture of war material."

The bill's free postage provision for soldiers, sailors and marines brought a rush of amendments to broaden the grant and a lively contest for authorship.

Two almost identical provisions were adopted, 72 to 3 and 53 to 26, the last as a substitute for the first. The amendments would permit all soldiers, sailors and marines, whether stationed here or abroad, to mail letters postage free.

Approved as the Administration requested was authority for the Federal Reserve banks to purchase Government securities directly, instead of exclusively in the open market, despite protestations by several Senators that this authority might lead to inflation.

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, sought to limit such direct purchases of bonds to 30-day notes and to two billion dollars at any one time, but his amendment was rejected 25 to 51.

On amendment by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, all war provisions of the bill would be terminated on December 31, 1944, instead of six months after the termination of the war as originally provided.

Another amendment by Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, extended to the Interstate Commerce Commission the same wartime powers to regulate movement of water commerce it now has over railroads. The Senate had approved the same extension of ICC authority over motor carriers.

The Federal Security administrator was empowered to assign CCC workers to protect the munitions, aircraft and other war industries, municipal water plants, power and other utilities and to guard against sabotage.

Other Provisions

An amendment by Senator McNary (Democrat), of Oregon, to assign CCC workers to protect "resources subject to the hazards of forest fires" was approved.

Widely varied provisions of the omnibus war bill include:

Penalties ranging up to $10,000 and one year's imprisonment for violation of priorities orders.

Allocation of production facilities, tools and equipment by the President for maximum war use.

Authority to take over personal property located on real estate acquired, and to take occupancy immediately without prior approval of title, and to dispose of properties taken over.

Power to requisition any tool needed for the war effort even though it is necessary to the operation of a business or factory.

Nickeless Nickel

Compensations for injuries to persons employed in civilian defense.

Elimination by the mint of the nickel content of the 5-cent piece. Instead of a composition of three-fourths copper and one-fourth nickel, the new 5-cent piece would be made of 50 per cent silver and 50 per cent copper.

The bill further authorizes the Secretary of Commerce to waive navigation and inspection laws and simplifies requirements for naturaliaztion of aliens in the Nation's armed forces.

24 Officers Of the Army Are Promoted

President Roosevelt yesterday sent to the Senate nominations for four brigadier generals to be temporary major generals and 20 other officers to be temporary brigadier generals.

Those to be promoted to the rank of major general are:

Brig. Gen. Sherman Miles, now Assistant Chief of Staff, Military Intelligence Division, Washington. Gen. Miles was born here and is a son of Lieut. Gen. Nelson A. Miles, general in chief of the Army from 1895 to 1903. He has served as military attache throughout Europe and as military observer with the Russian army early in the first World War.

Brig. Gen. Carl Spaatz, now chief of the Air Staff, was born in Boyertown, Pa., and was graduated from West Point in 1914. His first assignment was in Hawaii and during the first World War was credited with having shot down three German Fokker planes.

Brig. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, now assistant chief of staff, Supply Division, Washington. Gen. Somervell, a native of Little Rock, Ark., served overseas during the first World War and was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross.

Brig. Gen. Thomas M. Robins, now deputy chief of engineers, was born in Snow Hill, Md., graduated from West Point in 1904. He was engineer officer, Port of Embarkation, Hoboken, N. J., in 1918.

Officers to be brigadier generals: Col. David McCoach, jr., now assistant chief of engineers, served as Engineer Commissioner of the District of Columbia from 1938 to 1941.

Col. James A. Code, jr., Signal Corps; Col. Roger B. Colton, Signal Corps; Col. Robert McG. Littlejohn, Quartermaster Corps, a native of Jonesville, S. C.

Col. Henry S. Aurand, Ordnance Department; Col. Hugh C. Minton, Ordnance Department; Col. Alexander Wilson, Chemical Warfare Service; Col. Paul K. English, Chemical Warfare Service; Col. Charles C. Hillman, Medical Corps; Col. Frederick W. Browne, Finance Department; Col. Haig Shekerjian, Chemical Warfare Service, Edgewood, Md., born in Turkey, graduated from West Point in 1911; Col. Isaac Spalding, Field Artillery; Col. Leven C. Allen, Infantry; Col. Edwin C. McNeil, Judge Advocate General's Office.

Of the 20, 6 colonels were nominated for promotion to brigadier general as recognition of their extraordinary leadership and gallantry in action in the Philippines.

They were Col. Hugh J. Casey, Engineers, of Washington, D. C.; Col. Clinton A. Pierce, Cavalry, who was born in Brooklyn, N. Y.; Col. Arnold J. Funk, Infantry, of Portland, Oreg.; Col. William F. Marquat, Coas Artillery, of Seattle, Wash.; Col. Harold H. George, Air Corps, of Los Angeles, and Col. Carl H. Seals, Adjutant General's Department, of Birmingham, Ala.

Parks Becomes Grand Master Of Odd Fellows

The Grand Lodge of the I. O. O. F. of the District of Columbia met last night in its 114th annual session and elected the following officers; Edgar W. Parks, grand master; Isadore Lebowitz, deputy grand master; William F. Zimmerman, grand warden; Harry L. Andresen, grand secretary; Ashlan F. Harlan, grand treasurer, and Dr. J. Burton Kincer, grand representative to the Sovereign Grand Lodge.

PARKS

Others elected to offices were Chalmers F. Groff, grand lodge board of trustees; Dr. J. Burton Kincer, representative to Odd Fellows Home Association, and Linwood E. Donaldson, board of trustees, I. O. O. F. Temple.

The new grand master, Edgar W. Parks, was born at Paducah, Ky., October 25, 1900, receiving his education in the public and high schools of that city. He later attended Bowling Green Business University. He has been with the James B. Lambie Co. since 1921 and is now their Government contract representative.

Irish-Americans Reaffirm Loyalty

The American Irish Defense Association reaffirmed its loyalty and pledged all-out support for President Roosevelt and his policies in a letter addressed to the President dated Tuesday, Rossa F. Downing, chairman of the association, announced yesterday.

The association's letter to the President said, "It should be a source of strength to you and to the Administration to know that we, as well as other classes of loyal American citizens, indorse every act performed and measure adopted by you in the conduct of this world conflict."

Grean Elected National Truck Owners' Chief

A. M. Grean, jr., was elected president of the National Council of Private Motor Truck Owners yesterday, succeeding Fred Brenckman, of Washington. A New Yorker, Grean is vice president of the Ward Baking Co.

J. F. Winchester, of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, was elected eastern area vice president and L. F. Orr, of Pet Milk Co., St. Louis, was elected to the same post for the central area.

Reelected as Southeastern and Pacific Coast vice presidents, respectively, were E. M. Fetherston, jr., and P. Arnold Anderson. Robert C. Hibben, of Washington, was reelected treasurer.

The council's third annual meeting at the Willard Hotel ended yesterday with a warning against proposed legislation that would prevent laundries, bakeries, oil companies and other businesses from operating their own truck fleets.

Orr, the new regional vice president, said "there is no proof that anything is being done that is detrimental to the public interest by permitting taxpayers to convey their own goods."

Burke Hopes Autoists Avoid Stamp Rush

Postmaster Vincent C. Burke announced yesterday that unless the sale of Federal motor vehicle use stamps picks up immediately, Washington motorists will be caught in a rush to beat the deadline of February 1, set by the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Burke said that of an estimated 220,000 stamps to be sold in the Washington metropolitan area only 111,800 had been sold as of yesterday morning. He asked that District motorists cooperate in avoiding last-hour confusion by purchasing their stamps as soon as possible.

In reference to reports of lost or stolen stamps, to relieve motorists of purchasing second stamps, proof of purchase cards will be furnished at the time the stamps are bought. These cards are to be filled out at the time of purchase and mailed to the Bureau of Internal Revenue, Burke pointed out.

In the event of loss or theft, owners applying for relief, will be required to submit an affidavit to the district collector of internal revenue stating date and cost of stamp; make, model and serial number of the vehicle taxed, and a concise report of the facts of the loss or theft. If the information is satisfactory owners will be given a statement by Federal officers saying that the tax has been paid, but lost or stolen stamps will not be replaced free of charge.

Mother Convicted Of Manslaughter In Death of Babe

Helen G. Jackson, 21-year-old unwed mother accused of strangling her 6-month-old baby daughter, was found guilty of manslaughter yesterday by a District Court jury. She had been indicted and prosecuted for second degree murder.

The prosecution alleged that the Negro girl had killed her child because it was a burden upon her and she could not support it. The defense contended, however, that the baby's death had been caused accidentally. They also asserted that she was of unsound mind as a result of her straitened circumstances. The child's body was found in her room about a week later in a mutilated condition.

FBI Foils Nazi Plans to Sell War Loot Here

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 28.—A bizarre scheme whereby German agents sought to unload in United States markets millions of dollars worth of diamonds found in occupied Belgium and the Netherlands was recounted today in a Federal indictment charging four men and a New York corporation with conspiracy in dumping loot and spoils of war.

Success of the plan, whereby the German high command was to finance Axis propaganda in the Americas, depended largely on the effect of an elaborate code and communications system designed to deceive the British censorship, the indictment said.

The defendants named were the Pioneer Import Corporation; Werner von Clemm, its president, said by the Government to be a cousin of the wife of German Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop; Carl von Clemm, Werner's twin brother, said to be a German emissary in Italy; Ernest Cremer, manager of the diamond control office, a regulative body established by the Nazis in the Low Countries following their occupation by Germany in 1940, and Carlos Hoeptfner, European vice president of Pioneer Corporation, and believed to be now in Germany.

Von Clemm was arrested at his office and held in $10,000 bail by order of Federal Judge Simon H. Rifkind when he pleaded innocent later this afternoon.

His lawyer said it would be virtually impossible for Von Clemm to raise $10,000, since most of his assets had been frozen by the United States Treasury. Von Clemm lives with his wife and two children in a 200-year-old Dutch colonial home on a 130-acre estate at Syosset, N. Y.

This is how the diamonds were looted, relayed to and sold in this country, as recounted by Federal Attorney Mathias Correa:

After the Germans had taken Antwerp and found the booty, they formed the diamond control office and ordered all diamond holders to register their holdings. The office then urged dealers who had contacts in the United States to sell their jewels here.

When American merchants refused to buy—President Roosevelt had signed a proclamation freezing Belgian and Dutch credit—the Germans took over the jewels after paying off the dealers in "occupation" currency and routed it here through Germany and Russia. A major portion of the receipts was to be turned over to the German high command.

Correa said that Werner von Clemm worked out a code system here through creation of firms in Switzerland, Portugal, Brazil and Argentina.

One message delivered to von Clemm warned him that it would be no longer advisable to ship diamonds here through the usual Russian route. The message, "Aunt Kate dying fast," meant "peace with Russia dying fast," Correa said.

Assistant United States Attorney Bruno Schachner, whom Correa credited with smashing the conspiracy, said the Treasury Department now possessed $300,000 worth of semiprecious and synthetic gems which he said were detained under an order freezing German assets after they had been sent to Werner von Clemm.

In addition, he said they had $100,000 worth of diamonds allegedly shipped from Germany to the Pioneer Corporation, and had traced to the same corporation the sale of an additional $50,000 worth of diamonds from the same source.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Civil Service Plans To Place Million

Civil service officials now estimate from 1,000,000 to 1,200,000 placements will be made in the civilian branch of the Federal service this year. From 700,000 to 800,000 will be new jobs and the remainder will be replacements. More than 100,000 placements were made in December. January placements are expected to exceed that figure. To fill the need, the Government must employ more women for jobs usually held by men, and more young and old people.

War Department now has more than half a million civilians, by far the largest number of any Federal agency. But for the work ahead the Department must recruit at least another half million workers. The Army Air Corps alone will have half a million civilians in its program. F. Trubee Davidson, former Assistant War Secretary for air, who recently returned to the Department, has been placed in charge of all civilian and enlisted personnel.

It's true that the professional and subprofessional employes and the blueprint and rotoprint operators of the Navy Department haven't been paid overtime since November 23, but they'll be paid nevertheless. Navy division chiefs yesterday were given instructions on how the overtime pay was to be computed and the overtime checks should be distributed shortly. In many cases the checks will amount to hundreds of dollars. The 2000 employes will be paid for all overtime worked since November 23.

All Navy employes are compelled to work at least a 48-hour week. Only the professional and subprofessional employes and blueprint and rotoprint operators will be paid for the additional eight hours. That's the law. Many professional and subprofessional employes in the Bureau of Ships, for example, are now working a 51-hour week and they'll get paid for 11 hours of overtime. But the messengers, file clerks, typists and stenographers who are compelled at times to work 60 and 70 hours a week won't get a nickel extra. Incidentally, the overtime isn't full time and a half. The law requires that it be computed on 1-360 of the annual salary.

ECC Goes to New York

Employes Compensation Commission will go to New York City. That's definite. The New York move, instead of to Chicago, was recommended by ECC and the recommendation was accepted by Budget Director Harold D. Smith. A small ECC office will be retained here, including about 25 employes directly connected with workmen's compensation activities in the District. A liaison office to maintain contacts with the War and Navy Departments also will be set up here. The move will take place, Smith said, "shortly after February 15."

The reason behind the shift in locations is that if the Chicago move had been put through no more than 100 of ECC's 400 employes would have gone there. An attempt was then made to send the agency to Cleveland but a poll revealed that only 103 employes would go to the Ohio city. Another questionnaire was sent out last night on the New York transfer and officials are hoping that at least 60 per cent of the employes will go there. The New York location for ECC will be on Madison Avenue between Forty-first and Forty-second Streets.

More than 100 stenographers were placed in war jobs here during the past week by the Civil Service Commission . . . Navy Department employes are complaining about the food served in the cafeteria since it was taken over by the Welfare and Recreational Association on January 1 . . . It's rumored in high places that War Secretary Stimson soon will retire and Undersecretary Robert. Patterson will be promoted to the No. 1 war job.

Young men interested in breaking into the foreign service should apply for the Junior State Department Assistant test, which is now open. The jobs pay $2000. Persons approved for appointment will be given a training course by the Department. Those who show promise will be assigned to foreign posts for training. Thirty semester hours are required in a combination of modern history, economics and political science, in addition to a speaking or reading knowledge of a foreign language.

Excitement Too Much

Seattle (AP).—Mother and triplets are doing nicely, but Papa George Naylor is in bed from excitement and a cold. Explained his mother: "We called him from Bremerton (where he is a shipfitter) when the babies were born. He ran all the way from the ferry. Then he stood around in the hospital waiting to see them. "Now he's so weak he can hardly stand."

A New Deferment Yarn

Omaha, Jan. 28 (AP).—A deferment request based on tire shortage was received by Draft Board No. 6 here.

"Besides my wife, who is totally dependent," the applicant for deferment wrote, "I have my father, who is a traveling salesman and will be out of a job as soon as his auto tires wear out, which will necessitate my supporting him also."

Guild Program Dominated By Schubert

By Ray C. B. Brown

Chamber Music Guild presents its String Quartet (Frank Gittelson, Alexander Levin, Benjamin Sosner and Marcel Ancher) in Almas Temple on Wednesday night. Assisting artists: Frances Nash Watson, piano; Abrasha Robofski, barytone; Frank Eney, contrabass. Program: Quartet in A minor, Op. 29 (Schubert), Two Songs, "O If I Could Express in Song" and "Indian Summer on the Prairie" (Louis Cheslock), Piano Quintet in A major, Op. 114 (Schubert).

One might call last evening's concert of the Chamber Music Guild in Almas Temple a Schubertiade after the friendly gathering in Vienna when Franz Schubert used to sit at the piano in informal performances of his music, for that composer was almost given a monopoly of the program. His A minor string quartet and his A major piano quintet had as only companions two songs by Louis Cheslock, of Baltimore, in an interlude of contrast. Such a brief interruption did not break the spell of the gentle Franz upon a large audience which gave every evidence of enjoyment.

BROWN

Mr. Cheslock's songs, "O If I Could Express In Song" and "Indian Summer on the Prairie," arranged for string quartet accompaniment, were intoned robustly by the baritone voice of Abrasha Robofski. The first lyric, somewhat elegiac in mood, lost some of its effectiveness by the arrangement because the harmonic plangencies were too emphatic, but the second, a vitalized descriptive song, gained through the same strengthening process. Both songs are well written, poetically treated and agreeable. The composer was present to hear them, and received a hearty welcome.

Frances Nash Watson was the delightfully proficient pianist in the "Trout" quintet, playing with the clarity and the buoyancy required by the work. She entered completely into the spirit of the music, and it was her reading that dominated the performance and gave it an ebullient quality of youth and joy.

Schubert was 22 when he composed this quintet while on a summer tour of upper Austria with his friend, Johann Michael Vogl. One of their tarrying places was the town of Steyr, and it was there that the work was written in a glow of excitement over the beauty of the countryside. It is said that the variations on the "Trout" song were composed for the andantino movement at the request of Sylvester Paumgartner, an accomplished amateur musician in whose home Schubert was a guest.

A casual glance at the opus numbers would lead one to believe that the quintet, op. 114, was written long after the A minor quartet, op. 29. Actually the quintet preceded the quartet by five years. Opus numbers are no guide to the chronological order of Schubert's works, because the majority of them were published after his death. It was part of the tragedy of his life that publishers did not appreciate his genius, and when they did reluctantly accept something from him they grossly underpaid him.

Elizabeth Nelson Dies at Age 88

Miss Elizabeth Nelson, 88, died yesterday at her residence, 504 Sixth Street Southeast, following an illness of one day. She was a native of the District.

A daughter of the late Charles E. and Rebecca Bryan Nelson, Miss Nelson is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Estella Nelson Barnes and Miss Otie R. Nelson, both of this city.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Saturday at her home, followed by interment in Congressional Cemetery.

America's Future Lies in Youth, Hershey Declares

Five hundred volunteer workers, many of them women, this morning will begin a house-to-house canvass designed to raise $100,000 to keep 17,000 Washington boys "off the streets and out of the alleys."

As a prelude to the inauguration of the annual financial campaign of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club, the volunteers met last night at the Willard Hotel, where Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, selective service director, told them that America's future "must lie in the greatest asset we have—namely, our youth."

Hershey paid high tribute to the service which the club renders to the community to the Nation and to the boys themselves after Superintendent Edward J. Kelly of the police department had called the organization's work a "tremendous asset" in the campaign against juvenile delinquency.

Goldsmith Speaks

Maj. Kelly pointed out that members of the police force are barred by regulation from soliciting contributions to the campaign fund while they are on duty, but added that many had volunteered their services during off-duty hours.

His remarks were echoed by Campaign Chairman Ralph Goldsmith, who said that the burden of the campaign this year will fall on the volunteer workers because of the inability of police to take part in the drive while in uniform.

The drive would be rather simple, he said, if workers could only contact 100,000 citizens willing to give $1 each. He predicted $60,000 of the total would come from $1 subscribers, the balance from the contributors of larger amounts.

The campaign will run until March 3, but if the goal has not been reached at that time the drive will be extended until the quota is realized, officials stressed.

Among last night's speakers was Ernest W. Brown, founder of the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club and former police superintendent, who was praised by his successor, Maj. Kelly, for his invaluable work in behalf of the club.

Stresses Physical Fitness

Like the others who spoke, Brown stressed the value of the Boys' Club in preventing juvenile delinquency and turning into paths of useful citizens the lives of many youngsters who otherwise might end up in penitentiaries.

Gen. Hershey, who spoke extemporaneously, recalled that more than one-half of the more than three million men examined under the Selective Service Act had been rejected for physical unfitness and declared:

"Democracies are not aware of the necessity of physical fitness as are other countries with their conscious, systematic methods of youth development.

"The answer to our problems," he said, "lies in such organizations as the Metropolitan Police Boys Club."

Last night's kickoff meeting was interspersed with entertainment, the performers including the Boys Club Band, the Keystone Quartet of Philadelphia, and Perry Martin, WMAL singing star.

Moris Cafritz, president of the club, presided, and introduced Max Farrington, the secretary, Club Director Forrest Binswanger, and campaign director L. Gordon Leech.

During the program, which included several numbers by club members depicting their various activities, it was forcefully developed that the club today maintains five branch units and a summer camp. The club membership has an enrollment of 17,000 boys, 1484 of whom received a two-week outing at camp last summer.

Following the meeting, volunteer workers and club officials enjoyed a buffet supper.

Widow of Army Chaplain Dies

Mrs. Harriet Lowell, 91, widow of Maj. Delmar R. Lowell, chaplain in the United States Army, died yesterday at her home 2838 Twenty-seventh Street Northwest, after a short illness.

Mrs. Lowell had been a resident of Washington for the last 30 years and was active in social and club work.

She is survived by two sons, Maj. Roy D. Lowell, U. S. M. C., and Percival D. Lowell, both of this city, and two daughters, May Lowell, of Washington, and Mrs. Franklin P. Conger, of San Diego, Calif.

Use of Schools As U. S. Offices Is Proposed

Representative Randolph (Democrat) of West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee, yesterday proposed that construction work on 27 priorities-frozen District school buildings be completed with a view to turning over 15 of the structures to the Government for office space.

Twelve of the buildings in the most densely populated areas of Washington might be utilized for student use, he suggested.

Representative Randolph's proposal preceded a statement by Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou before the District education subcommittee to the effect that unless the local school system can obtain new, permanent buildings, temporary structures costing "hundreds of thousands of dollars" will have to be requested.

To Review Requests

"We school people have got to help to train the men who will eventually take part in the war effort," Dr. Ballou declared in a bid for adequate school buildings.

Frank W. Maxton, chief of the project section of the governmental requirements branch, War Production Board, promised that his office would review the requests for building priorities which the schools have been seeking for some time through the District Commissioners.

The most pressing need for new buildings at present is in the Anacostia area where the population has mushroomed in the past two years, Dr. Ballou said.

He objected that the Kramer Junior High School, at Seventeenth and P Streets Southeast, now only 15 per cent completed, had been offered by the Commissioners to the Federal Government for office space without his personal knowledge.

"I'll not be a party with the Commissioners to such a plan," he declared. "I feel it's my duty to provide adequate education for the boys and girls of the District."

He asked Lieut. Col. Beverly Snow, Assistant Engineer Commissioner, what changes are planned in the building and whether he considers it will be suitable for a school building after the Government has finished using it.

Alves Supports Ballou

Col. Snow replied that he believed the building will be suitable for school use when it is converted to school use later.

Supporting Dr. Ballou in his quest for adequate school buildings, H. F. Alves, of the United States Office of Education, stated that his office has recommended the following school projects in the District as necessary due to the increased population.

Six school buildings in the Southeast, one in the Southwest, three in the Northeast, the addition of six classrooms to Woodrow Wilson High School and the construction of a vocational school.

Maxton told Dr. Ballou, "It's not a case of saying that we want to give you in the way of building priorities, it's a matter of the material not being available."

"We have under our responsibility the lives of thousands of children for five hours of the day," said Dr. Ballou. "These children are entitled to safety and an educational program. It's our duty to see that they get it.

"I know that other cities have gotten schools under the priorities system. I don't ask that anything be done in the District that hasn't been done elsewhere. But if it was done elsewhere it should be able to be done here."

Representative Maclora (Democrat) of Connecticut, the subcommittee chairman, declared that adequate school buildings are "essential" to the District.

3 Warren Officers Get Marine Commissions

Temporary promotions of three warrant officers to commissioned rank were announced yesterday by the Marine Corps.

2761 Pupils To Receive Diplomas

Mid-Year Graduation Exercises for D. C. Senior and Junior Highs Begin Today

More than 2700 students will receive certificates of graduation from the District's senior and junior high schools at midyear commencement exercises today and tomorrow.

The senior high schools, graduating 996 seniors, must make way for 1741 junior high school students who will be absorbed into the upper educational division.

Chamberlain Vocational School, the only one of the District's four such institutions to hold midyear exercises, will graduate 24 students Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Robert A. Maurer will preside.

Today's Exercises

Schools which will hold graduation exercises today are listed below with the hour of the ceremonies, the number of graduates and presiding officer:

Senior high schools—Anacostia, 4 p. m., 51 graduates, Dr. Walter E. Hager; Eastern, 10 a. m., 164 graduates, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, and Dunbar, 2 p. m., 62 graduates, Mrs. James W. Williams.

Junior high schools—Anacostia, 1:30 p. m., 66 graduates, Dr. Carroll R. Reed; Eliot, 2 p. m., 106 graduates, Miss Jessie LaSalle; Gordon, 2 p. m., 104 graduates, C. Melvin Sharpe; Hine, 2 p. m., 84 graduates, Jere J. Crane; Jefferson, 8 p. m., 95 graduates, A. W. Heinmiller; Langley, 2 p. m., 88 graduates, Robert L. Haycock; Macfarland, 1:45 p. m., 128 graduates, Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith; Paul, 2 p. m., 150 graduates, A. W. Heinmiller; Stuart, 2 p. m., 97 graduates, Dr. Chester W. Holmes; Taft, 2 p. m., 86 graduates, Lawson J. Cantrell, and these junior high schools for Negroes:

Banneker, 1 p. m., 63 graduates, A. K. Savoy; Browne, 10:30 a. m., 124 graduates, Dr. G. C. Wilkinson; Francis, 10:30 a. m., 62 graduates, Col. West A. Hamilton, and Garnet-Patterson, 2 p. m., 87 graduates, John H. Wilson.

Tomorrow's Graduations

Senior high schools—Coolidge, 3:30 p. m., 47 graduates, T. J. Holmes; Central, 11 a. m., 129 graduates, Dr. Carroll R. Reed; McKinley, 4 p. m., 152 graduates, Charles D. Drayton; Roosevelt, 4:30 p. m., 130 graduates, Dr. James A. Gannon; Western, 1:30 p. m., 70 graduates, Dr. Chester W. Holmes; Woodrow Wilson, 2:30 p. m., 55 graduates, Dr. Frank W. Ballou; Armstrong, 1:30 p. m., 82 graduates, Col. West A. Hamilton, and Cardozo, 2 p. m., 54 graduates, John H. Wilson. In addition to the usual graduates at Cardozo, certificates will be presented to eight students who completed their work during summer school last year and to two others who have completed two-year post-graduate courses.

Junior high schools—Deal, 2 p. m., 107 graduates, Lawson J. Cantrell; Powell, 2 p. m., 84 graduates, Boise L. Bristor; Randall, 10:30 a. m., 90 graduates, Dr. E. L. Clark, and Shaw, 2 p. m., 130 graduates, Mrs. James W. Williams.

Of the 996 senior high school graduates, 198 will come from the Negro schools, and 1195 of the 1741 students to be graduated from the junior high schools will be white students.

Thugs Victimize 5 in Series Of D. C. Robberies

In two daylight robberies which followed three early-morning ones yesterday, a woman storekeeper was punched in the face and a youthful messenger for a photographic firm was attacked by three men, one of them with a knife.

Mrs. Esther Yanowich was alone in a grocery store at 1123 S Street Northwest, she reported, when two Negroes entered, one of them armed with a revolver. One man took $10 from a cash register while the other removed an undetermined amount and a ring from Mrs. Yanowich's purse.

Beset by three Negroes in the 1300 block T Street Northwest, shortly before noon, Edward Chaney, 19, a collector for Fleet Photo Service, was robbed of $10, he told police.

In early-morning robberies, Adolph Reiman, manager of a service station at Ninth and I Streets Northwest, surrendered $15 to two armed white men; Thomas E. Sullivan, 933 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, was attacked by footpads in front of his home, losing $5, and Sue Lee Mungo, Negro, 32, of 615 N Street Northwest, was robbed of $35 after being struck over the head by two men near her home.

2 Hurt When Trailer Truck Throws Them Into Path of Car

NAVY DOCTOR AIDS INJURED PEDESTRIAN—Lieut. L. E. Daily, Navy doctor, administers first aid to Miss Geneva Garver, 34, of 2832 Bladensburg Road, after she was struck by an automobile yesterday near her home

Sideswiped by a hit-and-run trailer truck which threw them into the path of an automobile, two persons were seriously injured last night in the 2800 block Bladensburg Road Northeast.

Miss Geneva Garver, 34, and Aloysius J. Haske, 67, both of 2832 Bladensburg Road Northeast, were given first aid at the scene and removed to Casualty Hospital where they were treated for head and leg injuries.

Police said the couple was crossing Bladensburg Road. The truck knocked them in the path of a car driven by Ellis B. Kirkpatrick, jr., 20, of East Fiverdale, Md. The driver of the trailer truck failed to stop, police said.

James Hatton, 42, Negro, of 713 Smith Row Northwest, was in a critical condition at Casualty Hospital after being struck by an automobile at Second Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest.

Inquiry Opens Today on D. C. War Housing

The House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee will begin hearings today on legislation aimed at giving the District area 50 million dollars for the construction of vast housing projects and public works necessitated by the influx of Federal war workers.

Representative Lanham (Democrat), of Texas, the committee chairman, said that members of the House District Committee and the District Commissioners have been invited to attend the hearing in the committee room at 10 a. m. today.

Two bills, identical in intent, were introduced yesterday by Representative Lanham, following the request of Defense Housing Coordinator Charles Palmer for 50 million dollars to finance immediate construction of aproximately 10,000 homes for war workers.

The proposed legislation, besides providing housing for both families and single Government workers, would allow construction of schools, waterworks, sewers, refuse disposal systems, hospitals, streets and recreation facilities.

Funds would be advanced to the District government by the Federal Works Administration, and the District Commissioners would be required to make an annual report to Congress on the use of the money.

It is provided in one of the bills that the housing "may be sold and disposed of as expeditiously as possible" provided that consideration is given to "its full market value." It expressly forbids transfer of the housing to "any public or private agency organized for slum clearance or to provide subsidized housing for persons of low income."

This measure further states that administrative employes who carry out the program will not be determined on the basis of Civil Service requirements.

The total fund would come from the 300-million-dollar amount of the original Lanham Act, authorizing appropriations for housing of industrial war workers, but not providing any sum for Federal workers in the District area.

Lutherans Do Honor To Dr. Wentz

Tribute Is Paid Head of Gettysburg Seminary at Second Of Unity Functions

Laymen and clergy of five Lutheran bodies in Washington and vicinity last night honored Dr. Abdel Ross Wentz, Ph. D., president of Gettysburg (Pa.) Lutheran Theological Seminary, and were urged to adopt a united front in facing the world crisis.

Before being handed a written testimonial on behalf of local Lutherans by the Rev. Dr. Henry W. Snyder, Dr. Wentz said he "heartily approved" of the unified spirit that dominated the dinner, second such function designed to bring Lutherans closer together. It was held at the Harrington Hotel.

Earlier, Chaplain Paul Dickman, of the Naval Academy, and a cleric of the American Lutheran Synod, said that "the time has come for Lutherans to stand together, if not in actual union, at least in a spirit of unity."

In the same vein Representative Alfred L. Bulwinkle (Democrat), of North Carolina, toastmaster, praised the fraternal spirit of the gathering in a brief message. The legislator, who attends Reformation Lutheran Church on Capital Hill, expressed a wish to become further active in the uniting program and signed a card requesting future unity functions.

Dr. Wentz, who was introduced by Dr. J. Gould Wickey, executive secretary of the Lutheran board of education as "the biggest little man in the Lutheran Church in America and one of the greatest Lutherans in the world," traced Lutheranism's contributions to the building of "the temples of American liberty."

He pointed out that Martin Luther's ideas of the respect of each other's rights had helped design the architecture for "the building;" that "its foundations" had been laid by courageous Lutheran citizens such as the Muhlenberg brothers, and that "its suerstructure" was was erected by the democratic principles that characterize the Lutherans as a group.

At the climax of his address, Dr. Wentz said the duty of Lutherans in this day and age is to be Lutherans, with "positive initiative and courageous convictions."

The Youth A Capella choir of Luther Place Memorial Church sang. The Rev. Theodore P. Fricke, pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church of the Missouri Synod, and the Rev. Theodore P. Fricke, pastor of St. Matthew's Lutheran Church of the American Synod, offered prayers.

Citizens Must Heed Blackout, Camalier Says

Hundreds of citizens attending a civilian defense meeting sponsored by Zone 13 of the Lincoln Park area in Eastern High School last night heard Renah F. Camalier denounce that person who endangers not only his life, but those of others through failure to observe blackout rules and regulations as "worth no more than the powder it would take to blow him to hell."

Camalier, who is counsel for the Senate District Committee, urged the necessity "for awakening the man who stands on the sidelines; the man who scoffs; the man who shows no interest; the man who endangers his own as well as his neighbor's property; the fool who ignores the blackout rules . . ."

From his audience, which included members of several civic associations, the speaker called for volunteers to serve in the auxiliary fire fighting units.

Camalier declared "the greatest obstacle in the way of civilian defense is the fact that we still do not take it in a serious vein. We are still living in the complacency of yesteryear. This type of overconfidence and complacency must be dissipated."

He listed organization, efficient leadership, wholehearted cooperation and the necessity for observing blackout rules and regulations, in that order, as "the foundation upon which has been builded the superstructure of civilian leadership," and complimented the Lincoln Park group upon its successful compliance with the first two requisites.

He warned, however, that the latter two requirements must be met and can be met only through constant effort.

Camalier had words of high praise for those directing civilian defense in Washington, for the police and fire departments, and for our national leaders, and expressed bouyant confidence in the eventual triumph of America's armed forces.

He minimized the comforts which citizens must forego during the war and asked how anyone possibly can complain "when the boys in blue, the boys in khaki, the boys in olive green are giving their lives to preserve our liberties on foreign soil?"

Foreign Group Gifts Raise Red Cross Fund to $236,960

THEY DID THEIR SHARE—Angela Reading and Mary McWhorter helped to raise $5.47 for the Red Cross War Fund by collecting and selling old newspapers. The money was sent with the following letter: "Dear Red Cross: We are sending you this check because we think you need it more than anyone else. Here's how we got the money. Larry Taishoff got the class to join his club to save papers. Nearly all the children brought papers to school. He took the papers to the junk yard and sold them. Then our teacher, Miss Forbes, made out the check. We decided to send it to you. We hope this money will buy things to help you in your work. Yours truly, Third Grade, Ben W. Murch School"

Washington's donations to the Red Cross War Fund, aided by gifts from local Norwegian and Czecho-Slovakian groups, mounted yesterday to $236,960.29 Otto S. Lund, manager of the District Chapter reported.

The Norwegian Ladies Knitting Club gave $100, which was presented to the Red Cross by Mme. W. Munthe de Morgenstierne, wife of the Norwegian Minister, with a note saying that the money represented "our appreciation for all the good the American Red Cross is doing for humanity in this tragic time."

Other donors, and the amounts of their gifts, were:

Czech-American alliance, $100; National Education Association, $314.75; National Home for Jewish Children, $50; Alumnae Association of the Garfield Hospital Nurses Training School, $300; Miss Edith Allen Clark, $500; Daughters of the American Revolution, $374.25; Mrs. J. Edgar Murdock, 2940 Foxhall Road Northwest, $100; and Mrs. Luke I. Wilson, Bethesda, Md., $100.

Out of war funds previously collected, the District chapter reported, 2332 knitted garments and 120 comforts kits, have been forwarded to Army and Navy men at North Atlantic bases, boosting total shipments since December 15 to more than 600 garments and 3375 kits.

Meanwhile Assistant Agriculture Secretary Grover B. Hill, chairman of the Government unit in the war fund drive, announced appointment of these 73 subchairmen who will be in charge of fund collections in the Federal offices here:

Next Blackout Test Soon, Young Asserts

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Commissioner John Russell Young, coordinator of defense for metropolitan Washington, said yesterday he hoped the city's next blackout test could be held soon. Just how soon, he said, depends on what can be done about sirens to sound the warning.

And the trail sirens have left behind them in the District is so winding, so filled with back-tracking and circular loops not even a bloodhound could follow it. Certainly defense officials would rather not talk about it.

Col. Lemuel Bolles, director of the District Defense Council, said he wanted to be getting along with the civilian defense educational program he has started. But, he added, the backwash of criticism from unsuccessful siren tests has been so heavy he did not want to be caught in it again "unless it's absolutely necessary."

Siren Test Considered

Yesterday this information on sirens seemed definite:

Experts at the Bureau of Standards were considering taking some of the models they are testing out of the city about 6 miles and rigging them up in a vicinity where the noises will not bring in complaints.

"We had so many calls we have sort of held up for two or three days," one of them said. "Of course, we would have to build a shack and provide for power—and maybe we won't do it. Taking them out in the country is just an idea."

District Purchasing Agent Roland M. Brennan, who bought the 41 electric sirens which the manufacturers declare cannot be sounded in the manner officials have decided upon, said 23 of the two-horsepower sirens have arrived and been installed.

Only two of the 5-horsepower sirens have arrived—but seven more are on the way. There were to be 18 of them, and Purchasing Agent Brennan is ready for a showdown with the company which promised to deliver them.

"Their chief engineer is coming here tomorrow and we are going to insist on a 'must' delivery date," he said. "They were given priorities last December. There is no excuse for the delay."

Brennan is not purchasing the air horn or steam horns once being considered for the District. What has been decided about them remained with the defense policy committee, of which Lieut. Col. Beverly Snow is chairman. The committee makes recommendations to Commissioner Young.

Col. Snow said yesterday the committee has made various recommendations already and still is working on the siren situation.

Charities Getting Lombard Salary

Youth Gets Life in Triple Killings

By the Associated Press

Washington, Va., Jan. 28.—Thomas Dewey Cameron, jr., 15-year-old mountain boy, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to life imprisonment by Judge J. R. H. Alexander today in the slaying of a merchant, his postmistress wife and their daughter in a robbery at Huntly, Va., to obtain money to redeem a bicycle.

Judge Alexander sentenced the youth after two psychiatrists had testified at the brief morning session that Cameron had the intellect of a boy 10 or 11 years old. The court said, however, that on the basis of the medical testimony it believed the boy was "legally responsible."

Cameron was charged with the slaying of Edward Johnson, 42, Huntly storekeeper; his wife, Sadie, and their daughter, Ethel, 15, last May 20.

Dr. David C. Wilson, professor of neurology and psychiatry in the University of Virginia medical school, testified Cameron was "physically undeveloped" and showed the intellect of an 11-year-old.

Dr. Joseph R. Blalock, superintendent of Southwestern State Hospital, at Marion, Va., where Cameron was under observation from July 23, 1941 until January 13, 1942, testified the boy was sane but was retarded intellectually "four or five years."

Also testifying were Dr. E. W. Brown, Rappahannock County coroner; Sheriff James M. Lillard, and Sergt. C. W. Blue of the State police.

Lillard said the boy told him after his arrest that he wanted money to redeem his bicycle held by his grandfather, Herbert Williams, and that he thought the combination postoffice-store would be a good place.

100 Millions for Purchase Of Raid Equipment Approved

President Roosevelt yesterday approved the act authorizing a one-hundred-million-dollar civilian defense fund to be spent by Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, director of the Office of Civilian Defense for equipment with which to fight air raids.

Congress still must appropriate the funds, first part of which will go for firefighting apparatus. The equipment will be used for training civilian defense classes, as well as for use in any actual raids.

All equipment will remain property of the Federal Government and be allocated to areas designated by the Army as "strategic."

The act makes it unlawful to wear insignia, arm bands or other badges of air-raid wardens, special police and other civilian defense aides without proper authorization. A penalty of $100 or 30 days in jail is stipulated.

Council Requests Dance Volunteers

The Women's Battalion of the District Defense Council would like to have some more volunteers accepting jobs as dance hostesses, Commander Marguerite L. Krenek announced yesterday.

Registrations will be accepted twice weekly at new battalion headquarters, Pennsylvania Avenue and Ninth Street Northwest. On Thursdays the hours to sign up will be from 4 until 9 p. m. and on Saturdays they will be from 1 until 5 p. m. Commander Krenek said registrations could not be accepted at other hours.

More than 6,000 girls have registered for dances held weekly as follows: Tuesday, Fort Belvoir; Wednesday, Fort Belvoir and Fort Meade; Thursday, Fort Belvoir; Friday, Bureau of Printing and Engraving; Saturday, Departmental Auditorium and Fort Belvoir.

Defense Training Film Is Previewed

First of the training films that will be circulated from the District Defense Council to classes throughout the metropolitan area was previewed yesterday at council headquarters, with Col. Lemuel Bolles, defense director, in the audience.

The film demonstrates the ways of fighting a magnesium bomb and graphically illustrates the damage one can inflict. It will be used first in classes for auxiliary firemen.

Stirrup pump, chemical extinguisher and sand bucket methods of fighting bomb-made fires are covered.

Domestics Taught Raid Precautions

Nineteen butlers, maids and cooks yesterday received two hours of air-raid precautions instructions at the defense school operated by the American Women's Voluntary Services at 2170 Florida Avenue.

They learned various blackout methods, how to tape windows, and started on the handling of incendiary bombs. Last half of the course will be given next Wednesday afternoon.

G. W. to Inaugurate 2½-Year Course

George Washington University will speed up its scholastic program to allow students in most departments to complete the regular four-year course in approximately 2½ years because of the war emergency, it was announced yesterday by Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin, president of the university.

In addition to shortening the length of residence for the junior and Columbian colleges, the law school, the school of engineering and the school of medicine also have streamlined their curricula so that technically trained students may be released for defense duties sooner.

Because of the shift in Government work asignments, the time schedules for the evening classes for the second semester have been changed so that regular classes will begin at 6 and 7 p. m.

Dr. Marvin also said the university would attempt to make generous rebates of tuition to students called to miliary service between February 3 and April 15, requiring them to pay only for the actual classes attended. Those leaving school after April 15 may complete their courses by individual study and special examinations.

Petworth Names Defense Leaders

The Petworth Civilian Defense Committee, Kansas Avenue at Upshur Street Northwest, yesterday announced the appointment of committee chairman of the defense area. The appointments are Albert Langerman, speakers' committee; Raymond E. Gable, publicity committee; R. T. Haugh, public meetings, and Mrs. R. C. Woolforth, volunteer participation.

Southeast Wardens Will Meet Today

The first organization meeting of air wardens, Southeast defense area, will be held today at Southeast Settlement House, 4324 Virginia Avenue Southeast, at 8:30 p. m. Speakers will include Capt. L. Clemens, assistant to Col. Lemuel Bolles, in charge of public relations, and Orrin J. Davy, chief deputy warden of the Southeast area.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Gus Lesnevich, the lightheavyweight champion, is badgering Promotor Mike Jacobs for a chance at Joe Louis if he licks Bob Pastor tomorrow evening in their Madison Square Garden affair. Lesnevich thus is showing commendable enterprise in looking beyond the Pastor fight, but the whole history of the prize ring is athwart his ambition to lift Louis' title.

POVICH

The broken hopes of lightheavy champions who aspired to the heavyweight title comprise a thick chapter of prize fighting's log. In the 39 years since the lightheavy division was created, no champion of that class ever graduated to the heavyweight title. They couldn't make it despite the fact they were better lightheavy champs than Lesnevich and were trying to win titles from heavyweights who don't deserve mention in the same exhalation with Louis.

Tommy Loughran, for example, couldn't make it, even as one of the proudest boasts of the lightheavy class at a time when he was fighting the worst heavyweight titleholder in history, Primo Carnera. Primo used his great bulk and his trick of stepping on Loughran's feet with his big brogans to outpoint the clever Tommy.

Exhibit A of the good little men has always been, of course, Bob Fitzsimmons who did win the heavyweight title by knocking out Jim Corbett, but you can win a bet that Fitzsimmons never held the lightheavy title before beating Corbett. Ruby Robert was a mere 167-pounder when he licked Corbett, but he didn't hold the lightheavy title until four years after Jim Jeffries stripped him of the heavyweight crown in 1899.

Promotor Conceives Idea of New Class

There was no lightheavy class when Fitzsimmons was campaigning among the heavies. The division was not created until 1903, and at the time it was the device of Lou Houseman, a Chicago promoter, to get some sort of a title for Jack Root, one of his fighters. Houseman conceived the idea of a weight class for men between the middleweight limit, then set at 158, and the heavyweights who were ruled at the time by the 216-pound Jeffries.

Lightheavyweight Gene Tunney became heavyweight champion, but Tunney was never a full-fledged lightheavy champion. Tunney held merely the American version of the title. The undisputed ruler of the class when Tunney was American champion, was Georges Carpentier, the Frenchman, who had beaten Battling Levinsky. And Carpentier, of course, had his own bitter experience in trying to win the heavyweight crown. There was that four-round affair with Dempsey at Boyle's Thirty Acres in 1921.

The closest any lightheavy champion ever came to lifting the heavy title was, unquestionably, the June night last summer when Billy Conn had a wide lead over Joe Louis in points at the end of 12 rounds. In the thirteenth Conn joined the long list of lightheavies who had tried in vain to win the heavy title. Louis caught up with him and tagged him out in that thirteenth round, you remember.

Even Lesnevich's admirers cannot make the claim that Gus has as good a chance to beat Louis as did Conn. There is nothing fancy about Lesnevich's boxing. He had a time of it beating such as Anton Christoforidis and Tami Mauriello, and in 1940 he was licked by somebody answering to the name of Al Delaney. Conn boxed his ears off the same year. The vision of Lesnevich beating Pastor and qualifying perhaps, for a title fight, should not perturb Louis.

John Henry Only Lasted Round

John Henry Lewis was a pretty good lightheavyweight champion before Conn. He dominated the division so completely, in fact, that there was no lightheavy to give him a match. He built himself up to a 185-pounder and challenged Joe Louis. They fought—for nearly a round, before John Henry was counted out.

The late W. L. (Young Stribling) never won the lightheavy title, but in the late twenties he was probably the slickest of any in his division. He got ideas about winning the heavyweight title from Max Schmeling in 1931, and they did fight. It was at Cleveland. The affair ended in the fifteenth round with Schmeling refusing to take another punch at Stribling and pleading with the referee to stop it. That was a picture of unforgettable memory, and eventually the referee stepped in to save Stribling from further punishment.

Jimmy Braddock was a former lightheavyweight who won the heavy title, but he didn't have the bad luck to hold the lightheavyweight title at any time. That seems to be the worst thing that can happen to a lightheavy with heavyweight ambitions.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Jan. 28.—Quote—unquote:

QUENTIN REYNOLDS (just back from the war)—"Thing I missed most was sports news. Imagine a Brooklynite, and old Brooklyn baseball writer, being caught in Kuibyshev during the first World Series we've had since 1921! Averell Harriman was as upset as I was when we couldn't get a result. When I finally got back to London some weeks ltaer I had a pal of mine in a newspaper office arrange all the series stuff in order, and then sweated through it—wondering what Durocher was going to do next, and sceond guessing him between clippings.

CONSIDINE

"I've never heard anything crazier than this talk of closing down this or that American sport for the duration. We've got to keep our sports. The British found that out pretty quickly. On this last trip there I went to a football match that drew 60,000. Nearly five times that many people had tried to buy tickets for it, and it turned out to be a great lift for the people. I saw the 'darby' when it was run at its new place, too. At least I was there. Nobody ever really 'sees' an English horserace. I think that if we had cut out baseball it would have been as big a blunder as we could make."

• • • •

JOE DiMAGGIO (getting ready to go South)—"I'm lighter than I was last summer. I always lose weight during the winter, and put on maybe 10 or 15 more pounds during the season. I guess it's because I get more exercise during the season, and get hungrier. "I saw a letter a fellow sent you the other day about how much more Ted Williams would have hit if the sacrifice fly was now in effect. I'd say about 10 points more. I think it has taken about 10 points off all hitters.

"My Contract? Mr. Barrow will do all the talking about that."

MIKE JACOBS (returning from a visit to Private J. L. Barrow, at Camp Upton)—"Joe's going to fight for the benefit of the Army Relief Fund at the Garden late in March. Just like he did for the Navy, he's going to give up his entire purse, and I'm going to give my end, too.

"Louis is getting along just fine. The officers say he's getting to be a first class soldier. He never wants anything special; never grumbles about doing anything they ask him to do. I never saw a fighter like that guy. He didn't even want to know who he's going to fight in March. He'll fight anybody. I may put him against the winner of the Pastor-Lesnevich fight, or maybe against Melio Bettina, or big Abe Simon. Anyway, Joe's giving it all away once again. And that won't be the last fight I'm going to stage for the Army and the Navy this year."

EVERETT CROSBY (fresh from the Coast)—"As much as we hated to see that Rose Bowl game leave California, it was the only thing to do at the time. Between the game itself and the parade before the game, those roads get hopelessly choked. It would have been tough trying to move military equipment on them.

"But calling off the horse races was something else. It doesn't make sense. The State and the country lose all that tax money, and the track crowds don't clutter up the roads. Fifteen minutes after the last race, at Santa Anita, no matter how big the crowd is, the roads are practically clear. I'm not beefing because my brother controls one of the coast tracks. If racing were wiped out for keeps on the coast, it wouldn't make any difference to Bing. I just think the ban was too drastic. If England can have races in cities only a few minutes from German bombers, I certainly think we can."

AL BAGGETT (tall coach of the country's tallest basketball team, West Texas State)—"My boys can't run up those hundred-point scores in a game unless they're mighty sore over something. I'll give you a sample. We were dedicating a new gym in a New Mexico oil town and we were due to arrive at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Now, I feed my boys big raw steaks about 3:30 the day of a game. Gives 'em energy. Anyway, to be sure about the steaks, I called up the only restaurant in this little town, long distance, and ordered the steaks. That was all we talked about on the trip over—those steaks.

"Well, sir, we finally got there, tramped in the restaurant and the fellow said, 'What's the name of your team?' It kinda took me back, so I said, 'West Texas State, of course.' Then the fella said, 'Don't hand me that, buddy. West Texas State came in here an hour ago and just got finished with the steak dinner they ordered.'

"Of course it was the team we were supposed to play that night. They snitched our nice steaks. Well, we didn't get much to eat before that game, but we kinda had some energy that night. We walloped 'em 111 to 22."

2000 at Ft. Myer See Bonne Nuit Triumph

Men Defeat Women Team In Jumping

Post-Backed Riders Take 1-Point Lead In Series; Bogley Men's Individual Ace

By Anne Hagner

Brilliant as any of the movie stars that dotted the gallery, Mrs. M. E. Whitney's Bonne Nuit, fenced in great style to win the blue ribbon in the working hunters' class at the President's Birthday Horse Show in the Fort Myer Riding Hall last night before a capacity crowd of nearly 2000.

In what may be his final appearance as a hunter because of an American Horse Shows Association ruling barring the showing of stallions, Mrs. Whitney's gray personality horse was never in better form as he took the stiff course with Norman Haymaker aboard.

In the men vs. women team jumping class, the gentleman riders, sponsored by the Post, earned 12½ faults, just one point less than their fair rivals, to win the blue ribbon for the night's performance. The competition continues tonight and will be judged on the basis of cumulative scores.

Bogley in Lead

On the men's team, Samuel E. Bogley and Ringmaster took an early lead for the defense bond, offered to the low-scoring member by The Post, when they had only two faults over one of the most diabolical courses ever concocted at Fort Myer.

Smacko, Capt. Charles B. McClelland, jr.'s mount, had 4½ markers and Gordon Wright on Lew Dunbar, the New York entry, unexpectedly knocked down a pole. Black Caddy, Lieut. Fred Hughes, jr.'s stallion, had two refusals.

For the ladies, Mrs. Hughes' Hi-Ho turned in a perfect round and Mrs. W. Haggin Perry's Thunder Boy had 1½ faults, but teammates Margaret Cotter and Sara Bosley boosted the score with refusals or run outs.

Hi-Ho Again Triumphs

As diplomatic, society and sporting folk gave out with gasps at every fence, Mrs. Fred J. Hughes, jr's., Hi-Ho came up with a rapid-turning performance that gave her the big silver trophy in the go-as-you-please open jumping class for the third successive year. As in earlier Fort Myer shows for the Infantile Paralysis Fund, Mrs. Hughes' great-hearted mare did what looked virtually impossible over 10 big jumps.

Over several obstacles, Hi-Ho had space for less than a single stride as she and her young owner worked in perfect collaboration. And for the third time the big bowl again was presented by Mrs. Lawrence W. (Chip) Roberts, jr., widely known local horse fancier.

Second to Hi-Ho, whose time was a phenomenal 33 seconds, was Maj. Charles B. McClelland, jr.'s Smacko, with 36 seconds, and a slight margin over Capt. David Wagstaff, jr.'s

Mrs. Whitney Will Sell Her Show String

Movie stars and other celebrities at the President's Birthday Horse Show took a back seat in the news at Fort Myer last night when Mrs. M. E. (Liz) Whitney told friends that, discouraged by a recent American Horse Show ruling barring stallions from the show ring, she will hold a dispersal sale of her entire string except her personal stallion, Bonne Nuit, this spring.

While Bonne Nuit was handing in one of his typically sparkling rounds to win the working hunters' class, Mrs. Whitney declared that the new regulation concerning recognized horse shows has disrupted her plans for the coming year, as she has two other young stallions that she feels are ready for topnotch competition.

"I'm going to give a big show at Llangollen (her 2200-acre farm near Upperville, Va.)," she said "with beautiful trophies and a party for the exhibitors. Afterward I'll hold the sale and get rid of all my show horses except Bonne Nuit and his son, Night Lark, who is a 3-year-old now."

Until then, Mrs. Whitney has her eye on a number of big shows in North Carolina and the deep South where American Horse Show Association rulings are not in effect and where she will be able to exhibit Bonne Nuit in the hunter division.

Night Lark, best 2-year-old at Llangollen last year, has developed into the most promising 3-year-old Manager Norman Haymaker has seen in some time, he said last night.

"I certainly hope that young fellow gets a chance to show, because I know he's going to make a winner," he added.

Landis Returns From Vacation, Ready for Meeting

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 28.—Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis returned today from a Florida vacation and will leave Saturday for New York and the major league meetings February 2-3.

"I had a bully vacation," boomed the 75-year-old executive, apparently fully recovered from a pneumonia attack suffered last fall.

President Will Harridge of the American League also will leave for New York Saturday, while Vice President Harry Grabiner of the Chicago White Sox will depart Friday.

Eagles Beat Orioles, 4-1, In Comeback

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Jan. 28. — Bouncing back from last night's 11-3 pasting by the New York Rovers, the Washington Eagles played surprisingly well tonight to defeat the Baltimore Orioles, 4-1 in an Eastern Amateur Hockey League match.

Les Hickey, with two goals, paced the Eagles' attack that produced goals in every period. Hickey scored his team's first two points. Other Washington scorers were Rollie Bleau and Paul Courteau.

Baltimore, shut out for two periods by Craig McClelland, spoiled the Washington goalie's shutout at 2:41 of the final period, with ancient Eagles' jinx Ned Vitarelli doing the spoiling.

Washington	Position	Baltimore
McClelland	Goal	Roche
Lessard	R.D.	Smith
Burrass	L.D.	Plett
Mundey	Center	Piche
Bleau	R.W.	Koche
Courteau	L.W.	Skinner

Washington spares—McLenahan, Allen, Weaver, McCormack, Ullyot, Thompson, Hickey, Madore. Baltimore spares—Chakowski, McClure, McDougall, Foley, Vitarelli, Bowman, Walsh, Archambault.

First-period scoring: (1) Washington—Hickey (Thompson-Ullyot), 6:00. Penalty—None.

Second-period scoring: (2) Washington—Hickey (Ullyot-McLenahan), 6:40. (3) Washington—Bleau (Mundey), 9:03. Penalty—None

Third-period scoring: (4) Washington—Courteau (Mundey), 0:21. (5) Baltimore—Vitarelli (McDougall), 2:41. Penalty—None.

Skeeters Rally, Beat Sea Gulls, 5-4

River Vale, N. J., Jan. 28 (AP).—The Jersey Skeeters tallied twice in the final period to nose out the Atlantic City Sea Gulls, 5 to 4, tonight in an Eastern Amateur Hockey League game.

The Gulls took a 4-3 lead by scoring three times in the second frame, but the Skeeters came back to tie the game in the fifteenth minute of the final stanza and then snare the victory in the final minute.

Leo Richard paced the Skeeters' attack with two goals and two assists, while Tom Burlington, the circuit's leading scorer, led Atlantic City with a goal and three assists.

Near the close of the second period Ken Terry of the Skeeters and Borden Wheeler of the Gulls were given 20-minute match penalties for fighting.

Yale Team May Get New Coach Soon

By the Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 28.—Yale may get a new football coach for a valentine and put an end to the most protracted sports guessing game played in New Haven since Ducky Pond succeeded Reggie Root as the Eli gridiron mentor eight years ago. The next meeting of the Yale Corporation, which has the final say on the coaching matter, is scheduled for February 14.

Meanwhile the talk among persons who profess to be close to the Yale situation has been to the effect that a "big name" coach will get the job. Lou Little, of Columbia, has been most prominently mentioned, but he is by no means the only one.

Only today the New Haven Journal-Courier reported that the name of Frank Murray, of Virginia, had been added to the list of a half dozen possibilities including, besides Little, Frank Leahy, of Notre Dame; Jim Crowley, of Fordham; Earl Blaik, of Army; Lon Stiner, of Oregon State, and Don Faurot, of Missouri.

Nothing has been said, however, about what means would be used to persuade these men to leave the berths they now hold.

Another group, refusing to believe that Yale will engage a "big name," insists that the job will go to Ivan Williamson, an assistant on the coaching staff for eight years.

The position became open on January 1 with the resignation of Emerson W. "Spike" Nelson who succeeded Pond after the 1940 season. Both in 1940 and 1941 Yale won only one out of eight games.

Army Releases Logan To Naval Program

West Point, N. Y., Jan. 28 (AP).—The Army Athletic Commission announced today that Roland Logan had been released from his contract as West Point team trainer, effective immediately, to serve in the Naval aviation physical training program.

A graduate of Kansas University in 1930, Logan was on the training staffs of Kansas, George Washington and Pittsburgh Universities and the Boston Red Sox baseball club before coming to West Point in 1939.

Lions, on Home Ice, Shut Out Buffalo, 2-0

Goalie Gardnier and Trudel Are Stars Of Battle; Fight Follows Game's End

By Jack Munhall

The Washington Lions last night made their first home appearance since January 11 at Uline Arena, but apparently the vacation from familiar surroundings did them no harm for they accomplished the following important two feats: (1) They beat Buffalo for the first time this season, 2-0, and (2) they scored their first shutout of 1942, with Goalie Pine Gardnier starring.

It was Gardiner's night, from start to finish of an exciting match that built up to the climax of a near-riot immediately after the final buzzer.

Just as the battle ended, Defenseman Leo Lamoureux of Washington, was all for taking apart Winger Bob Gracie, of Buffalo, and the slick-haired Frenchman was restrained by officials only after all the other players and the coaches of both teams were milling on the ice.

Trudel Scores Twice

Just as Gardnier's defensive brilliance was indispensable to Washington's victory, so was the sharp-shooting of lithe, intent Louie Trudel, the swift skating Lions' winger who charged ahead in the American League scoring race by spinning in both Washington goals.

Trudel's first goal came at 12:12 of the first period when, with each team a player shy due to a double penalty, he and Lamoureux collaborated in a dazzling exhibition of passing. Their deft handling of the puck which twice was exchanged between the pair culminated in Trudel's successful whack at the nets from dead center and about 15 feet out. Lamouruex proceeded his teammate through the defense, much as a blocker would clear the gridiron for his ball carrier, cleverly screening the shot.

More than 30 playing minutes then elapsed before Trudel ended the match's scoring with a neat maneuver in which he outsmarted Goalie Claude Bourque, of Buffalo, at 15:31. Bourque, taking a desperate chance, sprang out from the nets to clear a partially deflected shot released by Washington's Walter Zuke.

Trudel Scores

But quick as was Bourque, Trudel was quicker and with the same motion as he reached the rubber ahead of Bourque, so the Washington star lofted it into the unprotected nets.

Erwin McGibbon and Tony Graboski were making their home debuts for the Lions after joining Ching Johnson's team on its Western trip that consumed the time the Ice-Capades were holding forth at Uline Arena. And an impressive first-night it was for the pair of Les Canadiens, on loan.

Both showed exceptional skating speed and dexterious stick handling, while McGibbon came within an ace of scoring a goal just after Trudel's second.

Long Island Beats Texans In Overtime

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 28.—Long Island University, coming from behind in the second half to send the game into overtime, handed West Texas State's elongated basketball team its second defeat of the season tonight with a 58-to-56 decision before a crowd of 18,117 at Madison Square Garden.

Stan Waxman dropped in the winning basket seconds before the overtime period ended. The regulation game closed 51 to 51. The Texans held command until Waxman knotted the count at 45 to 45, with seven minutes to play. The score was tied three more times before the regular play ended.

Half Lead to Texas

With Frank Stockman and 6-foot 10-inch Charley Halbert bearing the brunt of the load, West Texas outscored the locals, 25-21, in the first half. For nine minutes of the second session, the teams matched point for point with Jack Maddox doing the bulk of the West Texas scoring.

The visitors, however, managed to hold to their narrow margin until Waxman crashed through with the fourth of the six field goals he scored. Hank Beenders, who paced Long Island with 14 tallies, sent the home boys ahead for the first time with a minute and a half to go but Charlie Johnson knotted it seconds later to send the fray into overtime.

Maddox High Scorer

With their scoring ace, Price Brookfield, held to nine points, Maddox and Frank Stockman came through with 15 and 13 points, respectively, for the Texans, the latter getting 12 in the last half on 6 shots from the corner. Dick Holub also counted 12 for Long Island.

St. Francis defeated LaSalle, 50 to 34, in the first game for its tenth straight victory.

Central Defeats G. W. High, 32-29, In 3 Overtimes

The longest schoolboy basketball game of the season took place at Central High yesterday when the hosts, after three overtime periods, turned back G. W. High, of Alexandria, 32-29.

Central had its hands full throughout the close game, and in the end it was a dream shot which sent the game into overtime, making the victory possible. Teddy Thomaides connected from back of the midcourt stripe with only five seconds left.

Bethesda-Blair Game Canceled; Western Vs. G. W.

There will be no Bethesda-Blair cage game this week, and perhaps this season, it has been decided by Montgomery County school officials.

Following considerable daubing of paint and breakage of windows by student bodies, officials called off the annual battle, which was scheduled tomorrow night at College Park.

Meanwhile local and nearby fives go into four games today, the feature sending Western's torrid forces against G. W. High in Alexandria at 8 p. m. Afternoon encounters find Georgetown Prep at Wilson, Staunton Military Academy at Episcopal, and St. Albans at Rockville.

Detroit May Join Bradley In New Move

Advocates Some Week-Day Games To Start at 4 P. M.; Against Night Ball

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Jan. 28.—Those American League baseball clubs itching for a whopping wartime schedule of night games should give a thought to some twilight contests and other starting-time changes, the Cleveland Indians suggested today.

Considering public convenience and expressing his heap big fear that unlimitd floodlight carnivals might "kill the goose that laid the golden egg," President Alva Bradley proposed in a letter to League Prexy Will Harridge:

Three Suggestions

Try twilight contests, starting about 6:30 p. m. and finishing before dark under daylight saving time.

Delay weekday games to 4 p. m., giving an extra shift of factory workers a chance to see them; and Advance Saturday hostilities to 2 p. m., which some clubs did last season.

Bradley, content with the present seven home night games a season, suggested his points for discussion at the league's "war meeting" in New York Monday. He isn't alone on the twilight ball business—the Detroit Tigers also are considering it.

Against 14 Games

The Wigwam boss found Cleveland factories operate on eight-hour shifts, changing at 7 a. m., 3 p. m. and 11 p. m. Although "my guess is that the league will permit 14 home night games," Bradley repeated, he's agin' it until a public demand is shown.

"You can't gamble on the weather near the start or end of the season, which means we'd be playing pretty close to 33 per cent night games in the good months," he calculated. "Usually it's 8:45 p. m. before pitch darkness here. Under daylight time we couldn't start until 9:45. It looks as if we will have to move to 9 o'clock and let the players worry about the changing light conditions."

Major League Stars to Attend Umpires' Fete

Clark Griffith, Stanley Harris, Joe Judge, George McQuinn, Sam Rice, Bozie Berger and Bill McGowan have promised to attend while Ossie Bluege, Walter Johnson and Tuffy Leemans are on the might list.

Arch McDonald will be toastmaster. Some 150 sports figures are expected to attend while Vic Gauzza has extended a general invitation to all managers and officials of Sunday and week-day league teams.

Zacatine Captures Hialeah Purse; Market Wise Runs Third

Winner Pays $11.30; Place To Big Ben

Dispose Finishes Fourth; Tufano's Widener Hopeful Gets Slow Start

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 28.—F. J. Buchanan's Zacatine, which had not won a race since last April, and N. S. McCarthy's California invader, Big Ben, both led home Louis Tufano's Widener Handicap hopeful, Market Wise, in the featured Grade B handicap before 10,192 fans here today.

Zacatine, an $11.30 for $2 chance in the field of seven, came from third place in the early running to score by two lengths, running the 6½ furlongs in 1:19 2-5 under a mere 104 pounds. Big Ben saved the place from Market Wise by a half length. King Ranch's Dispose, which won the Flamingo Stakes here last year, was a split choice with Market Wise. Making his seasonal debut, Dispose could not hold an early lead and finished four lengths behind Market Wise.

Market Wise recently opened his 4-year-old campaign here in a 7-furlong dash, finishing fourth. His race today was similar. The colt was very slow to get started and made up a lot of ground, but found the distance too short. He was conceding chunks of weight to his rivals.

Dispose could not shake off Big Ben. Sent down from Columbia, S. C., as he was last season, when known here as the "commuting colt," the son of Dissovery raced head and head with the Californian. It was a suicidal duel. Both horses tired in the final drive as Zacatine, under Apprentice Warren Mehrtens' well-judged ride, came on to score with ease.

New Yorkers Test Bears Here Sunday

The nine-game winning streak of the Lichtman Washington Bears basketball team will meet another formidable test Sunday when the New York Violets will invade Turner's Arena.

The Bears, who are gunning for a berth in the world championship tournament, will feature Dolly King, former Long Island University captain, a newcomer to the team, as well as such veterans as "Tarzan" Cooper, long one of the greatest centers in basketball.

Foremost among the visiting stars will be Jerry Rizzo, one of the big guns of last year's Fordham College team; Bobby Lewis, forward and former captain of New York University, and Ed Sadowski, former Seton Hall standout, whose duel with the Bears' Cooper should be really something to see.

NBA Waives Title Defense For Cochrane

By the Associated Press

Paterson, N. J., Jan. 28.—The National Boxing Association's executive committee announced today through President Abe J. Greene waiver of its six-month title defense rule in the case of Welterweight Champion Freddie (Red Cochrane, of Elizabeth, now in the Navy.

"This is war," said Greene, "and we are in the midst of an emergency. Cochrane entered the service before war was declared and is doing a good job in the duties to which he has been assigned.

"He maintains that the normal ten-day leave which he could have had would have been insufficient to allow him to make a proper defense of the title. And so in deference to his loyalty to the Nation he is now serving, our executive committee has voted him this extension."

Greene said Cochrane has assured the N. B. A. that he would put his title up for competition as soon as he could obtain adequate leave.

Angel Engages Dusek Tonight On Arena Mat

The Original Angel, looked upon as the No. 1 freak or monstrosity of wrestledom, will display his wares tonight at Turner's Arena, meeting Ernie Dusek, the Nebraska Wildcat, in the headline one-hour time limit bout. Ten per cent of the gate receipts will go to the "Mile-of-Dimes" Fund to Fight Infantile Paralysis.

As Maurice Tillet, a Frenchman, The Angel has packed 'em to the rafters in previous trips to the Arena and Promoter Joseph Turner is expecting another jammed house.

Since coming to this country in the fall of 1940, The Angel has proven himself to be the most ballyhooed wrestler since Jimmy Londos came along as champion about 11 years ago.

The Angel is picking no soft touch in Ernie Dusek, for he is regarded as the toughest of the four "Riot Squad" brothers, and hasn't had his shoulders pinned since that night at the ball park three years ago when he dropped a disputed decision to Steve (Crusher) Casey.

Tillet, discovered by Karl Jojello, has a head twice the size of the average man's, a face and body that bear a sharp resemblance to the prehistoric man.

In the two-man team competition, Maurice LaChappelle and Ace Freeman will tackle Herbie Freeman and Stanley Pinto. LaChappelle and Freeman will be greatly outweighed, but, but, as in the past, rely on their mat science and speed to outsmart the bigger boys.

Churchill Downs Donates $50,000 To Red Cross

By the Associated Press

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 28.—Churchill Downs Race Track today donated $50,000 to the American Red Cross.

Acting on a recommendation by Col. Matt J. Winn, president of Churchill Downs-Latonia, Inc., the directors voted to give the money to the Red Cross.

Col. Winn said a check for the $50,000 would be presented to a representative of the Red Cross at the Downs, May 2, the day the Kentucky Derby is run.

The Downs also announced that the racing card for the 19-day spring meet, starting April 25 and ending May 16, would contain all of the stakes of last year's program.

Dear Al:

The hottest apprentice rider around these parts now is Warren Mehrtens, under contract to Max Hirsch. He is a youngster with plenty of ability. Helps the front-runners and rates the come-from-behind horses with the skill of a veteran. I've failed many times in picking apprentices who would carry on as full-fledged jockeys, but this boy appears to have what it takes. It looked like old times the other day when the Eton blue and brown, the racing silks of the Whitney family for generations, were carried to victory here by Paint Pot, a 3-year-old by Halcyon—Smoke Pot. Time was when Whitney 2-year-olds won half of the spring juvenile races at the Bowie meeting and the public made them favorites the first time out. Trainer Don Yates, the Baltimorean, continues to do well hereabouts and is adding horses to his string. Saw Meissen, heralded as the "Marvel of Peru" by West Coast scribes before he was shipped here. The fellow is a long-striding horse and will carry the colors of A. T. Jergins, California oil man who watched him workout. Alsab is coming along in his training. Too bad he may have to meet Walter Haight in the Kentucky Derby. Stevens, Inc., entertained the sports scribes at breakfast the other morning. It was a compliment to the food that some 60 guests got up early and came to the track. William Karrick, veteran trainer, has passed away. He was about 75 years of age and was born in Latonia, Ky. He was once a jockey and his last big job was the conditioning of horses for Mrs. E. Graham Lewis. Don't forget what I wrote about horses with No. 1 post position winning regularly. Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons says he has sold the Blair Stud's Greville to Paul Kelly. Greville is a son of Granville which lost Jockey Jimmy Stout at the start of his Kentucky Derby chance. Bold Venture won that race, if memory serves. Joe Serio and Preston Burch, well-known Maryland trainers, are going good here. But I'm not. BILL.

First race—AKRONTOWN has had some education and appears ready to down a field of this sort. Needs only a share of the racing luck in this bulky group. BIG TALK and GLANCE ABOUT to take care of the others.

Second race—I'm going to take a shot at the moon in this event. DONNAGINA is better than generally rated and could be the right one. CHALLANTE is consistent and dangerous. PATRICIA A. for the minor money.

Third race—THE SWALLOW had all the earmarks of a winner in this sprint for maidens. Likes the route and will have Alfred Robertson to do the booting. ANTICLIMAX and TELL ME MORE to fill out the money circle.

Fourth race—UNKNOWN LAND gets in this light and will have to be caught. I'm going to string along with Trainer Don Yates. TIME SHEET and COUNT MAURICE to account for the other cash positions.

Fifth race—ETERNAL PEACE can race better than shown last out and I'm going to take my chances. BOLD QUESTION and FIRST FIDDLE seem to have something on the others in this sprint.

Sixth race—CITY TALK is tossed in this with a feather and deserves the top ranking. JEZEBEL II likes the route and is a threat. YAWL should close enough ground to take part of the pay.

Seventh race—POMIVA gets my call. Seven furlongs is about right for this mile and all we need is some saddle help. OFF SHORE and FLYING TORPEDO for the place and show awards.

Eighth race—LAJOVA jogged last out and appears capable of repeating today. TRAPEZE ARTIST and WISE HOBBY to get home in front of the others.

Best bet—THE SWALLOW.

Lucy Rose Leads Team to 3 Marks

Lucy Rose and her Rosslyn teammates set three season records in the Ladies' District League last night in a three-game sweep over Arlington, Mrs. Rose broke the old mark by four sticks with a three-game count of 416, while the suburbanites posted a team game of 644 and set of 1800, both high for the year.

Ruby Parry's 354 helped Del Ray to a 2-to-1 edge over Brookland, while Anna Daut bowled 360 for Clarendon, but her team lost two to King Pin.

Jessie Sacrey's 372 was the second best total of the night and featured Lafayette's odd game decision over Ice Palace. Margaret Lynn posted a 355 set for Rendezvous, which whitewashed Arcadia, despite Doris Goodall's 352 for the losers. Convention Hall won two and lost one to Red Circle.

DeChard, Well After Injury, Resumes Drills

Jimmy DeChard, heavyweight fighter forced to the sidelines by an injury two months ago, has resumed training at the Knights of Columbus gym, his manager, Frankie Mann, reported yesterday.

DeChard, who has fought only five professional opponents, hurt his side while training for a meeting with Jay D. Turner. He went through with the fight, however, and won an eight-round decision.

Mann stated that three offers have been made DeChard. Gabe Menendez wants to match him with Herman Weinberg, of Boston, for a headline attraction at Turner's Arena February 17; Matchmaker Sylvan Bass wants to match him against either Gus Dorazio or Lou Brooks for a Baltimore scrap, and Eddie Mead, who is trying to land the matchmaking job at Uline Arena, is also dickering for his services.

Mann will give his fighter another week of training before accepting any offers.

Neville Beech to Train Today at Turner's Arena

As Promoter Joe Turner and his matchmaker, Gabe Menendez, awaited the arrival today of Tiger Neville Beech, the Southern heavyweight fighter, for his ten-round match next Monday night at Turner's Arena, an announcement came from Bill Daley, manager of Lee Savold. Beech's opponent, that Los Angeles has offered his fighter a bout with Max Baer, former champion.

A Savold-Baer bout is being sought for the Navy War Relief late next month, contingent, of course, upon the blond Iowan's showing in several fights the next few weeks. Savold definitely is in the spotlight as a result of his victory in the White Hope Elimination Tournament in Detroit, and Motor City promoters are even drumming up a Joe Louis-Savold match.

Beech, a popular figure in Kansas City, has a chance to land a match there with Bob Pastor, provided he wins from Savold here Monday. Matchmaker Menendez revealed yesterday.

Those who saw Beech whip Jack Marshall and Savold trim the same Marshall in the White Hope tournament, claim that the Southern lad handed the Texan a more severe lacing.

With Beech due for a public drill this afternoon, Savold is expected to report either tomorrow or Saturday.

Dream Comes True

Dear Boss: Miami, Fla.

"Hope long deferred is often bitter sweet in reality"—that's one of the best starts I ever read on a sports story. It was pounded out before my eyes by David J. Walsh in the dusk of an October day at our own Griffith Stadium. It was a few minutes after the last out had been made in the first World Series game ever pitched by that star of stars, Walter Johnson. For years Johnson had pitched polished diamond ball with a cut glass team behind him. With his career ebbing, he finally took the mound in the fall classic only to go down to crushing defeat.

HAIGHT

Down in Miami, I have become acquainted, through Henry Clay, sports editor of the Miami Herald, with a young man of whom it would be fitting to write, "Hope long deferred occasionally is double sweet in reality."

He is a tennis player and a University of Miami graduate. As a freshman he recognized the lack of tennis facilities at the university. The next year he decided to do something about his favorite sport and he began a one-man campaign for tennis courts, handball courts, a basketball court, and intramural facilities. He sought the cooperation of the president of the university but the money was not available.

He finally was graduated and then became amateur coach of the University of Miami tennis team, sending it to a national intercollegiate championship. He deplored the fact that his team did not have a suitable place to practice. He decided to get a tennis stadium and hired architects to draft plans for one of the finest net layouts in the South.

He solicited the aid of a wealthy Miami Beach tennis enthusiast who promised $4000 if he could raise the remaining $6000 needed for a stadium. He did his share the hard way.

In the back of his mind for years had been the staging of a University of Miami Tournament. He decided to conduct such a tournament and apply the profits to the stadium fund. Bobby Riggs, Frank Kovacs, Wayne Sabin and his other friends among the amateurs took part and $956 was raised. Students at the university raised $1200 and contributions from friends, tennis fans and alumni finally put the fund over the top.

With $10,000 in the bank, our hero turned the construction over to a New York expert. However, when a permit to build the stadium was sought it was found that it was against the zoning regulations at the place the university had picked. Another location was found and building was about to get underway when it was found that steel for the stands could not be obtained. But steel or no steel, this fellow wanted a tennis stadium, so he said, "Make it of wood, then."

Today at the University of Miami are five of the finest tennis courts human hands could make. There are stands, too, and a clubhouse that will be furnished next spring, plus handball courts, a basketball court and everything that this young man had in his dream.

Last Sunday, this fellow stood by the canvas-draped fence. The crowd was filing out after watching the finals of the University of Miami championships, which drew a field of the best amateur talent now available.

His dream had become a reality. The University of Miami had its tennis stadium. The championships had been a success. The winner, a man who will be hard to beat in the Nationals this year, scored a brilliant victory over Jack Kramer in the finals.

And the champion of the University of Miami championship was the same fellow who dreamed once of the stadium. He not only created the stadium but he won the tournament he created!

His name—Gardner Mulloy.

REWRITE HAIGHT.

P. S.—Send more money, Boss. That shapely palm tree I referred to yesterday doesn't drink cocoanut milk.

Weary Eagles Host Friday To Johnstown

Coach Redvers Mackenzie's Washington Eagles, fighting mad over their 3 to 11 fall before the New York Rovers Tuesday night, swear there will be no repetition of that performance at Riverside Stadium tomorrow night when they play host to their most consistent conqueror, the Johnstown, Pa., Blue Birds, at 8:30 o'clock.

Third-place Johnstown has proved the Eagles' worst stumbling block thus far this season, having won five games and tied another in seven starts against the champions. Four of these defeats, however, were administered on the tiny Johnstown rink, far short of regulation size.

"You can't well alibi a beating such as New York handed us last Tuesday," Coach Redvers Mackenzie admitted yesterday, "but I will predict that once we have gotten over the hump of our 13-game schedule, in the three weeks at Johnstown Saturday night, we'll show improvement.

"We've not only had little or no rest, but very few practices of recent weeks. Many of our youngsters have played no more than ten games per season as juniors in past years and the killing pace we've been hitting recently has been tough on them."

Daly's Score, 35-12

Daly's Food Store has entrenched its lead in the Washington Boys Club Basketball League with its 35-12 victory over the Boys Club Zips. Johnston and Crandall were stars for the winners.

Enterprise. To make it a clean sweep for Fort Myer entries, the Government-owned Reckless was fourth.

Among the green hunters, another famed Virginia barn took top honors as Col. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh's big 4-year-old, Looter, fenced like a veteran in his initial effort indoors. Aboard him was his former rider, Shirley Payne, who was inducted in the Army last September and is now stationed at Fort Myer.

Second went to Mr. and Mrs. W. Haggin Perry's Ragnarock, who turned back Billy Patch's Indian Boy and Fritz Kleemann's Vos Pex, ridden by Marion Loucks.

Adapting herself to an unfamiliar mount in no time at all, blond Mrs. Perry rode her recently leased 18-hand gelding, Thunder Boy, to victory over 35 excellent leapers in the open jumpers outing. Although she had never ridden the big New York import until Tuesday night, Mrs. Perry did a beautifully timed job of handling in a tough jump-off against the Government's Streamline, with Lieut. Leslie Cross up. A knockdown eliminated Streamline, however, and Thunder Boy received the blue.

Third was Capt. Wagstaff with Enterprise and fourth went to Ruth O'Keefe's honest working hunter Higlo, making his first bid for honors in an open jumping class.

Again Mrs. Perry's colors flashed into the limelight when her mannerly half bred, Hydrogyro, made the kind of performance that hunting folks dream about, in the opening class of the conformation division, nosing out another Perry-owned horse, Ragarock, who took the second ribbon.

Ragarock Second

Hydrogyro, whose principal talent is among the hunters although he has also appeared infrequently in jumper classes, is regarded as one of the steadiest mounts in the show game locally.

Ragarock, who is equally as good a jumper, made a duplication of his great round in the earlier working event when he placed second to Bonne Nuit.

Third went to the Whitney entry, Cherry Bounce, with fourth going to Miss O'Keefe on Higlo.

GREEN HUNTERS—Won by Looter, ch. gelding, owned by Springsbury Farm; second, Ragnarock, bay gelding, owned by Mr. and Mrs. W. Perry; third, Indian Boy, bay gelding, owned by William Patch; fourth, Vos Pex, ch. gelding, owned by F. C. Leeman.

GO-AS-YOU-PLEASE JUMPING—Won by Hi-Ho, c. m., owned by Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Hughes, Jr.; second, Smacko, b. g., owned by Maj. Charles B. [illegible]; third, Enterprise, c. h., owned by Capt. David Wagstaff, Jr.; fourth, Reckless, b. g., owned by United States Government.

THIRD-CLASS WORKING HUNTERS—Won by Bon Nuit, gr. h., owned by Mrs. M. E. Whitney; second, Hydrogyro, bay gelding, owned by Mr. and Mrs. W. Perry; third, Post Meridian, bay gelding, owned by C. M. Lamb; fourth, The Bear, ch. gelding, owned by Mrs. M. E. Whitney.

MEN'S VS. WOMEN'S TEAM JUMPING—Won by men's team (Smacko, Black Caddie, Hangover and New Dumbar); second, women team (Hi-Ho, Rookie, Prince Tex and Thunder Boy).

Finger Printing Required of All Boxing Principals

Every person holding a license in the District of Columbia as a promoter, manager, boxer, or second, must submit to fingerprinting at the Metropolitan Police Department, it was announced yesterday by the local boxing commission.

The new regulation goes into effect immediately. Fingerprint applications are available at the offices of the boxing Commission.

No person will be allowed to appear or work on future boxing cards unless fingerprinted.

Signs With Dodgers

Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 28 (AP).—Tommy Tatum, rookie outfielder of the Brooklyn Dodgers, said today he had signed his 1942 contract and was ready to compete with Pete Reiser, Ernie Padgett, Dixie Walker and other Dodgers for one of the three outfield berths.

St. John's Gains Revenge Over Gonzaga, Winning, 31-26

Johnnies Win On Late Rally But Lead See-Saws In Game at Tech Gym

Sweet revenge for a pair of lickings by Gonzaga last year was enjoyed by St. John's High basketers last night when, with a sturdy last-period stand, they topped their bitterest Catholic Prep rival, 31-26, at Tech gym.

Approximately 2000 of the most enthusiastic fans in the city saw the battle, the first of two the teams will play this year. With their triumph, the Johnnies tossed Catholic Prep League standings into a three-way tie, last night's foes and Georgetown Prep each having won once and lost once.

It was a spurt which won for St. John's last night, coming in the final three minutes of play. But less important spurts were occurring throughout.

The first was staged by Gonzaga after the Cadets had taken a 4-2 lead. A minor spree brought the count to 7-6 favoring the Purple at the end of the first period. Quickly St. John's ran up a 12-7 second-quarter edge, boosted it to 15-9 and held on for a 19-13 margin at halftime.

On foul shots by Bernie Nolan and Ray Fanning, the eventual losers cut that to 19-16 at the start of the second half, but back came the Johnnies to grab a nine-point advantage on baskets by George Hughes, "Sleepy" Thompson and Chuck Dudly. It was Gonzaga's turn then, and it sliced its deficit to 27-24 going into the last stanza.

For four minutes neither team scored. "Bootsy" Lauck finally started things with a perfect set shot and Gonzaga trailed by only 26-27. It was a false hope, however, for Billy Brogan and Dudley hung up two-pointers for St. John's in the last two minutes.

All six players used by the winners help in scoring, Hughes leading with eight points. On the strength of five charity tosses without a miss, Gonzaga's Fanning stole honors, however, with nine points.

Some measure of consolation went to Gonzaga in the preliminary when its junior varsity bounced Johnnie juniors, 35 to 26.

Welch, Fired Last Month, Named Husky Grid Coach

Former Assistant to Jimmy Phelan, Ousted In December, Hired on Year-to-Year Basis

By the Associated Press

Seattle, Jan. 28.—December 13, 1941—Fired. January 28, 1942—Rehired. That's the story of the most recent month and a half in the life of Ralph (Pest) Welch, the big, quiet fellow who today was named to succeed his old boss and coach, Jimmy Phelan, as head football coach at the University of Washington.

Welch was swept off his 12-year tenure as assistant to Phelan last month when Director of Student Activities Ray Eckmann fired both of them, along with Backfield Coach Chester (Cotton) Wilcox.

So it wasn't such a merry Chrismas for the 35-year-old former All-America fullback from Purdue. It looked like he was out of the Washington picture for good.

But the kids who played their first Washington football under Welch, who coached them as freshmen, had something to say.

"If we can't have Jimmy, let's have Pest," was their battle cry, and a committee, led by Center Walter Harrison, buzzed university officials unceasingly in favor of Welch.

Year-to-Year Basis

That their efforts bore fruit was seen in Eckmann's statement that the gridders were among those consulted by a faculty athletic committee before Welch's selection was made.

Welch was hired on a year-to-year basis without a contract, the same arrangement which held for Phelan during the last two seasons of his 12-year stay at Washington.

No salary stipulations were mentioned, although Welch said he had received a slight increase. Phelan had received a reported $9000 a year.

Camilli Conspicuous by His Absence From Club's Confab

Star Stays Home While Other Dodgers Open Salary Talks

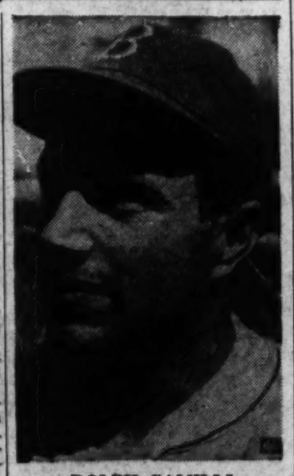
By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Jan. 28.—Apparently the only player of the Brooklyn Dodgers who is not rushing to answer the club's invitation to come here and discuss his contract is Dolph Camilli the man President Larry MacPhail would most like to hear from.

About everyone except the National League's most valuable player has contacted the club since letters were sent last week asking some of the highest salaried stars to come to Brooklyn at the club's expense.

Billy Herman wired today that he would come here this weekend for the New York Baseball Writers' dinner and Whitlow Wyatt telephoned that he would come up from his Georgia farm within a few days. Previously Pee Wee Reese had accepted and Mickey Owen had written he couldn't make the trip because of his wife's illness and that he would be easy to satisfy anyway.

Fred Fitzsimmons and Dixie Walker stayed here during the winter and were not given letters. Arky Vaughan left California before his letter was delivered and now is en route to Florida by auto, and Joe Medwick is expected to arrive here this week in the company of Manager Leo Durocher.



DOLPH CAMILLI

But Camilli still is as silent as a sphinx at his ranch in California. He was believed to have been paid about $15,000 and to want a considerable increase this season.

College Ring Schedule Hits Peak Saturday

College boxing will hit its season's peak Saturday night when Maryland and Catholic University stay home to renew old rivalries with visiting mittmen and Columbus University goes out of town for the second week in a row. The ringmen will be busier than basketball teams of the District schools as midyear exams will keep all but two court squads idle.

BOXING

Virginia at Maryland, varsity, 9:30.

Miami University (Florida) at Catholic University, 8:30 p. m.

Columbus University vs. Lockhaven State Teachers at Lockhaven, Pa.

BASKETBALL

Columbus vs. Potomac State at Keyser, W. Va.

The Cavalier boxers have beaten V. P. I. and North Carolina this season and will be favored over the Old Liners who are batting only .500 in three matches, having beaten Western Maryland, lost to Coast Guard Academy and tied South Carolina in the opener.

Milton Parlow, the grid tackle who towers 6 feet 3 inches, will return to the heavyweight class for the Virginians, while Coach Al York will also have a brother duo to send against Bobby Goldstein's Terps in Kenneth and Norman Rathburn. The former is team captain.

Catholic U. Coach Eddie LaFond was confined to his home yesterday with a heavy cold and two former Card ring stars, Joe Bunsa and Dave Bernstein, took over in preparing the C. U. squad for the battle with the Hurricanes. It will be the second match of the season for Catholic as they tied Lockhaven last week.

Columbus Team Bolstered

Miami will arrive tomorrow night or Saturday morning and will remain over for the Columbus match next Tuesday at Turner's Arena. The outstanding ringman of the visitors is Capt. Red Cameron, semi-finalist in the nationals last year and recent victor over Southwestern Louisiana's national heavyweight champion, Lou Campbell. The Cards' Sneeze Kyscewski, who lost a decision to Cameron last year, will meet his conqueror in the feature bout on Saturday.

Columbus, tied 4-4 by Indiana (Pa.) Teachers last Saturday, will take a strengthened line-up to Lockhaven this week. Coach Jocko Miller expects to make a change or two in the Explorer line-up. His charges came out of the first match in good condition and Charlie Cox, who forfeited to Indiana, expects to make the trip.

Choices Gain Semifinals Of Miami Golf

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Jan. 28.—Three favorites—Louise Suggs, of Lithia Springs, Ga., Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, and Georgia Tainter, of Fargo, N. D.—won their way into the semifinals of the Miami Biltmore Golf Tournament today.

Miss Suggs, who had expected stern opposition from 19-year-old Irene M. Dill, of Detroit, was near the top of her game and scored 6 and 4, while Miss Kirby ousted Sally Sessions, of Muskegon, Mich., 5 and 4.

Miss Tainter experienced only a little more difficulty with Mrs. Charles Harting, of Coral Gables, capturing the match, 4 and 3.

The other semifinal berth went to Mrs. George Wilcox, jr., of Miami, who won 3 and 4 from Mrs. E. G. Livesay, of Miami.

Miss Suggs drew Miss Tainter as her opponent tomorrow, with Miss Kirby meeting Mrs. Wilcox.

The 36-hole final will be played Friday.

Hardy Band of Chinese Organize Own Cage Team Here; Lack of Size Made Up by Speed

Thumbs Up China's guard, Billy Hsaio, leaps for a high one as taller Navy Department players rally around. The Navy finally won the D. C. Recreation League game, 47-29

Thumbs Up Team With 5-Foot 6-Inch Players, Performing in District Recreation League

Long on speed but short on height, the Thumbs Up China team puts its dreams of victory in sheer agility, because its eight 5-foot-6-inch players stand little chance when confronted with such 6-footers as the rugged Navy Department five in the D. C. Recreation League.

Although they were all born in China, the Thumbs Up boys play a thoroughly Americanized game, shooting cleverly and breaking fast at every opportunity. If a big Occidental heaves into view, a small Thumbs Upper can go under as easily as over—but that superior height never ceases to be an advantage. The final score of the young Chinamen's last game proved that—47 to 29 in favor of the Navy.

All of the Orientals have been in America only a few years and most of them came to this country as students; two, as a matter of fact, went to Purdue and took their masters' degrees there.

Now employed in the China Defense Supplies Department of the Purchasing Commission, the Thumbs Up boys find little time to practice and have no coach, but nevertheless are plenty adept at ball handling.

Members are N. C. Liu, captain, and H. H. Ku, high-scoring forward who played fraternity basketball at Purdue; Nelson Ho, Billy Hsiao, David Lee and T. L. Tsui. And, if they meet a few slightly short Americans, they may boost that one won, two lost rating in the league.

Waldorf to Test Regal Soccer Team

Regal Clothiers, unbeaten leaders in the Capital City Soccer League, will meet Waldorf in the feature match of Sunday's two-game card. Regal is the league favorite as Marlboro's defending champions withdrew from competition after seven members enlisted in the services.

Washington British and Maryland will clash in the other match on Gonzaga Field.

Central Boys Take Three Ring Bouts

The Central branch of the Washington Boys Club won three matches of boxing exhibitions held at the Georgetown Branch yesterday. Police B. C. No. 5 and Georgetown each gained two decisions.

Highlight of the matches was Southpaw Billy Nichols' victory over Billy Kalas of the Police Club. Nichols represented Georgetown.

Penn State Triumphs Over Army, 34 to 26

By New York Tribune, Inc.

West Point, N. Y., Jan. 28.—Penn State's basketball team chalked up victory No. 7 here today by outpointing Army 34-26, in a loosely played game.

The Cadets took an early 7-0 lead and were ahead 16-13 at the intermission, but the Nittany Lions started the second half strong and went into a lead they never again gave up. Army made 10 of 44 field goal attempts and missed 11 of 17 foul throws.

Penn State was little better on this score, sinking only 13 of 65 floor shots and eight of 20 tosses from the foul line. Herb Baltimore led the winners with nine points. Jim Philpott tallied 14 for Army.

Little Hoyas Turn Back Devitt, 38-22

Springing to a 22-10 advantage at halftime, the Georgetown Prep five tripped Devitt Prep, 38-22, on the victors' court yesterday. Schneider led the Little Hoyas' scoring with ten points and Showell close behind with nine.

For the losers Center Nino Briscuso was high man with 12 markers, all of them field goals. Glasser and Seitz each earned four for the Devitt cause.

Anacostia High Captures First Victory, 44-26

Anacostia gained its first victory of the season yesterday, defeating Briarly Military Academy, 44-26, on the Anacostia court. The Indians, losers of eight straight, four in Inter-high competition, took command early in the first period and moved into a 12-6 lead at the end of the first quarter.

A two-point margin, gained at the outset of the contest when Winnie Lodge sank the initial basket, marked the only time that the invaders were ahead. The gymnasiumless Marylanders, on the scoring of Lodge and Hardy Reed, were within striking distance throughout the fray.

Lodge sank baskets from all angles to gain top honors in the scoring with 16 points. Paul Benner played his usual smooth game for the Indians and captured the place positions in the scoring with 15 markers.

Hardy Reed, scoreless in the first half, found the range for his mid-court shots in the second act and rang up eight points for the Marylanders. The loss dropped Briarly below the .500 mark with two wins against three setbacks.

Shelley Williams Earns Junior Rifle Award

Shelley Williams, 17-year-old Central High student, has been awarded the second highest junior award of the National Rifle Association, according to an announcement made here yesterday.

Williams averaged better than 80 per cent firing 50 shots from a standing position at a target smaller than the .22 caliber cartridges he was firing. The distance was 50 feet.

The new award is second only to the distinguished rifleman gold bar, for which Williams is now eligible to compete. He passed 13 progressively harder tests before gaining the junior rifle distinction. The District high school student is one of the first contestants in the association's shooting qualification series to win the award this year.

Friends Juniors Beat Woodward

Humphries' Total High, Replates Pin Victors

Jess Humphries' 124-362 helped Replates to turn back Engravers three games in The Post Bowling League at Lucky Strike yesterday and also allowed Replates to gain second place in the standings.

Tony Suess led Proofs to a two-game victory over Street Sales with his 133 game and 338 set.

1941 Dividends On Listed Stock Increase 8.4%

Corporations burdened with higher taxes and rising costs can still pay a satisfactory return to shareholders if industrial output is sufficiently large, the magazine The Exchange, published by the New York Stock Exchange, states in a survey of the 1941 dividend record of listed issues. Payments on listed stocks in 1941 were exceeded only in 1929, 1930 and 1937, the survey finds. Aggregate dividends on common stocks were $2,280,354,000, an increase of 8.4 per cent from 1940 but 16 per cent less than the record 1929 peak. Payments on preferred stocks amounted to $360,367,000, an increase of 9 per cent over 1940. The common dividends were paid on 627 issues and the preferred on 322 issues, the widest distribution in the history of the Exchange.

Reduction Foreseen

The magazine notes that at the year-end the market seemed to show some doubt of continued large dividends in the face of higher taxes and costs as the price-earnings ratio of listed issues moved to the lowest level since 1932.

At the end of 1941 the average yield of all common stocks on the Exchange was 7.6 per cent, and the average yield of the dividend-paying group alone was 9.2 per cent. At the end of the year the dividend-paying group showed yields of less than 3 per cent for only nine issues, while 15 issues sold to yield 20 per cent or more. The largest group was 75 issues, in which the yield was between 7 and 7.9 per cent.

Steel Industry Leads

The biggest dollar increases in common dividends were made by the steel industry, whose payments went from $75,725,000 to $113,364,000; the petroleum companies, from $191,039,000 to $233,371,000; the aviation industry, from $28,574,000 to $47,472,000, and the rails from $143,270,000 to $160,640,000.

Dividends in four industries—public utility, chemical, automobile and petroleum—bulk large in relation to the rest of the stock list, 166 companies in these industries yielding nearly 50 per cent of all common dividends paid.

The 1939-'41 industrial spurt has now outdistanced the 1935-'37 prosperity. Approximately $6,220,000,000 was distributed on listed common stocks in the later period, against $5,790,000,000 at the earlier time.

Bond Sales Accelerate

Representatives from 21 of the 24 associations comprising the District of Columbia Building and Loan League, meeting at the Raleigh Hotel Tuesday heard Wilfred H. Blanz, president, praise the members for the active part they are playing in the distribution of defense bonds.

According to Mr. Blanz, the various groups disposed of more than $800,000 worth of securities to customers up to the middle of December. Following the war declaration the member units began to merchandise the bonds aggressively and succeeded in selling nearly $600,000 worth during the following four weeks for a grand total of $1,395,000.

Th etwelfth annual banquet of the league slated Saturday evening at the Mayflower will attract more than 600 guests, Martin A. Cook, general chairman, said. Reception of officials from Congress, Federal Home Loan Bank and other Government financing agencies will begin the festivities at 6:30 preceding the dinner. J. Hawley Smith, entertainment chairman, said that an "unusual" floor show will be staged followed by dancing.

Extra Compensation

President Guy W. Cox, of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co., of Boston, has announced that an emergency payment will be made to office and clerical employes in the home office and district agencies receiving salaries of less than $5000 a year.

Payments will be made during the second week of March, June, September and December and will amount to one week's pay per quarter, provided that the minimum emergency payment for 1942 shall not be less than $60 and the maximum shall not exceed $200.

Woodrum Named to Board

Clifton Alexander Woodrum, of Roanoke, Va., Representative in Congress since 1923, was elected a director of the National Life Insurance Co., whose home office is in Montpelier, Vt., Mr. Woodrum is a policyholder and was a colleague of Elbert S. Brigham, president of the company, when Mr. Brigham was a Representative from Vermont in Congress.

Virginian Railway Net Drops in Year

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 28 (AP).—Net income of $6,559,710.21 was reported by the Virginian Railway for 1941 in the annual statement released today from the line's headquarters here.

This figure represents earnings of $3.90 per share on common stock, a decrease in comparison with the 1940 net income of $7,281,734.58, and earnings of $4.48 per share.

C. & O. Issue Awarded To Halsey, Stuart & Co.

Cleveland, Jan. 28 (AP).—Halsey, Stuart & Co., of Chicago, was the successful bidder today on a $5,150,000 issue of Chesapeake & Ohio Railway equipment trust certificates.

The C. & O. announced the winning bid was 99.222 for 1¾ per cent obligations, a net interest cost to the railroad of approximately 1.90 per cent. The certificates, to be dated February 15, are payable in ten equal annual installments and will help finance $6,544,784 of new equipment.

Curb 'Laxity' Cited in SEC Plea for More Power

Charging the New York Curb Exchange with laxity in investigating and disciplining its members, the Securities Commission called yesterday for power to "take direct action where all exchange fails to enforce its own safeguarding rule."

This was set out in a 12,000-word report on the SEC's investigation of the so-called Cuppia case which was placed in the record of a Congressional hearing on proposed amendments to the Federal securities laws.

The Cuppia case involves J. Chester Cuppia, one-time partner in the firm of E. A. Pierce & Co. and member of the cur'l's board of governors for eight years. Cuppia was permitted to sell his seat on the exchange after it was disclosed that he had been splitting commissions with six brokers in violation of Curb rules. Several members eventually were expelled from the exchange.

"This case in particular," the commission said, "clearly illustrates the dangers of leaving to an exchange the final determination of whether its practices and rules, their violation or enforcement, affect the public. In the last analysis, such a determination clearly should rest with an impartial and detached Government agency."

Corn Price Ceiling Clamped at 85% of Parity

The Agriculture Department yesterday sought, in effect, to place a price ceiling on corn at about 85 per cent of parity.

Taking cognizance of recent advances in futures markets that carried the price above this level, the department announced that it would use every means at its disposal to stabilize corn and other feed grain prices at around the 85 per cent parity mark.

Such a price is far below the minimum ceilings authorized in the price control bill Congress passed Tuesday and sent to the White House. This measure would not permit the price administrator to establish a ceiling on farm products at less than 110 per cent of parity.

The department said its object was to keep feed prices at a level which would encourage the greatest possible production in livestock, dairy and poultry products, all of which are needed in greatly increased quantities to supply war needs for this country and its Allies.

Recent advances in corn prices were unjustified, the department said, and jeopardized production of livestock, dairy and poultry products.

The department said it would offer Government-owned and grower-loan stocks of corn and wheat to bona fide feeders and processors at prices equivalent to 85 per cent of parity. It hopes this offer will keep feed grain prices from going above this level. It has evidence, the department said, that corn bought from a limited Government sales program was being used for speculative purposes. Future sales will be limited to actual feeders and corn processors.

Burlap-Like Cotton Fabric Sought by U. S.

The War Production Board announced yesterday that the Defense Supplies Corporation would purchase up to 200 million yards of a cotton fabric known as osnaburg, used for sand bags, food bags, various packaging and camouflage.

The osnaburg, similar to burlap, will go into a Government stock pile but will be immediatley available for use when needed, the War Prodution Board said.

"The plan is to get fabric production in a large way as quickly as possible and to give the mills enough business so that they can change over to this product," Frank L. Walton, Chief of the War Production Board textile and fiber section, explained.

The Defense Supplies Corporation will handle the purchasing through its New York office and is now ready to receive bids, Walton added.

January Sales of Defense Bonds at Record Pace

Sales of defense bonds reached $795,088,712 in the first 24 days of January, indicating that the month may set a record of close to one million dollars. The previous record was 534 thousand dollars in December.

The last week of January was expected to be particularly heavy because institutional purchasers usually buy at the end of a month because they get the same interest as if they buy at the first. This type of purchaser is important in January sales because he is likely to buy his maximum yearly quota of $55,000 worth all in that month.

Your Federal Income Tax

By Bureau of Internal Revenue

No. 25—Expense Deductions

Deductions for business expenses form a large item in the return of many taxpayers and must have certain qualities to be allowed. Such deduction must be for an expenditure in connection with the maintenance and operation of the taxpayer's business or business properties; it must be an ordinary expense, and it must be a necessary expense. In insisting upon the latter qualifications, the Bureau of Internal Revenue is upheld by the Board of Tax Appeals and the courts. Ordinary and necessary expenses are only those which are usual and essential in the case of similar taxpyers, "and do not include extraordinary and nonessential expenses."

Typical business expenses of a mercantile establishment are amounts paid for advertising, hire of clerks and other employes, rent, light, heat, water, stationery, stamps, telephone, property insurance and delivery expenses.

The expenses of a manufacturing business include labor, supplies, repairs, light and heat, power, selling cost, administration and other similar charges.

A taxpayer conducting more than one business may claim the business deductions of each.

New York Cotton

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—Cotton futures were knocked off a 12-year high perch today by Secretary of Agriculture Wickard's statement that the Government would frown on advances of "much above parity" for many commodities.

Trade Expects Price Increase In Crude Oil

Tulsa, Okla., Jan. 28 (AP).—There is a growing feeling on the part of some midcontinent oil men that official sanction may soon be given for an increase of 10 to 15 cents a barrel for crude oil.

Present crude oil prices have been pegged by Price Administrator Henderson, pending a survey of costs of production. One source declared that reports from Washington suggested that the crude oil price peg may be moved up a notch or two.

Oil producers have been agitating for higher prices for some months. Under the recent 40-acre spacing ruling and priorities rating for materials, the industry has been urged to extend its search for new reserves as well as conserve supplies of critical materials.

With tire rationing and a halt in production of automobiles, consumer demand for gasoline and lubricants is expected to fall. Offsetting this, however, is the Government's announced synthetic rubber program and the growing demands for aviation gasoline and fuels for defense plants.

Week's Output Jumps

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—United States crude oil production jumped to a daily average of 4,311,300 barrels in the week ended January 24, the American Petroleum Institute reported today, most of the 265,700-barrel increase over the previous week coming from boosted Texas output.

The daily average compared with 3,599,100 barrels in the corresponding week of 1941.

New Haven R. R. Has First Profit In Past Decade

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 28 (AP).—The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad reported today a net income of $6,012,378 for the year ended last December 31—the first time in a decade the system's earnings have overbalanced expenses.

For the year 1940 the New Haven reported a deficit of $2,003,175.

Gross revenues for the year 1941 were listed in the carrier's annual statement as $107,541,356, including $67,409,034 in freight accounts and $30,849,206 in passenger—a 25.8 per cent gain over the previous year.

Operating expenses, including wage increases, were $74,867,757, an increase of 20.4 per cent. After expenses, taxes, equipment and joint facility rents, the report showed a net railway operating income of $16,924,935.

Net income for December alone was $1,344,008 as compared with a net income of $683,802 for December, 1940.

Structural Steel Shipments Gain

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—Structural steel shipments in December gained another 30,000 tons over orders in the month, the American Institute of Steel Construction estimated today, placing total shipments for 1941 at 2,251,089 tons against contracts closed during the year for 2,296,954 tons.

Shipments have exceeded bookings since last August, the institute said. December shipments were 176,126 tons against orders for 146,379 tons.

A backlog of 626,026 tons, scheduled for fabrication during the first four months of 1942, was reported as of December 31, indicating the industry would maintain its present rate of production during that period.

Power Production Off Slightly in Week

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—Electric power production for the week ended January 24 declined .3 of 1 per cent to 3,440,163,000 kilowatt hours from 3,450,468,000 in the preceding week, but rose 14.8 per cent over 2,996,155,000 in the similar period a year ago, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

The drop in output was slightly more than seasonal and the Associated Press index of electric power production declined to 155.4 from 155.5 the previous week. A year ago the figure was 138.5.

Walker Again Heads Va. Life Insurance Co.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 28 (AP).—Stockholders of the Life Insurance Co. of Virginia, at their annual meeting today, reelected Bradford H. Walker, president, and A. Carlton McKenney, first vice president.

Westinghouse Net Climbs to $23,117,510

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 28.—Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. in its annual report today reported 1941 net income increased to $23,117,510 from $18,985,428 in 1940.

This was equal, under the participating provisions of the shares, to $7.21 each on combined 79,974 shares of 7 per cent preferred and 3,126,581 shares of common, and compared with $7.10 each on combined 79,974 shares of preferred and 2,592,155 common in 1940.

A. W. Robertson, chairman of the board, reported that unfilled orders at the end of 1941 jumped to $419,550,645 from $223,685,737 at the end of 1940, a gain of 88 per cent.

Work Subcontracted

Robertson stated that the company had subcontracted work since the start of the national emergency to increase production wherever possible.

More than 300 subcontractors, Robertson said, were engaged in 1941 to make products normally produced by Westinghouse. The value of these orders in 1941 amounted to $18,546,505 and represented 6,400,000 man-hours of labor.

The company's employes, Robertson continued, were buying defense bonds at the rate of $250,000 monthly. The manufacturing concern had on the pay rolls 58,503 workmen at the start of 1942, or about 19,000 more than held jobs with the company at the beginning of 1941.

$1 Dividend Voted

Directors authorized dividends of $1 each on the common and participating preferred stocks, payable March 4 to holders of record February 10. Similar amounts have been paid in preceding quarters.

Net sales billed in 1941 amounted to $369,094,124, an increase of 54 per cent over $239,431,447 in 1940.

Orders received last year stepped up $582,808,634, or 46 per cent ahead of $400,477,724 in 1940. The 1941 figures did not include $30,757,103 worth of orders received by the ordnance plant operated by Westinghouse for the Navy.

New Hearing Called On New Haven Plan

By the Associated Press

The Interstate Commerce Commission ordered new hearings yesterday in the reorganization of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad with a view to promptly reporting a new plan of reorganization for the company.

The commissions reorganization plan was disapproved by the United States District Court of Connecticut in mid-December. The new hearings will be held at Brooklyn, N. Y., starting February 17. Commissioner Charles D. Mahaffie and Examiner Harvey H. Wilkinson will preside.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Jan. 28 (AP).—Corn, rye and soybean prices fell 3 cents or more today, with wheat and oats taking smaller losses, as the war inspired boom in progress in the grain market the past week or so came to an abrupt halt.

A statement by Secretary of Agriculture Wickard calling the "recent speculative advance" in corn unjustified and Government plans to maintain what he called "reasonable feed prices" at around 85 per cent of parity 13 cents below recent 5-year tops in the futures market, touched off the selling.

Buying of mills and other processors as well as dealers who had sold short caused frequent rallies in all lines, recovering almost 3 cents at times, but losses were only partly reduced. Corn finished 3¼ to 3¾ lower than yesterday; May, 86¾@86⅛; July, 88⅝@88½; rye, 4¾ to 4¾ down; May, 88⅜@96⅛; wheat, 2 to 2¼ off; May, 1.30¾@1.30⅞; July, 1.32⅛; oats, ⅞ to ⅞ down; soybeans, 3¾ to 4¼ lower; May, 1.97⅜@1.97¼, and lard 10 to 15 cents per hundredweight lower.

Corn and Rye Break on U. S. Price Ceiling

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 28 (AP).—A war inspired price boom in grains which has been in progress the past week halted today as corn and rye tumbled 5 cents a bushel from five-year peaks. Other grains followed with smaller losses.

Grain men said the Government's desire to assure availability of plenty of feed at reasonable prices for expansion of livestock production to meet wartime requirements under the food for freedom program apparently was the chief factor accounting for the outbreak in selling of corn, which spread to other cereals.

Program Jeopardised

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard asserted "recent speculative advances" in corn jeopardized this program and the Department of Agriculture disclosed steps it was taking to maintain what were considered "reasonable feed prices," including the use of wheat instead of corn for alcohol and feed manufacture.

Through these steps, which also include continuation of the sale of corn it already owns and possibly the calling of loans on that under seal, the Government hopes to hold corn at about 85 per cent of parity in order to stimulate price level, although futures recently had advanced higher.

Wheat Also Slumps

Some selling of rye was associated with purchase of Argentine rye for import in the East but other grains weakened with corn. Wheat was off almost 3 cents at one time, oats 1½ cents and soybeans almost 6 cents, the maximum permitted in one day. Losses were reduced slightly before the close.

The following table of May futures prices shows the recent behavior of the market, with a comparison with the approximate Chicago equivalents of minimum ceilings which could be imposed under the Price Controll Bill:

Stock Market, Weary After 4 Days' Advance, Drifts Backward; Trading Pace Is Sluggish

New York, Jan. 28.—A bit tired after four successive advances, the stock market bowed just enough today to record a small average loss.

Action was faltering and hesitant throughout but at no time did selling reach limits involving more than fractional declines for most dealings. The minus signs were well distributed at the close but in numerous cases final levels were somewhat above the lows and there was a scattering of modest gains.

It seemed as though the market was inclined to disregard the favorable items at hand, including several pleasing

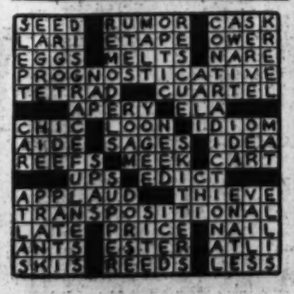
YESTERDAY'S ANSWERS.



Grin and Bear It

By Lichty

"Now you can go back to camp, dear, and tell your sergeant he isn't your boss any more."

Listen! with Glynn

As you've probably noticed already, Edward G. Robinson's radio show is being heard at a new time these days over WJSV and the Columbia network.

The "Big Town" series, in which Robinson portrays the part of a crusading managing editor, something of a far cry from his rather reprehensible movie roles, is now being heard from 9:30 to 10 on Thursday nights, as against an earlier hour on Wednesdays. This is easier on all concerned with the show, since it means that they don't have to do a repeat performance for the West Coast as they have previously.

Robinson is now in his fifth year of portraying, via radio, the hard-hitting newspaperman who vigorously attacks crime in his community. Although there's a continuity in the series, each week a complete story is given and, no matter what the theme, it always moves with the speed of presses rolling off a late edition.

Public service, too, looms large in the series and every year one of the programs is devoted to aiding the national infantile paralysis drive. Tonight's the night for that this year, and the play, by Maxwell Shane and Paul Franklin, is titled "They Also Serve," telling how people can help in the fight again the dread disease.

That isn't all Mr. Robinson has done for the drive, either. He's made a bunch of transcriptions for the cause and they're being played frequently on 500 radio stations.

Hammer Murder

Jury Indicts Brother in Girl's Killing

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS

THE SLAIN Leila Adele Welsh (top) and her brother, George Welsh, indicted yesterday in Kansas City for her murder

By the Associated Press

Kansas City, Jan. 28.—George W. Welsh 2d, her own good-looking brother, was accused today of the shocking hammer-and-knife murder of pretty, 24-year-old Leila Adele Welsh.

The 28-year-old brother quickly pleaded innocent to the county grand jury indictment returned in the real-life detective story crime.

His trial was set for March 9, anniversary of the day their mother found the girl's mutilated body in her bed in the family's southside home. The brother has insisted he was asleep and bludgeoned.

Edgar J. Fleming, uncle of young Welsh and the slain girl, described the indictment as "preposterous."

"This family thought they had suffered the limit of grief from Leila's death," he said, "and this preposterous charge against George, coming on top of it, is almost more than they can bear.

"We feel, too, it closes the door to following up clues and the real solution we have always hoped for."

Montgomery Police Also Get Warrant For Fifth Suspect

Two more men were arrested yesterday by Montgomery County (Md.) police as authorities widened their investigation of the Defense For America Advertising Corporation, whose plan for raising "defense funds" allegedly violated Maryland's lottery laws.

Those arrested, all on charges of promoting a lottery, were:

James Townsend, 2108 Sixteenth Street Northwest, reportedly a British subject.

Bond for the two men was set at $500 each pending hearings in the circuit court at Rockville.

Yesterday's arrests brought to four the number of men who have been taken into custody since Saturday when Corpl. Frank Lane and Policeman Roscoe Purdum confiscated 18 coin collection boxes which allegedly had been placed in various stores and restaurants under auspices of the corporation. Wararnt for another man was issued, but has not been served.

On Saturday, police arrested Thurman R. Rigdon, 49, of Lexington, Ky., who was residing in a Silver Spring hotel and Samuel John Rankin, 29, of the Burlington Hotel, Washington. Both men were charged with operating a lottery and with obtaining money under false pretenses.

At a habeas corpus hearing in Rockville Circuit Court yesterday, Judge Stedman Prescott ordered Rigdon's bond set at $2500. Montgomery County State's Attorney Ben Wilkinson, jr., disclosed at the hearing that Prince Georges County authorities had issued warrants against both Rigdon and Rankin charging them with operating a lottery in that county.

The coin boxes confiscated by police were provided with envelopes containing spaces for the names and addresses of contributors. Signs on the boxes stated that for each 10,000 envelopes, a bond would be given to the person whose name was drawn from the box.

Mrs. Casanova's Funeral Set For Tomorrow

Mrs. Jessie McCausland Casanova, 73, prominent genealogist and Washington clubwoman, died after a long illness, Tuesday, at her home, 7915 Thirteenth Street Northwest.

CASANOVA

Mrs. Casanova a fellow of the Institute of American Genealogy, specialized in the revolutionary war period and was a recognized authority on pensions.

She was a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution and had served in the past as regent of the Livingston Manor Chapter and as State historian for the District of Columbia. She was also an active worker in the Foundry Methodist Church and during the last World War was the captain of its Red Cross unit.

She is survived by her husband, Arturo Y. Casanova; a son, Arturo Y. Casanova, jr.; two grandchildren, Arturo Y. Casanova, 3d and Jean Casanova; a sister, Laura M. Smithers and a brother, Dr. John M. McCausland, all of this city.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. from the W. W. Deal Funeral Home, 4812 Georgia Avenue Northwest, and burial will be in the Rock Creek Cemetery.

Housing Registry Adds Hotel And Transient Files to List

In a move to coordinate "borderline" files with the registry, the hotel clearing house and transient placement division of the Greater National Capital Committee of the Washington Board of Trade has been transferred to the Defense Housing Registry in Post Square, it was announced yesterday.

These "borderline" files include names of landlords willing to rent to either transient or permament guests. Personnel of the registry and the hotel division will remain separate, Russell Schneider, manager of the Greater National Capital Committee, said.

Palmer Urges Conversion

Coincident with the announcement of the shift of the hotel division came a statement from Defense Housing Coordinator Charles F. Palmer urging Washington property owners to "explore every possibility" of converting vacant space into housing units for Government workers coming to Washington.

He pointed out that free technical services are now available through the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to the property owners to determine feasibility and estimate costs of reconditioning and to determine the amount of revenue likely from additional rental units.

"Any owner can apply for these services at the Defense Housing Registry," Palmer said. "There is a pressing need in Washington for family accommodations and there are many older houses which can be reconditioned and converted to provide extra units."

In regard to the hotel situation, Schneider said his committee is making every effort to place in hotels Washington visitors who desire hotel accommodations.

"Each hotel," he said, "reports to the transient registry its situation several times every day. Those hotels which are filled to capacity refer their overflow to the office and the registry staff places the individuals in hotels which have vacancies.

"When all available space in the hotels is used, or for those people who prefer other accommodations, the supply of tourist homes or private homes in which there are rooms available is put into use."

More tourist homes and private homes having rentable rooms on a transient basis are still needed for listing, Schneider said.

Moving of the hotel clearing house and transient placement division of the Greater National Capital Committee from the offices of the Board of Trade to the housing registry places in one building the entire records of both permanent and transient accomodations in the District, Schneider pointed out.

As far as the "tightness" of the hotel situation here is concerned, Schneider said a visitor doesn't have trouble getting a room on a wekend, but that hotels are pretty well crowded on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

The explanation, he said, is that it is on these days principally that persons having business to do with the Government come to town.

Justice Miller Severs Ties With District

Justice Justin Miller, of the United States Court of Appeals here, has severed his connection with the All Souls Memorial Episcopal Church as a result of a Supreme Court ruling on the domiciliary status of Federal employes resident in Washington, it was learned yesterday.

The jurist disclosed that he had resigned his post of vestryman and his membership in the church in order to strengthen his claim to legal residence in Los Angeles, Calif.

Although expressing regret at severing the one community connection he had with the city, Miller said that he could see no alternative course of action in view of the high court ruling.

This decision, which reversed an appelate court opinion written by Justice Miller, held that a Federal employe could not escape payment of District income taxes simply by claiming legal domicile elsewhere. The Supreme Court mentioned that in determining an individual's domiciliary status his connections with "church, clubs, lodges and investments that identify him with the District" should be considered.

Similar connections with the person's home community should also be examined to determine his affiliations there, the decision stated.

The justice and Mrs. Miller are rejoining St. James Church in Los Angeles, where they were members prior to the All Souls affiliation. The justice was named to the vestry of the latter church last year.

The court decision came in the De Hart and Murphy income taxes in which the Court of Appeals had held that by the nature of their employment, Federal employes could escape liability for income taxes here by claiming domicile elsewhere.

Funeral Rites Set Today for E. S. Brashears

Funeral services will be held today at 1:30 p. m. for Edward S. Brashears, 59, Washington attorney who died here Tuesday, at Hamline Methodist Church, Sixteenth and Allison Streets Northwest. Burial will follow in Arlington Cemetery.

Dr. Eugenie Leonard Named Catholic U. Dean of Women

Dr. Eugenie Andruss Leonard has been appointed dean of women of Catholic University, according to an announcement made yesterday by the Most Rev. Joseph Corrigan, rector of the university.

Dr. Leonard, formerly special research coordinator for the guidance and occupational information service of the United States Office of Education, has been a member of the university faculty since 1940. She will continue to direct all activities in the field of guidance at the university as well as functioning as dean of all women students enrolled in the various schools there.

Dr. Leonard has had a distinguished career in the field of education. She obtained her bachelor of arts degree at the University of California and her doctorate in educational psychology and religious education at Columbia University. She held a fellowship in the Laura Spellman Foundation from 1929 to 1930. As dean of women at Syracuse UUniversity from 1930 to 1935, Dr. Leonard initiated and developed the graduate school for training personnel workers. She also served as vice president and dean of women of the San Francisco Junor College until 1938.

Dr. Leonard came here in 1939 from Portland, Oreg., where she gained prominence in initiating a city-wide program of guidance in high schools.

The honor societies with which Dr. Leonard is affiliated include Phi Beta Kappa, Kappa Delta Pi, Pi Lambda Theta and Et Pi Epsilon.
